EVIDENCE OF GIGANTIC NEW ELECTRIC TRUST FOUND

Federal Trade Commission Traces Relation of General Electric to Electric Bond & Share Securities Corporation.

LATTER CONTROLS 15 PCT. OF POWER

Second Largest Utility of Type in U. S.—Largest Is Morgan-Controlled United Corporation — Owen Young Figures in Inquiry.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Evidence tending to show the existence of a gigantic "electric trust," involving an apparent alliance of the most powerful banking and utility groups in the United States, has been uncovered by the Federal Trade Commission in the course of its painstaking investigation of the electric power industry.

In adjourning the inquiry for the summer, the commission this week made public a summary of evidence disclosing the interlocking relationships existing between certain giant corporations, and implying the existence of a business combination, the magnitude of which would stagger the imagination. Inquiry along that line will be resumed in the fall, unless something occurs meantime to reverse the commission's intention.

Power, radio, telephone, telegraph, cable and other forms of public service, together with large manufacturing interests, are all included in the concert of interests suggested by the evidence unearthed by the commission, and by other circumstances already known.

Prior to 1925, the General Electric Co., a manufacturing company, controlled the Electric Bond & Share Co., a holding concern which in turn controlled numerous power companies throughout the country. In that year Senator Norris of Nebraska charged in the Senate that the General Electric was in process of forming a "power trust," and demanded an investigation.

Shift to Bond & Share.

Subsequently, General Electric announced that it had divested itself of control by organizing the Electric Bond & Share Securiites Corporation, the stock of which would be distributed among stockholders of the General Electric, and which would take over the assets of the Electric Bond & Share Co. Two years later the Federal Trade Commission reported that only 31 per cent of the securities corporation stock then remained in the hands of stockholders also interested in General Electric, indicating that neither was any longer controlled by the other.

However, in the recent investigation, the commission learned that the directors of the securities corporation retained the power to issue additional shares of that concern, and reserved the right to choose the individuals who would be permitted to buy them. Since the directors were General Electric men, thi senabled them to insure a continuance of control in "friendly" hands. The commission in its summary points out that there have been large additional issues of securities corporation stock since that time.

Thus far the refusal of the corporation to permit the commission to examine its records has prevented the investigators from comparing the respective lists of stockholders of the General Electric and the securities corporation. Court proceedings are now in progress whereby the commission expects to compell the submission of the records.

Second Largest Producer

Nevertheless, the investigation has proceeded sufficiently to disclose that power companies controlled by the Electric Bond & Share Securities Corporation are now producing more than 15 per cent of the electricity generated in the United States. It is thus the second largest producer in the country.

The largest producer is the United Corporation, controlled by

LAST OF ALLIED TROOPS OUT OF RHINELAND BY TOMORROW

Occupation Second Longest in History—Started in December, 1918—British and U. S. Army First to Leave.

By the Associated Press.

KEHL, Germany, June 28.—French troops left this city today and marched across the bridge to Strasburg, thus bringing one step nearer the general evacuation to be completed Monday.

Officially the occupation of the German bridgeheads and the last zone on the river's left bank came to an end with the final session of the Allied Rhineland Commission at Wiesbaden today, but actually it will be completed only on Monday with the hauling down of the Allied flag from the Commission's headquarters. A company of infantry will render honors.

The military occupation of the Rhineland by the Allies and their associates in the World War, under the treaty of Versailles, was one of the longest in the history of Europe since the 100-year war.

It exceeded in duration the French occupation of the same territory during the revolutionary and Napoleonic wars by a few weeks, but does not equal the occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary, but that occupation was to be permanent under authorization of the Congress of Berlin.

The character of the occupation differed little from any other, except in the nature of the incidents that are always provoked by the presence in any territory of foreign troops. It was accompanied by violent incidents mostly connected with the attempt to set up a separate Rhineland republic, but otherwise caused no particular disturbance in the affairs of the inhabitan's.

The Allied and American armies marched into the Rhineland early in December, 1918. The Americans crossed the Rhine at Coblenz and occupied the historic fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, Dec. 13, while the British crossed at Cologne and the French at Mayence.

The Americans were the first to leave the Rhine. Their continued presence in Germany became problematical when the Senate refused to ratify the Treaty of Versailles. They remained in reduced numbers, however, until Jan. 24. 1923, when, in pursuance to a resolution of the Senate demanding the recall of all the United States forces on the Rhine, the Stars and Stripes were hauled down from the masthead of Ehrenbreitstein, and the last Americans in the occupied area marched to the train homeward bound. They were succeeded by the French troops.

'TOM GREENE' WINS 21-MILE OHIO RIVER PACKET RACE

Cincinnati Boat Beats the Betsy Ann by Three-Quarters of a Mile.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, June 28. — The stern wheeler Tom Greene, Cincinnati owned packet, late today won the 21-mile Ohio River packet race from the Betsy Ann of Pittsburg by at least three-quarters of a mile.

The first half of the race saw the packets struggling for an advantage but neither boat held more than a 25-foot lead during the first 12 miles.

As the racers came in sight of the Cincinnati sky line the Betsy Ann ran afoul of shoal water and her speed was slackened while the Greene's course was held in deeper water and permitted full speed ahead.

The race started at 2:33 p. m., Eastern standard time, and ended at 4:37 p. m.

The Betsy Ann was not in sight of Coney Island, the finishing point at the time the Tom Greene crossed the finishing line.

The Tom Greene's whistles blew continuously during the last quarter of a mile celebrating its victory.

The Betsy Ann received a mighty cheer as it crossed the finish line at 4:44 p. m.

WIFE FINDS FORMER AUDITOR DEAD WITH GAS JETS OPEN

Adolphus C. Tiefenbruch Employed Until Week Ago by Phillips Petroleum Co.

Adolphus C. Tiefenbruch, former auditor of the Phillips Petroleum Co., was found dead from gas in his apartment, 6070 Cates avenue, last night when his wife arrived home from a beauty shop where she is employed.

The wife, Mrs. Viola Tiefenbruch, told police she found all the doors and windows in the apartment closed and four burners on the gas stove turned on but not lighted. Police and employes of the Laclede Gas Light Co. worked on the man with inhalators for an hour but were unable to revive him.

Mrs. Tiefenbruch said she talked with her husband over the telephone at 2:30 yesterday afternoon and he seemed in good spirits at that time. She said he had been employed by the petroleum company until a week ago. Tiefenbruch was 31 years old.

THREE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH AT SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Craft Strikes Railroad Tracks; Two Brothers and Pilot Are Victims.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 28.—Three persons were killed in an airplane crash at the Commercial Airport at 3 o'clock today.

Norman Lawyer, 21 years old, and his brother, Emerson, 23, of Springfield and Pilot S. L. Schoemaker, Cincinnati, O., were killed when their plane struck the Wabash elevated tracks near the airport.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 28.—Airport officials here tonight said that J. F. Shoemaker, killed today in an airplane crash at Springfield, Ill., left Cincinnati this morning on a business trip. He had been flying for the past four years, using his own biplane. Shoemaker was president and manager of the Electric Service Co. of this city.

PRISONERS WILL WEAR PAJAMAS IN NEW REFORMATORY

No Bars and No Outside Walls in Plans for Intermediate Building.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 28.—Pajamas will be used instead of steel bars to deter escapes from the new State intermediate reformatory, when it is completed near Jefferson City, under building plans approved by the State Penal Board and a special advisory committee. There will be no bars in the buildings and no outside wall or fence.

Young prisoners confined in the reformatory will be clad in pajamas and house slippers at all times except when they are working in the reformatory shops and fields. Their clothing and shoes will be taken from them each afternoon when they return from their tasks to the cottage dormitories, to be stored in lockers, and will be reissued to them when they go to their tasks the following morning.

The reformatory will be for first offenders, convicted of felonies, who were between the ages of 17 and 25, when convicted.

Plans for the reformatory have been drawn by Architect William B. Ittner of St. Louis and approved by the Board.

HOOVER GOES TO CAMP, FINDS WIFE IMPROVED

President Gets in Hour of Fishing Before Dark; Hurley in Party.

By the Associated Press.

ORANGE, Va., June 28.—President Hoover sought the cool breeze of his mountain fishing camp today in the first respite he has had in two weeks from the pressing problems that have heaped upon his desk in the last days of Congress.

The chief executive motored to the camp, where Mrs. Hoover has been recuperating for the last several weeks from injuries suffered in a fall at the White House.

Only Secretary of War Hurley and Assistant Secretaries David S. Ingalls of Navy and F. H. Payne of War and his personal physician, Capt. Joel T. Boone, made the trip. The secretaries followed the President with Secret Service men.

The President found Mrs. Hoover better and almost immediately after his arrival hastened to his trout stream for an hour or so of casting before dark. The chief executive planned to be back at the White House late tomorrow.

MAN TRIPS ON GANGWAY AT ALTON YACHT CLUB, DROWNED

James Boyland of St. Louis Falls Into River When Returning to Boat With Brother.

James Boyland, 28 years old, 1445 East Grand avenue, was drowned at Alton last night when he tripped on a stanchion on a gangway at the Alton Yacht Club and fell into the Mississippi River.

Boyland, his brother, Thomas, and several other youths, who had tied their boat at the club dock, were returning to their craft when Boyland fell off the gangway.

He reached out, grabbed his brother and pulled him into the water, but Thomas managed to clamber back to safety. James disappeared from view.

The body was not recovered last night.

TEXAS NEGRO WHO WOUNDED PAIR SLAIN BY POSSE

Killed After Attacking Farmer and Wife at Round Rock in Dispute Over His Wages.

OVERTAKEN ON ROAD TRYING TO ESCAPE

Another Attempt Made to Lynch Prisoner at Beaumont—Accused of Attacking Girls.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., June 28.—Less than an hour after he had shot and wounded Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Egger of Round Rock, near here, Jack Robertson, a Negro, was shot and killed by a posse today. Mr. and Mrs. Egger are in a hospital at Georgetown, Tex., but their wounds are not expected to prove fatal. The shooting was said to have followed an argument over wages due Robertson from Egger.

The Negro was shot by two members of a posse estimated at 150. He had attempted to flee from Round Rock, but was intercepted on the road to Austin, and killed instantly.

Egger and his wife were shot in their residence in the presence of their 14-year-old daughter, Willie Mae, who rant to a neighbor's residence and gave the alarm.

Egger was struck in the head and breast, and Mrs. Egger in the right breast and side.

Negro Suspects Taken Away to Escape Mob.

By the Associated Press.

CONCORD, N. C., June 28.—Seven Negroes held in jail here following an attack yesterday on a 15-year-old white girl, were spirited away from Concord today for safe keeping. Sheriff H. W. Caldwell declined to say where he had taken the men.

Another Attempt to Lynch Texas Negro Repulsed.

By the Associated Press.

BEAUMONT, Tex., June 28.—Extraordinary precautions were taken tonight by Jefferson County officers to guard the county jail against possible renewal of mob attempts to lynch Rainey Williams, a Negro, charged with attacks on white women at Port Arthur.

Sheriff W. W. Covington, who early today repulsed a mob of 100 that came here from Port Arthur and sought to force entrance into the jail, placed a heavy guard around the building to protect the Negro.

Persistent reports reached here that another mob would form tonight for another attempt to seize Williams, who was indicted here today on six counts.

STATE'S ATTORNEY ISSUES REPORT ON LINGLE'S FINANCES

However, No Clew Is Found by the Special Investigator as to Motive for Killing of Reporter.

POLICE PROMOTION RING MENTIONED

Report That Gang Charged $5 a Barrel of Beer for Protection Investigated.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 28.—State's Attorney John A. Swanson today issued a statement giving complete details so far as his investigators have been able to unravel them, of the tangled financial affairs of Alfred J. Lingle, slain reporter of the Chicago Tribune.

Lingle's bank account, showing deposits of large amounts of currency and the issuance of large checks cashed at the race tracks evidently in payment of lost wagers, is fully described in the report, which was presented to Swanson by Assistant State's Attorney Charles F. Rathbun, and was then made public.

The murdered reporters' stock market speculations are detailed, the report showing that Lingle, whose salary on the Tribune was $65 a week, in 1929, ran up a paper profit of $85,000 which then dwindled, during the crash of the market, to $11,000.

Lingle's purchase of a summer home at Long Beach, Ind., the many rumors of his having obtained big loans from politicians, gamblers and friends and other financial features uncovered by investigators are discussed in the report.

Started Inquiry 10 Days Ago.

The prosecutor's sttaement is the first definite report of progress made by the State's Attorney since 10 days ago when he announced the appointment of Rathbun, who is a member of the law firm which is counsel for the Tribune, as Assistant State's Attorney in general charge of the investigation of the murder.

At that time Swanson requested that the newspapers publish only such news concerning the investigation as would be released by his directions, and in compliance with this request, the Tribune has not published news of the murder that might frustrate the work of the State's Attorney.

Rathbun's report states that for obvious reasons as discussion is made of the investigation being considered of clews and leads pertaining to the search for the actual killer or killers of Lingle.

He declares, in the report, that this search is being diligently and earnestly conducted; that by the nature of the crime it should be seen that this work must be conducted in secret, and that success in the task may come soon, or it may take a long time.

Chicago's united law enforcement agencies continues to follow numerous trails in an effort to solve the assassination of Lingle, and to run down resultant charges of an alliance between crime and politics.

Investigators for the State's Attorney said they were examining reports of a "promotion ring" in the Police Department. They have been informed that two leading politicians of the Thirtieth Ward—Lingle's ward—had practical control of police promotions with Lingle as the "man behind the scenes."

It was said a regular scale of fees was charged, $1500 for a sergeantcy, $5000 and up for captaincies.

Further light on these reports was sought by Chief Investigator Pat Roche and Special Assistant State's Attorney Charles Rathbun, a Tribune attorney who called Lieut. Thomas McFarland, former aid to former Chief of Police Russell, for questioning. He denied, they said, having any money dealings with Lingle.

(Assistant State's Attorney Rathbun's report on Lingle's activities will be found on page two.)

Shamrock V. Beaten Again.

HUNTERS QUAY, Scotland, June 28.—The Shamrock V., Sir Thomas Lipton's Challenger for the America's Cup, lost for the second straight time today in a race for big yachts on the Clyde. The Shamrock finished three minutes, 12 seconds behind the Lulworth on corrected times. White Heather was third. Today's defeat was the fourth for the Shamrock V. since it was launched two months ago. It has won a half dozen races against the same yachts.

CHICAGO ENDURANCE FLYERS EXCEED ST. LOUIS ROBIN'S RECORD AT 4:02 A. M. TODAY

Pilots of Sustained Flight Plane

JOHN AND KENNETH HUNTER,

BANKER SHOOTS AND KILLS SELF AT MURPHYSBORO

H. O. Osborn, President of Citizens State and Savings, Was Left Out in Merger Plans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., June 28.—H. O. Osborn, president of the Citizens' State and Savings Bank, ended his life by shooting himself in the head today.

His body was found in a washroom, off the directors' room, by R. J. Hodge, cashier. A note, described as a "farewell" note, was found in a typewriter.

The only motive assigned for Osborn's act was that a bank consolidation, which would probably involve the loss of his position, was imminent. The accounts of the Citizens' depository are in good shape, Hodge said.

Osborn is survived by his wife and two children, a daughter, Hope, 20 years old, and a son, Jack, 17.

6-YEAR-OLD CYCLIST IS KILLED BY AUTO

East St. Louis Boy Is Fatally Hurt; Driver Saw Him Too Late.

Joseph, 6-year-old son of Michael Czopka, 1315 Lake avenue, East St. Louis, was killed by an automobile as he was riding his bicycle in front of 1308 North Ninth street, East St. Louis, last night. His skull was fractured.

The driver, Fred Ceccarini, 20, a shoeworker, 1717 Coleman street, St. Louis, said he did not see the boy until too late to avoid striking him. He was driving at a moderate speed. Ceccarini said. Ceccarini and a companion, Frank Lombardo, 15, of 1511 Carr street, were held for the inquest today.

CLEANERS TRYING TO RE-ESTABLISH $1-A-SUIT SCALE

St. Louis Wholesale and Retail Shop Owners Confer on Plan to Increase Prices.

Wholesale and retail cleaning house proprietors conferred last week on changing conditions held responsible for the present low cleaning prices, which they say have resulted in losses for the last six months.

Prices were cut last October to meet growing competition from concerns in adjacent towns doing a mail order business and from a chain shop organization. The first cut in the price of cleaning and pressing a suit of clothes was from $1.50 to $1. Within several weeks the price had dropped to 75 cents where clothes were called for and delivered, and 50 cents "cash and carry." The 75 and 50 cent prices are now general here.

Recently representatives of the St. Louis Cleaners' Exchange, the reorganized wholesale group of cleaners, announced business at the present rate meant a steady loss of money. The price cut, instead of discouraging the chain store program, caused it to expand.

The Metropolitan Co., a member of the Cleaners' Exchange, and the Tabler Co., an independent wholesale plant, announced plans to establish respective chains of 175 stores. The Lungstras Co., with 76 shops, followed with an announcement that prices could be placed still lower "if necessary."

After considering the probable effects of competition of this sort, leaders of both wholesale and retail groups are said to have suggested a truce to avert what some of them characterized as "a leap into bankruptcy." The industry generally is said to favor a price of $1 for cleaning a suit as fair to both the customer and the cleaner.

AIRMEN, CLOTHING SOAKED WITH OIL, TOIL 5 HOURS TO FIX BROKEN PLUG

Motor Functions Perfectly As Hunter Brothers Near Goal—Mother of Pair in Crowd at Field Awaiting Victory.

"ALL'S WELL," IS WORD FROM PLANE

Will Establish New Mark if Craft Is Still in Air at 5:01 A. M., An Hour Longer Than O'Brine and Jackson.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The pilots of the monoplane, City of Chicago, John and Kenneth Hunter, were on the home stretch of an air race against time and endurance tonight.

The plane completed its one hundred and fifty-fourth refueling at 7:30 p. m. and at 12:40 rounded out its four hundred and seventeenth hour in the air.

At 3:40 p. m. the flyers had rounded out their seventeenth day aloft. At 4:01 a. m. tomorrow the plane, if still aloft, will equal the 420-hour, 21-minute and 30-second refueling record set by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine in the St. Louis Robin at St. Louis, July 31, 1929, and an hour later established a new record of human and mechanical endurance.

Dog-tired by the strain of a 17-day vigil, deafened by the even roar of their motor, the Hunter brothers breathed the cool night air, propped drooping eyelids open and took their turns at the stick.

"All's well. We shall beat the record," they scrawled with trembling pencil, in a note tossed to the ground crew below.

Cabin Sprayed With Hot Oil.

A few hours before it had not been so well. An oil plug, weakened by high pressure, burst and sprayed the cabin with hot oil. Their clothing soaked, the brothers tossed it overboard and toiled in underwear five hours until the break was mended. Then the Big Ben flew overhead, made contact and dropped fuel, fresh clothing and black coffee to the sleepy pilots.

More than once the hazards of human weakness and mechanical mischances have menaced the attainment of the goal. More than once the unfalterilng monotone of the Wright Whirlwind motor lulled the pilot into momentary doze and the ship went careening down, quickly to be caught and righted. For three days a leak in one gas tank has prevented its use and the stick has been strapped in position to keep the side-heavy plane in balance. Today an aching tooth added to the woes of the youngest of the quartet of brothers, Kenneth, 21 years old. Tonight, however, he found relief after medicine had been sent up to him.

The flyers made four contacts with the refueling plane, Big Ben, tonight. On one of these they took on 100 gallons of gasoline and on the other they received oil, food and battery service.

Casey Jones, an official of the Wright Co., said there had been no motor trouble.

Motor Functioning Perfectly.

"The motor has been functioning perfectly," Jones asserted. "If there had been any trouble, the pilots would have told of it in their notes, and they have not mentioned any difficulties."

Close to harbor the ship hovered, droning around a narrow orbit lest some mishap find it too far from port and the mother ship. Down beneath the revolving eye of Sky Harbor's beacon and the rest

DEMOCRATS URGE HIGHER RATES IN VETERANS' RELIEF

Walsh and Connally to Lead Senate Fight for $60-a-Month Maximum Instead of $40 in House Bill.

"PAUPER" CLAUSE IS ELIMINATED

Substitute for Measure Vetoed by President Approved by Committee and Reported for Action.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 28. — The battle over the administrations bill for new relief to World War veterans, passed by the House last Thursday by a vote of 365 to 4, will be resumed in the Senate Monday, when an effort will be made from the Democratic side to increase the scale of allowances from $40 a month maximum, approved by the administration, to $60 a montn.

Dividing on party lines except that King of Utah voted with the Republicans and La Follette of Wisconsin with the Democrats, the Senate Finance Committee today rejected the proposed increase by a vote of 11 to 8. Senator Walsh (Dem.), Massachusetts and Connally (Dem.), Texas, leading the fight for the increase, permitted the bill to be reported to the Senate by unanimous consent, but reserved the right to urge their amendment on the Senate floor.

The rates in the House bill, which bears the name of Congressman Johnson (Rep.), South Dakota, range from $12 a month for 25 per cent disability to $40 for total disability. Under the Walsh-Connally substitute, the range in comparable cases would be from $20 a month to $60. The percentage of compensable disability would be lowered to 10 per cent, which would carry an allowance of $10 a month.

Both proposals are designed to take care of disabilities incurred since the end of the war. Service-connected disabilities are already compensable under existing law at rates up to $100 a month.

Eliminate the Pauper Clause.

The only material change made by the Finance Committee in the House bill was to strike out the so-called pauper clause, which would have limited the benefits of the new law to persons not paying Federal income tax.

"That is just a gesture, it is an affront to every soldier," argued Connally in the commlittee discussion, and his view prevailed. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Director of the Veterans' Bureau, told the committee that "very few cases would be affected by the committee amendment.

Hines estimated that the total cost of the House bill the first year would be $31,555,050, rising in the fiscal year to about $74,500,000. Congressman Johnson, in the House, said the first year cost would be about $50,000,000 and that this would increase after three years to $80,000,000. The initial cost of the bill which the President vetoed, and for which the Johnson bill was substituted, had been estimated by the administration at $102,000,000.

The bill as reported by the Finance Committee retains that 90-day service requirement of the House bill and also the provision that a post war disability, to be compensable, must not be the result of the claimant's "own wilful misconduct." An effort to change the latter provision in the Finance Committee was defeated by a tie vote.

Foresee Defeat for Higher Rates.

Administration leaders predicted tonight that, even though the Senate might adopt the proposed rate increase, it would utimately fail. They were relying upon the House to stand by the administration and kill in conference any material changes which the Senate might make in the Johnson bill.

Publication today of the Finance Committee's hearings on the bill brought to light an interesting discussion of the nature of the measure.

"As to the allowance provided in this bill, it is, to all intents and purposes, a pension, is it not?" asked Cutting, (Rep.), New Mexico.

"Yes," replied Gen. Hines.

"Why do we speak of this as a pension proposition?" asked Shortridge (Rep.), California.

"Because that is what is it," replied Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky. "We call it something else in order not to offend the sensibilities." "It is nothing but a pension," said Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader. "It is not a service pension. It is a disability pension. You can call it a disability allowance if you please or a disability pension." To the suggestion that the rates were too low, the majority leader replied "As this is simply the eginning, we can be sure that ach succeeding Congress will raise these rates."

TEXT OF THE LINGLE REPORT

Lists His Brokerage Accounts and Shows $63,900 Bank Deposits in Three Years

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Lingle report is as follows:

To Hon. John A. Swanson, State's Attorney:

For obvious reasons we are not divulging what steps we have taken and the progress we have made in establishing the identity of the killer or killers of Lingle and then apprehension. But we have reached the point where, so far as the bank accounts and stock transactions of Lingle are concerned, we feel that we have about exhausted the available information which is of record.

In view of the public interest in this crime we are issuing this bulletin to give to State's Attorney Swanson, and through him, to the public a report on what this information shows pertaining to such affairs of Lingle.

It must be remembered that there is always the possibility that there will be new avenues of information from unexpected sources, but so far as our information goes at the present time we have exhausted all sources of record evidence pertaining to Lingle's bank accounts and stock transactions.

Only One Bank Account.

So far as we can find at the present time Lingle had but one bank account and that was in the Lake Shore Trust & Savings Bank.

This account had been in existence for a number of years previous to Lingle's death.

Analyzing the account we have gone back as far as Jan. 1, 1928. His deposits from month to month run from $100 to as high as $5000 from 1928 down to the date of his death. In the year 1928 he deposited $26,500 and the largest amount deposited at any one time was $2000 and the smallest amount was $100. There are deposits in each month of the year except January, February and March.

In 1929 he deposited a total of $25,100, the largest deposit being $5000 and the smallest deposit being $300.

We known from the records that the $5000 deposit came from one of his stock accounts and excluding this deposit the largest deposit during that year was $2500.

In the year 1930 up to the time of his death he deposited the sum of $12,300. The largest deposit in this year was $3000 made on June 3, and the smallest deposit was $200. In the year 1929 he made deposits each month of the year except February, May and August. In the years 1930 he made deposits each month of the year except April. Every one of these deposits in each of the three years was in the form of currency.

Many Checks at Tracks.

Certain withdrawals were made from his stock accounts which will be pointed out later, but none of these withdrawals appears to have any relation to the deposits referred to, except the deposit of $5000 on Nov. 21, 1929, which has been heretofore mentioned.

Insofar as checks drawn on this bank account are concerned an analysis shows that the major part of the money deposited was withdrawn upon checks of three classes: First, checks which show from their endorsement that they were cashed at a race track; second, checks which show from their endorsement that they were cashed at dog tracks; and third, counter checks which are checks made out at the bank immediately before, and upon which, cash is drawn.

In 1928 there was drawn out of this account on checks running from $100 to $500 each in amount, approximately $8000, which were race track checks. There was drawn out approximately $2300 in amounts varying from $200 to $400 on dog track checks. There was drawn out on counter checks about $3800 in amounts ranging from $20 up to $500.

In the year 1929, there was drawn out on race track checks $5300 on checks ranging from $300 to $700. There was drawn out on dog track checks $200, this being in one check, and the only dog track check in this year. There was drawn out on counter checks $11,600 in amounts ranging from $200 up to $4000.

In the year 1930, there were three race track checks of $500 each, by which $1500 was drawn out. There was one dog track check for $100. There were no counter checks.

The total, therefore, on these three classes of checks for the year 1928 is $14,370, for the year 1929, $17,100, and for 1930 $1600.

$500 to Police Captain.

The balance of the monies in the account was paid out to the Long Beach Co. to pay for a home that he had recently purchased at Long Beach, Ind., to brokers and various other persons whose names have no significance except in one instance, so far as we have learned, and which names appear upon a list of the checks drawn which we are attaching to this report.

"The amount paid to brokers during the three years was $1500. The amount paid to the Long Beach Co. from this account, by checks was $6000.

"The one instance regarded as significant, and referred to above, is a check for $500 payable to cash, drawn by Lingle, bearing the endorsement of Police Captain Daniel Gilbert.

Captain Gilbert states that during a conversation with another friend and Lingle who were complaining of the market conditions he, Gilbert, mentioned he was unable to pay an insurance premium then due, and that Lingle insisted upon loaning him the $500 before he left. Gilbert used it to pay the insurance. This check bears the endorsement of an insurance company.

Insofar as our information goes there is no reason for questioning the story of the police captain in this respect.

The only large check among these items not contained in the three classes mentioned above is a check dated March 9, 1929, for $2000 to the H. L. Motor Co., which our information tells us was a payment on account of a Lincoln automobile which was purchased at a price of about $5100, $2000 being the initial payment, together with a $500 allowance on an old car and the balance was paid in cash upon delivery.

Five Brokerage Accounts.

We have exhausted all the information at hand pertaining to the location of accounts covering transactions in stocks and bonds, and have located five accounts in which it appears that Lingle had the sole ownership or a partial ownership.

The first account was started on Nov. 26, 1928, at Jackson Bros., Boesel & Co. This account appears to have been carried on the broker's books anonymously as "Number 49 Account."

However, our information is that it was an account in which equal interests were shared by Lingle and William F. Russell, who was then Commissioner of Police.

This account shows that the following deposits were made: Nov. 26, 1928, a check of W. F. Russell in the amount of $4315.50; a check of Nov. 30, 1928, for $15,000 (the description of this check we have been unable to obtain thus far but the bank in which it was deposited is investigating and will attempt to obtain a description of the check); Dec. 14, a check for $5000, which is being checked by the same bank as the last mentioned check, and a check for $4318.38, being issued by the Jackson firm to W. F. Russell, which apparently was done in order to adjust the account so that the deposits would amount to an even $20,000.

The evidence is that Lingle and Russell were interested equally in this account and started with this $20,000 deposit. Thereafter, beginning in January, 1929, purchases were made of Simmons, National Cash Register, and Sinclair stocks, which purchases amounted to a total of 800 shares. These shares were held through the crash in the stock market.

$30,748 Stock Deficit.

We have advised with experts and they give us the date of Sept. 20, 1929, as the peak date as far as paper profits were concerned in stock speculations in these various accounts, and we use this date as the basis for giving the paper profits, if any.

Using that date, the Jackson Bros. account showed a paper profit of $23,696.84 if it had been closed out on Sept. 30. After the market crash these stocks went down and on June 26, 1930, the condition of this account showed a loss of $50,850.09. On June 26, 1930, there was a debit balance shown on this account of $78,248.35. The value of the stocks on June 26, was $47,500, and if sold out on June 26, there would be a deficit in the account of $30,748.35. There were never any withdrawals from this account after the balance of $20,000 was struck.

The next account was one at Lamson Bros. & Co., started in the name of Alfred Lingle on Feb. 1, 1929, with a deposit of $5000 in currency and this account is still open. Simmons, Allegheny Corporation and Chicago Corporation were the principal stocks dealt in in this account and as much as 1000 shares of some of those stocks were dealt in.

Deposits in Account.

The deposits in this account were as follows: March 6, 1929, $5000 in currency; March 25, 1929, $10,000 represented by a transfer of funds from the account of William F. Russell at this same house, of which Russell says $5000 was paid back, although it does not appear in this account. April 15, 1929, $5000 in currency.

Oct. 25, $2000 represented by a check of one Louis Liebling, a restaurant keeper, who gave the check at the request of one Jimmie Mondi, inasmuch as Lingle requested a loan of this amount from Mondi, and Mondi not having the money, obtained the check in this manner from Liebling and Mondi afterwards paid the money back to Liebling and Lingle has not yet paid Mondi.

Oct. 25, $2500 by check signed by Federal Diamond Brokers and payable to William Donovan and indorsed by Donovan and Lingle and banked by Lamson Bros.

Thus far we have no information as to the identity of Willian Donovan. This makes a total of deposits of $29,500 in this account.

There were no withdrawals from this account at any time.

$74,132 Paper Profit.

Taking the peak date of Sept. 20, 1929, this account showed a paper profit of $74,132.25, which could have been realized on that date.

At the time of Lingle's death there was a loss on these stocks including interest and dividends of $39,991.83 and there is now a debit balance of $10,491.83. Deducting from this the value of the stocks now on hand, amounting to $375, leaves a deficit in this account of $10,116.83.

This credit balance was drawn out on Nov. 20, 1929, in a check issued to Lingle. This check was cashed and from the proceeds was made the $5000 deposit appearing in his deposits in the Lake Shore Bank under date of Nov. 21, 1929.

The next account is an account started on Dec. 5, 1929, at Stein, Alstrin & Co., by a deposit of $2000 in currency. This account is in the name of Lingle. Through this account he dealt in Simmons, Midwest, Utility & Texas Corporation stocks.

The other deposits in this account are $3000 in currency on Feb. 13, 1930; $4000 in currency on March 11, 1930; and $2500 in currency on April 2, 1930, making a total of $11,500.

An Accomodation Item.

Another item in this Stein, Alstrin & Co. account was a deposit of 100 shares of Majestic Household Utilities stock at a value of $5848 on April 17, 1930. The item is purely a wash or accomodation item, and represents neither a gain or loss to Lingle.

It arose in this fashion: J. L. Maloney, Assistant City Editor of the Tribune, had quite some time prior to April 17, 1930, contracted to purchase 100 shares of this stock at $25 a share. Before the time for payment arrived the stock had increased in value to $58 a share, representing a profit to Maloney of $3311.

Knowing that Lingle had an active trading account with Stein, Alstrin & Co. Maloney arranged with Lingle to pay on Maloney's account the $2500 purchase price of the stock and immediately to sell it, through Lingle's account, for $5850. This was done and Lingle procured a check from Stein, Alstrin & Co. payable to Lingle, in the sum of $3311 and endorsed it to Maloney, who deposited it in his own bank account at Flossmoor.

There were two other withdrawals from this account, one under date of March 11, 1930, in the sum of $2,182.68 and in the form of a transfer of funds from this account to an account in the name of Daniels Sisters, on May 6, 1930, a check for $1000 was issued by Stein, Alstrin & Co. to Lingle and endorsed by Lingle and this check was cashed at the Union Bank of Chicago.

We can obtain no information as to what was done with the proceeds. The total withdrawals from this account were $8,993.68. Adding to the $5,848 in Majestic stock the sum of $11,500 representing deposits in cash makes the total deposits $17,348. Deducting from this latter amount the total withdrawals of $8,993.68 leaves $8,354.32 as the net amount in cash and stocks deposited in this account.

There were no profits in this account, paper or otherwise, and the loss on that account as of June 26, 1930, is $5,237.11. The present value of the stocks in this account is $14,000.

The account now shows a debit balance of $10,882.79 which leaves an equity of $3,117.21 remaining. Of course, these debit balance items include interest, commissions, etc.

Daniels Sisters' Account.

The account referred to as Daniels Sisters which came into extent at the Stein-Alstrin offices on Dec. 9, 1929, is referred to because Linge guaranteed the account and apparently had an interest in it. The youth having furnished moneys or credit in the account.

Our information shows that deposits were made in this account by Lingle as follows: Dec. 9, $3000 in currency; Dec. 21, $1500 by a check of Lingle drawn on the Lake Shore Bank, payable to Stein, Alstrin & Co., and this item appears upon the checks drawn on the Lake Shore Bank account under date of Dec. 20, 1929; Dec. 24, $2000 in currency, and March 11, 1930, $2,182.08, which represents a transfer of funds from Lingle's account with Stein, Alstrin, making a total in deposits of $8,682.88.

On March 11, 1930, the date of the transfer of funds, there was a net loss in this account of $8,682.68, resulting from the purchase and sale of Simmons, and Radio stock and apparently Lingle made the transfer of $2,182.08 on March 11, 1930, to balance the account.

On March 26, 1930, this account shows a purchase of 500 shares of Simmons at 48½, which 500 shares were sold on April 2, 1930, at 49¾. There was a stock dividend after this by which three shares of Simmons came into the account, which shares are still on hand. There is a credit balance in the account as of June 26, 1930, of $487.53 and the three dividend shares of Simmons.

From an analysis of these stock accounts it appears that upon the peak day, Sept. 20, 1929, Lingle had a net paper profit of approximately $85,000 in all of these accounts. It further appears that Lingle's total losses on stock transactions in all of these accounts, brought down to date, was approximately $75,000.

Summary of Deposits.

To summarize the deposits, there was a total deposit in the Lamson Bros. account of $29,500; in the Sinclair acount the net deposit was $4245, being made up of $10,000 deposited and $5755 withdrawn.

In the Stein, Alstrin account, there was $11,500 in currency deposited together with the Majestic Household stock, amounting to $5848, a total of $17,348, and there was withdrawn $8993.68, making net deposits of $8354.32.

In the Jackson Brothers account there was a deposit of $10,000 and nothing was withdrawn. This shows total net deposits of $52,099, all of which sum has been lost plus the amounts still due brokers amounting to about $22,000.

No Conclusion in Source.

As to the source of the moneys put up by Lingle in these stock accounts and deposited by him in his bank account, we have thus far been able to come to no conclusion, except as indicated in the accounts. There have been many rumors as to where he obtained these moneys, but no man has ever been successfully prosecuted on a rumor alone, nor has the solution of any crime been reached by hastily giving credit to rumors.

In the short time we have been working upon this investigation, we have had brought to our attention rumors reflecting upon men in nearly all walks of life. Many rumors that have come to us, all of which have been carefully investigated, have failed of substantiation. We have by no means completed the investigation of the source of Lingle's funds and do not propose to abandon it until we have exhausted every means of achieving a solution.

Among the rumors are many to the effect that persons, some of them in public life, have loaned Lingle at different times large sums of money. Since they are no more than rumors, we will only mention at this time loans that we have been able to obtain evidence to substantiate, or have obtained a denial from the party involved.

Alderman Berthold A. Cronson admits that on Aug. 20, 1929, he loaned Lingle $5000 and no part of it has been repaid. He states that the loan was a pure friendship proposition, and was advanced upon the plea of Lingle that he wanted to use it in connection with his mother's treatment in Sacred Heart Sanitarium in Milwaukee.

$300 From Police Officer.

Major Carlos Ames admits that in latter part of January, 1930, he loaned Lingle $2500 and that in the month of May Lingle paid him $1000 and still owes $1500.

Major Ames states that this loan was a purely personal affair, and that Lingle's excuse for borrowing from him was that he was being pressed because of market losses and needed it to cover transactions upon the market.

Police Lieutenant Thomas McFarland admits that during October, 1929, he loaned $300 to Lingle. Lieut. McFarland insists that this loan was a purely personal affair, he having been a close personal friend of Lingle's for many years.

These are the only persons who admitted loaning money to Lingle among the ones referred to in the numerous rumors that have been received by us.

Samuel A. Ettelson could not be reached personally, but persons apparently authorized to speak for him have denied to us that he ever loaned Lingle any money at any time, but that he had a custom of giving Lingle some small remembrance at Christmas time like a box of cigars and a $50 merchandise certificate for Lingle's wife, which he said he did with other reporters on other newspapers, and which has been his practice for some time.

To Continue Inquiry.

Sam Hare, owner of the Del's, was rumored to have loaned Lingle as much as $20,000, but denies that he ever loaned Lingle any money, at any time.

So far as these denials are concerned, we have sought information from every source that we have thus far thought available and have not as yet been able to dispute the denials. As is said before, we intend to continue the investigation of these rumors and will give the results of such investigation from time to time.

In view of many rumors that have been circulated, we take this opportunity of making public some of the facts which we have ascertained, but we have not and will not be stampeded by newspapers or any other agencies into giving out the result of our investigation and thus prevent the ultimate conviction of the guilty ones.

In addition to the above it has been rumored that Lingle was interested in a paper called the Scratch Sheet, gotten out in connection with horse racing. One James Flanagan claims that he is the owner of the Scratch Sheet and that Lingle has never had any interest in it.

We have a further rumor that after the crash in the market and in the spring of this year Lingle received some information in connection with Montgomery-Ward stock, and acting upon that, borrowed some $42,000 and is alleged to have told certain persons later that he had actually purchased that much of this stock and that he had borrowed money with which to purchase it from Jimmie Flanagan.

Two Safety Deposit Boxes.

We have been unable to find any account in any broker's office in which Montgomery-Ward stock was ever traded in by Lingle and have been unable to find any such amount of money deposited at any one time or paid in at any one time to any stock broker or to any house dealing in stocks and bonds or otherwise.

Flanagan insists that he never had any transactions with Lingle except that he loaned him $3000 which has never been paid back.

We have through every agency customarily used in such cases made inquiries at all of the banks in the downtown district and some in the outlying districts in search for other bank accounts and especially for safety deposit boxes. The result of this investigation has been the finding of two safety deposit boxes, both in the vaults of Continental Illinois Bank & Trust.

One of the boxes was a small box rented eight or nine years ago. This box has been opened in the presence of representatives of the Attorney General and of our office who found nothing in it except old papers dating back as far as 20 years and of no value, and a list of contents is on file in the office of the Attorney General of the State of Illinois.

"Another box was found in the same bank and was opened at the same time. This other box had been rented in 1928 and when opened was found to contain nothing. These are all of the safety deposit boxes we have been able to find thus far.

$12,000 Jewelry Insurance.

"We have found evidence which indicates that Lingle, in March of 1930, paid insurance premiums on jewelry valued at $12,000.

"The exact location of jewelry in this amount we have not been able to ascertain up to the present time, but we are still investigating.

"It has been fairly well established from responsible persons interviewed that Lingle was in the habit of carrying around his person large sums of cash running into thousands of dollars, at different times.

"At the time of the murder, when the coroner made a search of the body, only $65 in money was found. But it later developed that a reporter on the Tribune previously had taken $4400 in bills of $100 denomination, from one of Lingle's pockets.

This sum later was turned over to Mrs. Lingle by a representative of the Tribune.

In addition to the above items Lingle apparently purchased a rather pretentious home at Long Beach, Ind., some time during the last year. He purchased several lots and a completed house.

We are informed that he has paid in the neighborhood of $16,000 toward the purchase price of these lots and this house.

As pointed out above, Lingle's checks show that out of his bank account he paid $6,000 towards this Long Beach property.

How the balance of the payments paid by him have been made has not been definitely ascertained as to the exact amounts at the present time, but the above astimate of total payments is as accurate as we can state it at this time.

Source of Cash a Mystery.

We have heard from sources fairly reliable that the night before Lingle was murdered he had as much as $9,000 in cash in his possession. The source of this also remains a mystery at the present time.

A great deal is being said in the public press upon the subjects being dealt with in this report, and some of the newspapers are taking the position that there should be great haste in the solution of this crime.

Of course, all are agreed that no time should be lost and so far as our office is concerned, the forces of Mr. Roche and myself are putting in from nine to 16 hours per day upon this case. We are working with all of the diligence and intelligence in our possession to solve this murder.

May Take Long Time.

Assuming that rumors being handed about are true, pertaining to the sources of Lingle's moneys, the reasoning public, we feel, agree with us that persons who might have been responsible for putting Lingle in possession of the moneys that these rumors involved, are not going to walk quickly into the State's Attorney's office and admit their part in such transactions.

We are putting forth every effort to obtain every bit of evidence, no matter how small, touching upon all of these situations, and it can be seen readily that the solution of such a mystery as this, may be the result of the piecing together of large numbers of these bits of information before a solution will be arrived at. It is easy to be seen that such an investigation may take a long time.

On the other hand, it may be solved in a very short time, and it is the hope of everyone connected with this investigation that the latter will be the case. We will guarantee that everybody connected with it will use their utmost diligence and energy in behalf of a solution of the crime, no matter whom the evidence which we may gather may reflect upon.

We do not intend now or in the future to give out any information concerning clews that we may have as to the murder of Lingle. Publication of information concerning clews has in the past and probably will in the future result in making it impossible to apprehend the guilty party.

There has been agitation for immediately taking witnesses before the grand jury and examinging them. What the purpose of such suggestions may be, we can only surmise but in our view any such suggestion at this time unless based upon a full belief that the testimony thus given before a grand jury would result in a conviction of the guilty parties, would be more harmful than beneficial.

Need Evidence First.

The public has observed, in connection with some grand jury investigations, that after witnesses have testified before the Grand Jury it developed that they themselves should have been made defendants and were able to claim immunity from prosecution before the Grand Jury.

The public also may recall many cases of indictments where the defendants have forced the case to trial within the limits provided by law, and the State found itself in a position where it had not in its possession sufficient evidence upon which to proceed and therefore such suits were forced to a dismissal which constituted a bar to further prosecution.

In other words, indicting people on rumors and forcing witnesses before a Grand Jury and with signing immunity waivers, is not a method that will tend to ultimately result in convictions.

The time for a grand jury to act, in our opinion, is when a prosecutor has the evidence in his possession upon which he feels reasonably certain that he can convict.

We will therefore proceed upon this latter basis in this case, and are being governed by a desire for accuracy and effectiveness rather than haste alone.

Rumors make wonderfully interesting reading matter, but poor material upon which to convict criminals. The public may feel sure that all of the persons working in this investigation under State's Attorney Swanson appreciate the seriousness of the crime and accept full responsibility for the part they are now taking in connection with this crime and will fulfill to the best of their abilities their sworn duty, regardless of attempts at intimidation, obstruction or who may be injured by the result of such investigation.

Mother Joins the Crowd.

The mother of the young rec-

anned to sit up all night, confient her sons will attain their goal e told newspaper men she had posed the boys taking up flying said that the townspeople of arta, Ill., had looked upon their flying exploits unfavorably as "a lot of foolishness."

Mrs. Albert Hunter, wife of one of the brothers who have done the refuelling, also came from Sparta tonight to see the finish of the flight. She watched with interest as the contacts were made and showed some anxiety when told that disaster might result if a downward current were encountered as the ships flew so close together.

Wilson Herren of Barrington, Ill., backer of the flight, told the Associated Press he had bought the plane for $8000 when the endurance record was only 172 hours and, before he had a chance to get his project under way, O'Brine and Jackson of St. Louis had forced it up to 420 hours. Herren stated that he had bought a new motor after the failure of the two attempts made with the ship last fall and that this and other outlays had brought his expenditures up to more than $30,000.

William P. McFarand, air governor of Illinois for the National Aeronautical Association, has been checking the flyers since the start at 3:40 p. m. Wednesday, June 11. Major Luke Christopher, chairman of the contest committee of the National Aeronautical Association, the second official observer, was here yesterday and will return tomorrow to continue checking the flight.

Perfect weather prevailed and according to the forecast, will continue good for 48 hours more.

Greetings From Jackson and O'Brine.

The following telegram was received from Dale (Red) Jackson of St. Louis in behalf of himself and Forest O'Brine, present record holders:

"It looks as though you would get the record, go to it and hang up a good one because I am going after it. Regards and congratulations."

Herren thereupon replied to Jackson in another note:

"What record do you want us to hang up. We will set any you ask?"

Special busses and one airplane brought approximately 250 persons up from Sparta today to swell the crowds which watched the flyers. Telegrams came to the brothers from all parts of the world, wishing them luck and making various offers.

A Portland, Ore., dentist wired that, if they'd fly out there, he'd go up and fix Kenneth's tooth and jump back in a parachute. An Omaha firm offered $1 an hour for each hour past the record.

The contacts tonight brought the total to 145.

Worked in Coal Pits to Buy Plane.

Six years ago the Hunters began to dabble with aviation down on their Sparta farm. They worked in the coal pits nearby to earn the wherewithal, then Albert bought a plane and John took an abbreviated instruction course and taught the rest of the family how to fly.

They stunted a while, barnstormed, cracked up a few "crates" and went back to the mines until they could buy another.

John lost his job with the air mail when the Government learned he was trying for endurance records. But the family went ahead with the family steed, called the Chicago—We Will on the unsuccessful try at the St. Louis Robin's title last fall and now renamed the City of Chicago.

FARMER, 71, IS SLAIN; LABORER, 68, ARRESTED

Eugene Frossard Shot in Home Near St. Clair, Mo.—Suspect Caught Here.

Robert C. Pritchett, 68 years old, a laborer of St. Clair, Mo., charged with the murder of Eugene Frossard, 71, a farmer living near St. Clair, was arrested by detectives in a rooming house at 1417 South Vandeventer avenue yesterday and turned over to Franklin County authorities. He denied knowledge of the killing.

On Friday morning neighbors found Frossard's body, with a shotgun wound in the back of the head, near the door of his house, where he lived alone. His clothing apparently had been rifled and neighbors said he was known to carry large amounts of cash.

A warrant charging first degree murder was issued against Pritchett, according to Prosecuting Attorney Anton Tibbe of Union, Mo., after it was reported that Pritchett had borrowed a shotgun from a relative Thursday and was seen buying a ticket for St. Louis Friday morning.

Seeking to trace Pritchett through a son living in St. Louis, detectives learned the son conducted a barber shop in the 4200 block of Manchester avenue. The son, Selby Pritchett, gave his father's address on Vandeventer.

Pritchett is in jail at Union pending a preliminary hearing.

SUSPECTED SLAYER IS FOUND IN PRISON

Earl Reed, Wanted for Policeman's Murder, Traced Through Fingerprints.

Earl Reed, robber and escaped convict under indictment for the murder of Patrolman William McCormack in a cigar store holdup last year, has been found by the finger-print system of the National Bureau of Identification at Washington. Chief of Police Gerk wrote to authorities at Boise, Ida., yesterday, where Reed is serving a prison term of from 10 to 20 years, asking that the man be turned over for immediate trial on the murder charge.

Reed's identity was discovered by the bureau at Washington in its regular routine work. Convicted and sent to prison, his finger prints were forwarded for classification to Washington. There they were compared with the prints of fugitives as are the finger prints of all convicted men. When it was found the prints coincided with those of the man wanted in St. Louis for murdering Patrolman McCormack, the bureau telegraphed Chief Gerk.

Reed, who gave his name in Idaho as Ross, was sentenced recently for his part in the robbery of a bank at Wendell, Ida., June 11. He escaped some time before the murder of Patrolman McCormack, from an Indiana prison farm.

Patrolman McCormack was detailed as a guard at the Ideal Cigar Store, 3908 South Broadway, June 25, 1929, when three men ran into the place to hold it up. One of them shot and killed the policeman, and all escaped in an automobile in which a fourth man was waiting.

Later, on a tip from a woman, William B. Maloney, Albert E. Ware and Joseph Daher were arrested, charged with the robbery and murder. Maloney and Ware confessed, naming Reed as the actual killer. They pleaded guilty and were sentenced to life in the penitentiary. Daher denied complicity in the affair, but was convicted and also sentenced to life imprisonment.

Reed was indicted with his three companions. When he escaped from the Indiana prison farm, he was serving a term for robbery.

Negro Woman Slain in Kirkwood.

Mrs. Vera Bruce, 20 years old, a Negro, was shot and killed yesterday in her home at 731 North Harrison avenue, Kirkwood, by Sheldon Simmons, half brother of her husband. Simmons was held for the Coroner. He said the shooting was accidental.

PRISONERS TO BE SUPERVISED AFTER THEIR RELEASE

Gov. Caulfield Announces New Requirements Worked Out With State Parole Commissioner.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 28.—New requirements for convicts released from the Missouri penitentiary under the seven-twelfths of sentence rule, known as the merit system, which will subject these convicts to supervision and certain conditions of conduct after their release, such as are imposed upon paroled convicts, were announced today by Gov. Caulfield.

The change was ordered by the Governor in a letter to the State Penal Board.

It involves adoption, in part, of suggestions by the Jackson County Federation of Justice and other welfare organizations, for supervision and aid of convicts after they are released from the penitentiary.

The object of the change is not to impose burdensome restrictions upon the released convict, the Governor said, but to bring him under organized supervision and in contact with organizations that will assist him during the period of readjustment between the time of the release and the time when he can find employment and become self-supporting.

Under No Restrictions Now.

Under the present system, the convict released from prison upon expiration of seven-twelfths of his sentence is placed under no conditions or restrictions. Despite the fact that the merit release in effect is a parole, there is no provision for his being returned to prison to serve the remainder of his sentence, if he again violates the law, such as is incorporated in regular paroles.

The State law permits release of convicts after serving three-fourths of sentence, if their behavior is good. The seven-twelfths rule was adopted by the Penal Board, without statutory authority, to permit additional reductions of sentence for good behavior.

The Governor said welfare organizations in Kansas City had been making plans for organized assistance to released convicts to aid them in obtaining employment and in rehabilitating themselves.

Efforts would be made to extend this work to other cities of the State, he said.

To Require Regular Reports.

Conditions to be placed in the merit "paroles," which are being drawn up by Parole Commissioner Dwight Brown, will include requirements as to the released convict's conduct, regular reports to the Prison Board of stipulated periods and designation of a sponsor to be responsible for the ex-convict. Efforts will be made to obtain persons interested in welfare work as sponsor.

The new rule will not be applied to convicts now in the penitentiary, the Governor said, but will be applicable to all convicts entering the penitentiary after July 1. The Governor said he did not consider it fair to apply such a change in the system to convicts soon to be released, who had servide most of their terms under the present system.

"With this change in the system of granting commutation it is expected that plans will be evolved for aid being extended by citizen groups interested in released convicts.

For More Helpful Protection.

Gov. Caulfield, in the letter to the board, said:

"The change grows out of a desire to give better and more helpful protection to men and women leaving the penitentiary while they are readjusting themselves.

"The most trying period for the released convict is immediately after his release. It is during that period that he frequently commits a second offense. It is during that period that one resolved not to again transgress the law has his greatest struggle to re-establish himself in society."

TO GET $150 NOW FOR WATERMELONS EATEN IN 1898

Negro Brothers to Be Paid by U. S. for What Soldiers "Borrowed."

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., June 28.—Eating watermelons in 1898 and paying for them in 1930 may be the special prerogative of the United States Government, but by reason of that fact Warren C. Vesta, Negro janitor of the Federal Building here, and Isaiah Vesta, Negro preacher of Dayton, O., stand to collect $150 they probably never would have seen if the bill had been paid on time.

During the Spanish-American war their father raised fine watermelons. American soldiers partook freely of the melons, but neglected to pay for them.

Recently Government mathematicians, taking into consideration the economic changes of the last 32 years, valued the "borrowed" watermelons at $150. Yesterday the Senate upheld their judgment by authorizing payment of that amount to surviving members of the Vesta family. The House had passed the measure previously and it remains for President Hoover to give his sanction to the watermelon bill.

$100,000 SPENT TO FIND OUT THAT HORSE IS ONLY A NAG

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 28.—A horse named Shannon, which has caused long litigation between Michael Cudahy, meat packer, and John T. Johnson, leather manufacturer, has been adjudged after five years to have been just an ordinary nag.

Court costs estimated at $100,000 have been incurred by the two men over the horse which Circuit Judge August Braun yesterday ruled was worth only $200.

Cudahy sold the horse to his lifelong friend, Johnston, for $1800. That was in 1925. Johnstone said th eohrse was no good and sued Cudahy. In 1927 a jury decided Shannon was worth every cent of the $1800 Johnston paid.

The case was appealed to the State Supreme Court, which decided that Shannon was a "bad actor." The case was remanded to the Circuit Court to settle damages.

Judge Braun's decision holds Shannon was "wild" and had several other faults not to be expected in an $1800 animal. Shannon, therefore, was worth only $200 at the time of sale, the Court decided, ordering Cudahy to pay Johnston back $1600, with interest at 6 per cent for five years.

Both Johnston and Cudahy said the litigation was friendly, being undertaken for "the principle" and to vindicate their judgment of horseflesh.

In the intervening years, Shannon was sold and destroyed.

A nonstop flight from New York to Oakland, Cal., is planned to complete the round-the-world flight of the Southern Cross, Maj. Charles Kingsford-Smith telegraphed the Chamber of Commerce yesterday in response to an invitation to visit St. Louis.

"Much as we regret it," he added, "we are unable to take advantage of your courteous invitation. The crew and I are grateful for your congratulations."

'DUBIOUS FUTURE' FOR STREET CARS, COMMISSION SAYS

Allows P. S. Co. to Substitute Busses for Trolleys on Osage Hills and Part of Kirkwood Routes.

By BOYD F. CARROLL,
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 28.—The Missouri Public Service Commission today authorized the St. Louis Public Service Co. to abandon its Osage Hills car line, between Clay and Woodbine avenues, Kirkwood, and the Osage Hills loop, and about half a mile of the Kirkwood-Ferguson line, conditional upon the company's substituting motor bus service for the abandoned routes into the business district of Kirkwood.

Application for permission to abandon the lines was filed by the company after the city of Kirkwood proposed to reconstruct the paving of Woodbine avenue between Clay avenue and Geyer road, and to improve Quinette road. The company estimated the cost of paving between its rails and reconstruction of its tracks would be about $100,000.

The city of Kirkwood and several citizens filed protests against the abandonment of the lines, but the company contended the Osage Hills line was operating as a loss and that it should not be required to expend an adidtional $100,000 to continue operation.

In authorizing the abandonment, the commission said that it did not believe a street car company had the right to abandon a line merely because it was operating at a loss, but that each case must be considered on its merits; in this case the company should have an opportunity to avoid a heavy expenditure and to substitute less expensive bus service for its more expensive street car service.

"Practically all electric street railways are in bad financial condition and are finding it extremely difficult to finance themselves," the commission declared in its order. "Without retrenchment and economy of operation they face a dubious future. In the last 10 years hundreds of miles of electric street railways have been abandoned and the process of replacing electric street railways with busses has been proceeding steadily."

The company proposed to substitute busses for the street car service so long as the bus service proved self-supporting. The commission, which has no authority over busses operated in conjunction with street cars in cities, stipulated that the permit to abandon the street railway line was conditional on the company's agreeing not to abolish the bus service, regardless of the operating results, without consent of the Public Service Commission, after a hearing.

GROCER KIDNAPED AND ROBBED OF JEWELRY

Angelo Rosegrant Says Four Youths Took Valuables Worth $5000 at Abandoned Farm.

Angelo Rosegrant, 7440 Natural Bridge road, proprietor of a grocery at 6303 Easton avenue, said last night he had been kidnaped Friday evening after closing his store by four youths, who took him to an abandoned St. Louis County farm house, where they robbed him of jewelry he valued at $5000. They released him yesterday morning, he said.

One of them approached him in front of the store, told him he had a revolver in his hand, which was in his coat pocket, and ordered him to enter an old touring car at the curb, in which three others were seated, Rosegrant said. They made him lie on the floor of the automobile while they drove about for several hours, he related.

At the farmhouse, Rosegrant said, the leader of the group told him: "We'll get plenty of ransom money from your mother." As he said this Rosegrant said he recognized the speaker, but couldn't remember his name, and told him: "I know you and if anything happens you're going to get into trouble."

The youth was visibly perturbed and the question of ransom was not again mentioned, Rosegrant said. The jewelry taken from him he described as a gold watch and chain with a diamond studded fob, a ring and tie pin, both set with diamonds, and a gold comb.

Rosegrant did not report the occurrence to county authorities. He said he hoped to recover the jewelry without them, and feared that his captors might become frightened and conceal it if police were called into the case. The jewelry was not insured, he said.

JOE SCHENCK DIES SUDDENLY IN DETROIT

Vaudeville Partner of Gus Van Succumbs at 38—to Stardom From Streetcar.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., June 28.—Joe Schenck, of the headlining vaudeville and radio team of Van and Schenck, died suddenly of heart disease at the Book Cadillac Hotel here today. The stroke was entirely unexpected. He seemed in good health when he and his partner, Gus Van, opened a week's engagement at a theater here yesterday.

Schenck was 38 years old. He and Van had teamed professionally for 18 years and their act was one of the highest priced on the amusement circuits.

Schenck was the tall, blond member of the team who sang a high tenor, playing the piano accompaniment in the team and in his baritone partner, Van, who was the comedian of the two.

Their association dates back to 1910 in Brooklyn when they were conductor and motorman together on the same street car. They harmonized for their own pleasure after hours and so came to sing for their fellow motormen and conductors, this pastime leading eventually to professional engagements. They held successively long engagements at Coney Island and with the Keith and Orpheum (now the Radio-Keith-Orpheum) and other vaudeville circuits, and large metropolitan motion picture houses as well. They were joint owners of a New York night club.

Van and Schenck have sung many times in St. Louis, at the old Orpheum and, more recently, at the St. Louis Theater. After their last engagement at the St. Louis, they appeared for a week at the Mounds Country Club across the river and subsequently they played a return week at the Mounds.

UNION DEMANDS EMPLOYERS PAY MEN'S INSURANCE

East St. Louis Electrical Workers Seek Life and Annuity Policies at Contractors' Expense.

The labor agreement for 1930 recently submitted to East Side electrical contractors through the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers' local, of which Orville E. Jennings is representative, includes the stipulation that the contractor must provide "life and annuity insurance" on all union electricians employed on his jobs, an electrical contractor disclosed yesterday.

The agreement, which is to be entered into not later than July 15, further provides that the insurance is to be paid to the "Electrical Protective Association." It also states that the contractor must receive the written approval of the "Electrical Approval Bureau, Inc. (by decree of . . .) showing that the plans and specifications are in accordance" with the regulations of the fire insurance code and city inspection bureau, before starting his electrical work.

Two Missouri corporations of the same names, the Electrical Approval Bureau and the Electrical Protective Association, and Orville Jennings, each bearing similar relation in Missouri contracts between the electrical union and the contractors as they do in Illinois, are now the subject of an ouster proceedings before the Missouri State Supreme Court charged with restraint of trade and attempting to fix prices.

Sent to 14 Contractors.

The proposed Illinois agreement has been sent to 14 electrical contractors doing business in the territorial jurisdiction of Local No. 109, which has headquarters in East St. Louis and is composed of about 175 members. Adolph B. Touchette is business agent, whose signature appears on a letter accompanying the agreement blank.

Under the agreement the contractor must furnish the local union "with a monthly certificate from the Electric Protective Association" certifying he has paid to the association the "sum required" to carry life and annuity insurance on members of the union he is required to employ by terms of the same contract. In addition, compensation insurance is required, as has been customary in past contracts.

An electrical contractor, who exhibited the proposed agreement, said Jennings told the contractors in a recent meeting at the Broadview Hotel, that the increased cost resulting from the insurance provision would be equivalent to an increase in journeymen's wages from the present scale of $13.20 a day to $15 or $16 a day.

Benefits of Insurance.

He said that Jennings related the benefits to be derived from the insurance clause to be: $40 a month for disability from work suffered while employed on a job; pension of $75 a month for members at the age of 65; sick benefit of $30 a month and $4000 death benefit, natural or accidental.

Describing the procedure before the "Electrical Approval Bureau, Inc.," Jennings said, according to the contractor, the bureau would get the plans and specifications for electrical work in the jurisdiction of the local and would prepare complete estimates for labor, material and insurance to be submitted in the bid to which each contractor could add the amount of his profit, paying to the "Electric Protective Association" (as is set forth in the agreement) the sum required for life and annuity insurance.

As an inducement to the contractors, Jennings said, according to the Post-Dispatch informant, that the premius, would be computed on the basis of the number of journeymen working on the contracted job, but would be sufficient to cover insurance for the contractor himself and clerical help, if necessary on the job.

Agreement for Two Years.

The term of the agreement offered the electrical contractors, is for two years, and is a distinct departure in the insurance and approval stipulations from the expiring contract exhibited by the electrical contractor.

Among other changes incorporated in the new agreement is one that the contractor "shall apply to the business agent" for all men employed by him. In the past the contractor was permitted to select his men from the local's membership.

It is also demanded that no workman can be transferred from one contractor to another, which under the four-hour minimum employment clause, prevents a contractor from working a man four hours, if he has less than that amount of work. Another new clause is that no electrician can be discharged without an hour's notice.

St. Louisan Weds Bowling Green Girl.

LOUISIANA, Mo., June 28.—W. L. McIlroy of St. Louis and Miss Julia Whiteside, daughter of Judge and Mrs. George W. Whiteside, living near Bowling Green, were married at the home of the bride at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon by the Rev. J. S. Ames of Olney, Mo. Mrs. McIlroy is instructor in home economics in the University of Minnesota.

Germany Proposes to Tax Bachelors, Unwed Women

It Expects to Collect $25,000,000 or Fourth of Amount Needed to Meet Government Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 28.—A revised financial program, backed by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and his new Finance Minister, Dr. Hermann Dietrich, was laid before the Reichstrat today and the Cabinet hopes to push it through the Upper House and the Reichstag as soon as possible.

Under its provisions about one-fourth of the millions required to wipe out the Government deficit will be taken from those unmarried. It is estimated the taxes levied against bachelors and unmarried women will account for 110,000,000 marks (about $25,000,000) of the 480,000,000 marks the Finance Minister is seeking to raise for balancing the budget.

The rest of the deficit will be made up by cutting 100,000,000 marks of expenditures and laying a special tax on Government employes and all persons with incomes running about 8000 marks a year.

In other words, an unmarried woman, who also is a Government employe and earns 8100 marks a year, would be hit in three ways: For being unmarried, for holding a Government job and for earning more than $168 a month.

Specifically, the bachelor tax would add 10 per cent to the income tax paid at present and would withdraw the previously allowed deductions. At present a bachelor with an income of $10,000 a year pays 10 per cent on each thousand less 25 per cent. The new program would make him pay 10 per cent, or $100 on each full thousand, and in addition $10 a thousand for remaining single.

The tax on Government employes would be levied only once, however.

The Chancellor told the Reichsrat the new taxation was made necessary by the unemployment situation.

In discussing the world-wide tendency of prices to seek pre-war levels he referred indirectly to the American tariff, saying: "That situation is made more serious due to the belief of some countries that they can stave off its effects on their own industries by further increasing their tariffs."

NEW ORLEANS CENSUS 455,527; 17 PCT. GAIN

Maintains Prestige as Largest City in South; Minnesota Passes Iowa.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 28.—The official population for New Orleans was announced today by the census supervisor as 455,527, an increase of 68,573 or 17.7 per cent over 1920. Under the new census New Orleans maintained its prestige as the largest city of the South. Figures did not include the suburbs on the edge of New Orleans in Jefferson, Plaquemines and St. Bernard parishes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Minnesota, with 17 years' handicap in settlement and 12 years' handicap in statehood, now outnumbers Iowa for the first time in census history. There are now 2,558,26[illegible] Minnesotans. There are 2,468,7[illegible] Iowans.

Her biggest city, Minneapolis, 1930 population 464,674, a 22 per cent increase, passed up her closest rival, New Orleans, La., population 455,527.

UNTY REPORTS N EXPENDITURES IMPROVE ROADS

End of Year $4,952,656 f $10,000,000 Bond Is- ue Will Have Been Paid Out, Engineer Says.

OF CONTRACTS ARE COMPLETED

ards Made for Work on Jennings Station and Denny Roads—More Se- urities Must Be Sold.

y the end of this year, expendi- e of $4,952,656 for improved ds in St. Louis County under county's $10,000,000 bond issue 928 is expected to be complet- Highway Engineer Jablonsky reported to the County Court. he report, intended to show only standing of the financial ac- nts, did not state the mileage ew roads made.

here have been completed 56 tracts on 45 roads, at a cost 990,533.79 and there are 46 un- pleted contracts on 38 roads, a total of $1,844,247.28. The er classification includes some hways on which work has been ually finished. So far, $863,- 55 has been paid out on the ompleted contracts, leaving a ance due of $983,022.48. Seven er improvements will be the jects of bids to be received next nth, and their estimated cost is 573.

the three foregoing classifica- s there are 109 separate under- ings on about 90 roads, with a l cost figured at $3,102,656. t of the paving involved con- s of 20-foot concrete.

he County Court awarded con- ts on Friday for concrete on nings Station rd., for more than ile between Florissant and 's Ferry rds., to Keeley Bros. racting Co. for $50,201, and for crete on Denny road, for about ee-quarters of a mile, between vois road and the new State hway No. 77, to the Webb- ne Paving Co., for $30,531. A bid of $28,492 for a macadam face for Graeser road, for more a mile between Olive Street Ladue roads, was received A. Emory Jr. This road is of Denny road.

Sold $3,600,000 in Bonds.

o far, the county has sold $3,- ,000 of the bonds authorized years ago and Jablonsky's re- t indicated that to carry out court's program it would be essary to sell sufficient bonds cover the need for $1,489,936 re. Bond sale, premium and a 825 allowance from the State ded $3,679,419.55 income, and enditures to contractors and engineering and other ex- es have been $2,068,458.60, ing a $1,610,960.95 cash bal- e.

his balance and the suggested itional bond sale would cover aining payments on pending tracts, the cost of those for ich bids are being sought now this year's portion of work on improvements for which the has ordered the engineer to are plans. These three class- ations will require $3,100,- 48, Jablonsky said. Not all of work on the 38 proposed addi- nal jobs can be accomplished year because of right-of-way ficulties, Jablonsky reported, $1,850,000 will be needed to ly on them.

Bids will be received on July 9 a 20-foot concrete pavement Ladue road from a point 720 east of Warson road to Den- road, a distance of 3692 feet. includes a cutoff to eliminate jog in Ladue at Warson, the ff crossing vacant land at the theast corner of the double in- ection. The county has an 80- right-of-way for this work, viding room for a future broad ement.

Contracts already are under way for 20-foot concrete pavement on Ladue and its eastern extension, Maryland avenue, Clayton, between Hanley road and the point east of Watson road. When a short right-of-way can be obtained, the county proposes to build a cutoff between Ladue and Forsythe boulevard, west of North and South road. This improvement of Ladue constitutes the opening of a new major artery extending well into the county on a direct line from the center of the city. Traffic can reach Ladue from widened Olive street downtown by way of Lindell and Forsythe boulevards, in a nearly straight line.

Condemnation of property to make Big Bend road 60 feet wide for two miles between the southwestern limits of Webster Groves, at Glendale road, and Denny road, has been ordered by the County Court. The right-of-way now varies from 30 to 60 feet. A 20-foot concrete pavement is proposed. Contracts provide for new pavement on both sides of this stretch, which will make Big Bend an important paved thoroughfare from Delmar boulevard, University City, to Barrett's Station road, the western limit of Kirkwood.

There has been delay in completing the pavement of the section between Denny and Barrett's Station roads because the State Public Service Commission acted only yesterday on the Public Service Co. petition to abandon the Osage Hills car line west of Clay avenue, Kirkwood.

Right-of-Way Donated.

An 80-foot right-of-way has been donated to the county for a distance of 16,100 feet, or more than three miles, between Fenton and a point near the new United States Highway No. 66, south of Valley Park. For 7800 feet, this consists of strips to widen Smizer Mill and Vandover roads, but for 8300 feet it is made up of altogether new location. The right-of-way was obtained through the activity of George Pickels, a Fenton banker, and others. Plans are not completed for carrying this route to the existing pavement in Valley Park, but eventually it will go through Valley Park and Manchester and probably connect with the new location of United States Highway No. 40, near Chesterfield. Probably it will be concreted as an important belt highway.

Condemnation of land to widen Tesson Ferry road from 40 to 60 feet, for 5613 feet south from Gravois road and 2758 feet northeast from the new State Highway No. 77 has been ordered. This leaves a three-quarter-mile gap between the two stretches, which will be located after the new Valley Park-Carondelet freight line of the Missouri Pacific Railroad is laid out in this region. A viaduct will be erected over the railroad.

Engineer Jablonsky was ordered yesterday to prepare plans for 20-foot concrete on Hall's Ferry road between Robbins Mill and Patterson roads and for 20-foot macadam between Parker and Robbins Mill roads. This is northeast of Florissant. The county has a 60-foot right-of-way.

Arrangements have been made to build a concrete roadway on each side of the car tracks on Lockwood avenue, Glendale, between Berry road, the Webster Groves line, and Holmes avenue, the Kirkwood line. Lockwood is being paved on both sides of the tracks in Webster Groves and Adams avenue, Kirkwood, the extension of Lockwood, has been paved on both sides between Holmes and Geyer road. This will provide an important new traffic artery.

CLEVELAND'S $22,000,000 RAIL TERMINAL DEDICATED

City's Leaders at Luncheon, Praise Van Sweringen Brothers for Completing Project.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, June 28.—Twenty-five hundred guests sat at 250 tables today in the concourse of Cleveland's new Union Terminal, a 50-story sky-scraper, to celebrate its formal opening.

One speaker after another, railroad magnates and nationally prominent business leaders, praised O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen of Cleveland for their vision in bringing the development to completion. The brothers were absent, in accordance with their rule of never appearing at a public gathering.

After the luncheon was over the guests boarded trains, pulled by the new electric locomotives, and viewed the $22,000,000 project.

BOLIVIA REPORTED UNDER CONTROL OF REVOLUTIONISTS

Rebels Declared to Have Captured La Paz and Ransacked Homes of Government Heads.

By the Associated Press.

LA PAZ, June 28.—Former President Siles of Bolivia and his family are refugees tonight in the Brazilian legation.

By the Associated Press.

LIMA, Peru, June 28.—All information obtainable from Bolivia today indicated that the revolutionary movement in that republic had been successful.

A dispatch from Arica to the Associated Press here today said that Gen. Hans Kundt, the German military commander whom the revolutionists oppose, was dead.

From Arequipa came reports that the insurgents had captured La Paz late yesterday afternoon. "The infuriated populace," the message read, "ransacked the homes of the fallen politicians."

Other reports from Arica said that the climax in the revolution came with the rebellion of the cadets in the Military Academy. Ex-President Siles was said to have taken refuge in the Brazilian legation.

Army Leaders at Belm.

The new government, formed of three army leaders, Blanco Galindo, Guillen and Sangines, has decreed wide amnesty and promised free general elections within three months.

According to the Railway Telegraph accounts, the followers of ex-President Siles had kept La Paz in terror immediately preceding the outbreak of the revolution in the capital. All communications were cut off, soldiers shot at civilians and patrols prevented movement through the streets. When the people learned of the revolt at Oruro they paraded the streets proclaiming a revolution. Col. Sanjines, prefect of La Paz under the Siles regime, joined the revolution and ordered political prisoners freed.

"The last stronghold of Siles to fall was the barracks of the Fourth Cavalry regiment, which were captured by the cadets of the Military Academy aided by the populace.

"Lieutenant-Colonel Oscar Mariaca Pando has been appointed prefect and Col. Jorge Vargas Bozo, Chief of Police. Insurgent airplanes flew over La Paz this afternoon throwing down flowers to celebrate the triumph of the insurgents."

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, June 28. — Dr. Abdon Savedra, constitutionally elected Vice President of Bolivia, who has been living in exile in Buenos Aires, boarded a train for La Paz late this afternoon. He was accompanied by former Minister of War Juan Manuel Uinz.

JEFFERSON CITY REALTY MAN ENDS LIFE WITH RIFLE

Body of James Walsh Found Near Auto; Survived by Widow and Ten Children.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 28.—James Walsh, 55 years old, Jefferson City real estate dealer, was found shot to death two miles east of here today. His body was discovered by Eugene Burger a few feet from his parked automobile.

A short time later, James Walsh Jr., 24, who had been searching for his father after finding of a note, addressed to "Mother," arrived at the scene. Another note, addressed to Mrs. Walsh, giving instructions as to insurance he left and other matters was found by his son in the car. A rifle was found at the man's side. According to members of his family, Walsh had been nervous and in ill health for several months.

Walsh is survived by his widow, ten children, three sisters, and three brothers, including P. J. and Garrett A. Walsh of Kansas City.

KYRLE BELLEW WEDS M. P.

Actress Bride of John Beckett at Gretna Green, Scotland.

By the Associated Press.

GRETNA GREEN, Scotland, June 28.—John Beckett, Labor member of Parliament, and Kyrle Bellew, widow of Arthur Bourchier, actor, were married today over the anvil in the famous Smithy here. Two other Labor members of Parliament were witnesses. The party arrived and left by motor, the bride wearing a brown tweed jacket and skirt and motor goggles on a close-fitting hat.

Kyrle Bellew, an actress, was married to Bouchier in London Jan. 6, 1919. She has been active in trades union movements for many years.

Heads Home Economists.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., June 28.—Miss Frances Swain of Chicago was elected president of the American Home Economics Association in convention today. Miss Cora Winchell, Columbia University, New York, was elected vice president; Miss Frances Zuill, University of Iowa, secretary; Miss Jessie Harris, University of Tennessee, councillor at large; Miss S. Agnes Donham, Boston, treasurer; and H. Gale Turpin, Baltimore, treasurer.

By H. W. Nelson,
President of The Herman Nelson Corporation

THIS is an age of constant improvements in living conditions and comfort to which the heating and ventilating industry has contributed a large share. Within the period of time in which electric lights have replaced kerosene lamps, the automobile replaced the horse and buggy, and our daughters assumed the duties of their grandmothers, steam and hot water heating have supplanted the old stove. With man, life is ever a struggle with his environment. To be comfortable he must have artificial heat in the winter and artificial cooling in the summer. Discoveries and inventions which now enable him to laugh at the weather are among his most useful achievements.

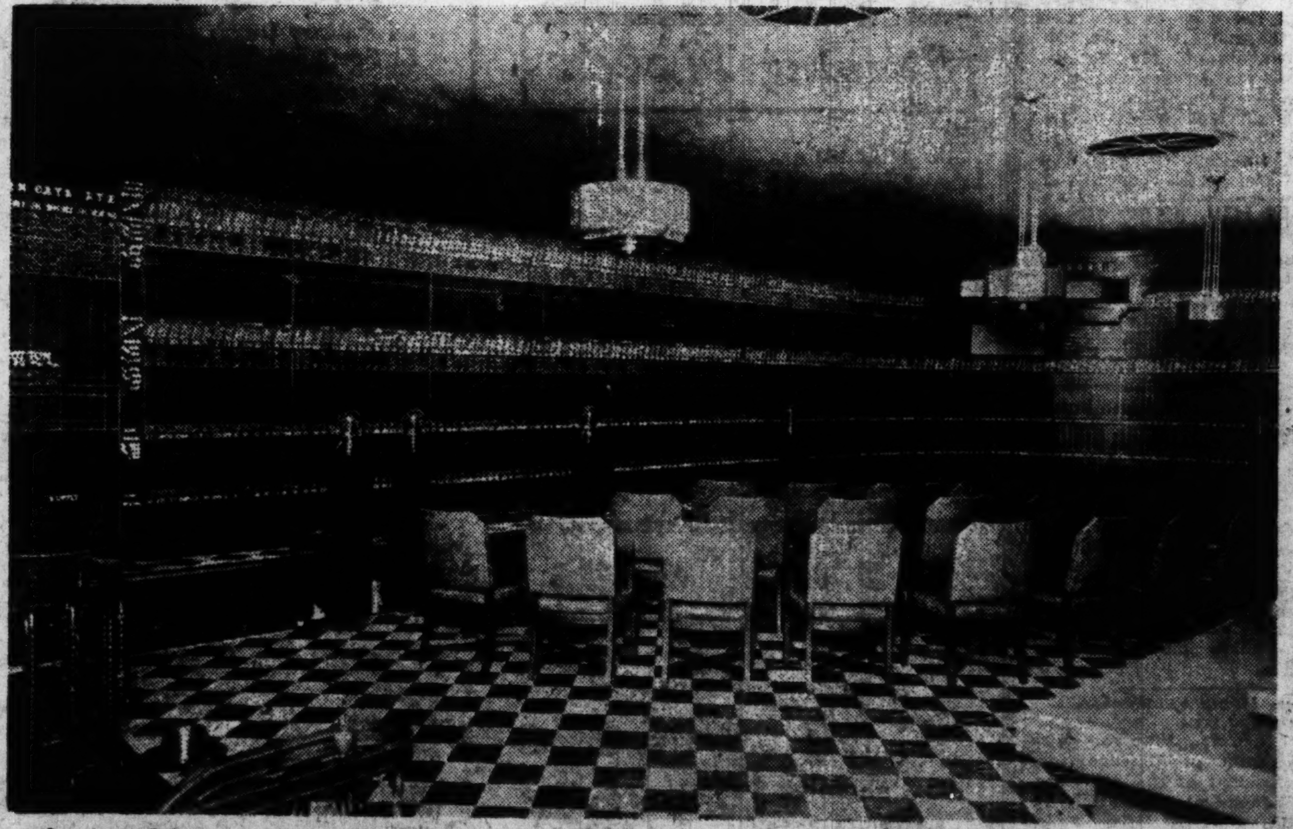
THINK of the changes in heating and ventilating equipment since you were young. In your own home, if you have a modern system of heating, the entire house is comfortable at all times. You can control the temperature to suit your requirements in every room by simply turning a valve. Your living room is equipped with a thermostat which controls the temperature of the house as a whole, regardless of outdoor conditions, without attention from you. If you use oil or gas as fuel it is never necessary for you to look at your boiler from one end of the season to the other. You don't have to worry about coal or the removal of ashes. However, these conveniences are not confined to home as proper atmospheric conditions may be enjoyed wherever you go, in summer or in winter, in the office or factory or in the places where you go for diversion or entertainment. The school which your children attend is equipped with a modern heating and ventilating system which provides for them a healthful and invigorating atmosphere and helps to make it a place to be enjoyed rather than shunned.

IN addition there are a great many other conveniences with which you may not be familiar. Many devices are being created every day to add to the beauty and comfort of your home. Concealed radiation has added, not only to the beauty of the home, but has made heating more sanitary and uniform and yet, is out of sight and out of the way. For the factory, small overhead unit heaters provide a degree of comfort which was unknown a few years ago and in addition make available additional floor space which can be utilized for manufacturing purposes.

EQUALLY important improvements are being made along the lines of atmospheric cooling, and it will pay you to consult with the heating and ventilating contractors whose names appear on this page in order to find out what is new and up to date in heating and ventilating with a view of improving your present plant or installing a new one.

(Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles to appear for five consecutive weeks on the subject of Conditioned Air.)

The Customers' Room Is Air-Conditioned at Mark C. Steinberg & Co.



An air-conditioning system, one of the most recent innovations in investment and brokerage office service and equipment, has been installed in the new board room of Mark C. Steinberg & Company, members of the New York Stock Exchange. So far as is known there is no other such installation in any brokerage office in the country.

On warm days this system maintains a temperature several degrees cooler than outdoors, and at the same time materially decreases the humidity. The air is cleaned by an oil process and dehydrated before entering the room.

A complete change of air every five minutes is accomplished in this customers' room. During cooler weather the equipment will operate simply as a ventilating system.

St. Louis is rapidly realizing how important to health, comfort and efficiency is the control of temperature and moisture of air wherever people congregate indoors. To meet the ever-increasing demand on our company for accurate information on this subject, a special Air Conditioning Department has been established.

On request a specially trained engineer will gladly call and help solve your air conditioning problem. There is no charge or obligation for this service. Call MAin 3222 and ask for the Air Conditioning Department.

CHINESE REBELS IN BATTLE WITH NATIONALIST FORCE

Fate of Government at Stake as Conflict Rages Between 300,000 Troops in Northern Honan.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, June 28.—Three hundred thousand Nationalist and rebel troops were engaged in a battle in Northern Honan Province today that may decide the fate of China's government.

Each side threw 50,000 reinforcements into the line along the Haichow-Tungkwan Railway as the Northerners hurled themselves against the impenetrable Nationalist defenses.

At nightfall the outcome was in doubt, but additional troops were being rushed to the main sector between Lanfeng and Kaifeng.

In contradiction to rebel claims, the Nationalists said they had improved their position at Kaifeng.

Independent dispatches, believed reliable, said victory was with neither side, but one or the other must give way soon to the terrific hammering.

Rebel dispatches asserted the intensity of their offensive was increasing and they expected momentarily to witness disintegration of the Government's front-line defenses.

This would permit the armies of Generals Yen Hsi-shan and Feng Yu-hsiang to break through to Nanking, they said, and overthrow the Nationalist Government and its "dictator," President Chiang Kai-shek.

EVIDENCE OF GIGANTIC NEW ELECTRIC TRUST FOUND

the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & So. Companies controlled by it are producing more than 18 per cent of the total power output. As will be seen, the relations between the Morgan firm and the General Electric are close.

The Radio Corporation, organized originally by General Electric and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., serves as a community of interest for some of the largest corporations in the country. Its dominating position in the radio industry rests largely on a patent pool, whose other members include the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., with its subsdiary, the Western Electric; the United Fruit Co., the Radio-Victor Co., and others. Recently General Motors joined the family party assembled in the Radio Corporation.

Owen Young at Head.

The head of the General Electric Co. is Owen Young, who until recently was also head of the Radio Corporation, which numbers among its subsidiaries the National Broadcasting Co., R. C. A. Communications, Inc., Radio Marine and others.

The Morgan firm conducted the negotiations last year which resulted in a tentative merger of R. C. A. Communications with the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. At the time the negotiations were concluded, Young and J. P. Morgan were in Paris serving as members of the Expert Commission which drafted the Young plan for payment of German reparations.

Cablegrams which passed between the Morgan partners in New York, and which later came into the hands of the Senate Interstate Commerce Commission, showed that Young took enough time away from his official duties to demand and receive an offer of I. T. & T. stock worth nearly $100,000,000 as the price of RCA communications facilities that have been valued at $16,000,000. Consumation of that deal has been prevented thus far by the refusal of Congress to repeal a statute that prohibits it.

Such is the amazing labyrinth of connecting interests that confronts the Federal Trade Commission in its effort to ascertain to what extent a single group of men control the production and sale of electricity, the manufacture and sale of appliances that use electricity, and the sale of numerous forms of public service that are operated by electricity.

The First Step.

Its first step, when the investigation is resumed, will be to determine the extent to which General Electric and the Electric Bond & Share Securities Corporation are owned by the same individuals. The report made public this week reviews with thoroughness and detail how the securities corporation, through common officers and interlocking ownership directs and supervises the many local power companies which it controls.

From that group it probably will proceed to a fuller examination of the United Corporation, which is the Morgan group.

As will be recalled, it was first proposed that the investigation be conducted by a committee of the Senate. The "power trust" fought that proposal bitterly, and succeeded in having the inquiry shunted to the commission, apparently in the expectation that it would be "soft-pedaled." Instead, Robert Healy, counsel for the commission, had prosecuted it with a thoroughness and a singleness of purpose which no committee of the Senate could have equaled.

JUDGE FARIS RAKES FUTILITY OF DRUG LAW ENFORCEMENT

"Prosecution of Curbstone Peddlers Is Getting Us Nowhere," He Says in Sentencing Physician.

The Government's policy of prosecuting curbstone peddlers for violations of the Harrison anti-narcotics act was criticized as "a waste of time and money" by Federal Judge Faris yesterday in comment from the bench as he sentenced Dr. Horace A. Reddish, a physician of 4469 Delmar boulevard, to three years in Leavenworth penitentiary for four sales of narcotics.

Dr. Reddish, who has served a term for possession of narcotics, was convicted by a jury on the testimony of an addict informer who said the physician made deliveries to him on the sidewalk in front of the Public Library.

"This case illustrates the absolute futility of the Government's efforts to stop the traffic in narcotic drugs by the arrest, prosecution and imprisonment of curbstone peddlers," Judge Faris said. "This man has been punished for this offense before, but it did no good. No sooner was he out of the penitentiary than he was back on the drugs. Prosecution and punishment does not effect either cure or reform.

"Getting Nowhere."

"We are getting nowhere with the enforcement of this law. We have never gotten anywhere and, if this policy is to be pursued by the Government we shall never get anywhere. The whole thing resolves itself into a waste of time and money by the Government in its attempts to stop this traffic. I don't expect Dr. Reddish to be either cured or reformed."

Seeking a new trial, defense counsel alleged entrapment in that the informer had known the physician in prison and had used the plea of friendship to obtain drugs. "It is inconceivable to me how a man can be illegally entrapped four times hand-running," said the judge.

Counsel then alleged that two of the jurors had fallen asleep during the trial. "I did not notice any somnolency on the part of the jurors and it was not called to my attention," Judge Faris said. "If I had been told, I would have talked either so loudly or so interestingly that they could not have slept."

Addresses Defendant.

Addressing Dr. Reddish, the Judge said: "The hospital and the court have been unable to cure you. It ought to be apparent to you that you are getting nowhere. As I said before, nobody's getting anywhere. The courts are being cluttered up with these curbstone cases and nobody's getting anywhere.

"I sentenced you to the penitentiary a few years ago and I assumed that you were cured of this vicious habit while you were incarcerated. But you were no sooner out, apparently, than you went back to drugs. You are a man of education and you should know better."

In 1920, Dr. Reddish was acquitted of a charge of murdering his father, a wealthy resident of Jerseyville, Ill., who was shot to death in 1919. In 1928 he pleaded guilty of possesion of narcotics and was sentenced to a year and a day by Judge Faris.

Yesterday, his lawyer announced an appeal would be taken and requested the release of Dr. Reddish under bond, stating that his son was just coming of age and needed his father's assistance.

Pope Receives Rio Archbishop.

VATICAN CITY, June 28. — The Pope today gave audience to the new Cardinal Leme, archbishop of Rio de Janeiro. On Monday the cardinal will hold his own reception, beginning at the moment of announcement of his elevation, until Tuesday at noon, the period called "Visite ad Calore," or visits of congratulation. The Duchess Brady, widow of the Papal Duke Nicholas E. Brady of New York, and her family were received by the Pope.

Vacation of 25 Years Ended.

COLUMBUS, O., June 28. — Joseph Banker's vacation of 25 years ended today. For a quarter of a century, Baker, 49 years old, has not worked, relatives testified in court today. He was charged with vagrancy by a sister. Judge Joseph Clifford gave Baker 30 days in the workhouse, $50 fine for vagrancy, and $100 for intoxication.

12 SENT TO PRISON IN WEEK FOR CRIMES

Only One Man Stands Trial in Circuit Court, Others Pleading Guilty.

Twelve men received penitentiary terms last week in the criminal division of Circuit Court, one receiving punishment at the hands of a jury and 11 being sentenced on their pleas of guilty.

The only trial was that of Israel Resnick, 42 years old, a bakery salesman, charged with murder in the first degree. He was found guilty of manslaughter and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Resnick shot and killed a fellow salesman in a quarrel over customers.

Among the 11 who elected to plead guilty rather than stand trial were eight robbers. Two of these, Theodore A. Orten and Denman Thompson, who admitted violations of the newly enacted Henry law, will serve 15 years in the penitentiary. Orten was charged with robbery with a deadly weapon and assault with intent to kill. He received 10 years for the robbery and five years for the assault. Thompson pleaded guilty of robbery with a gun and of carrying a concealed weapon. He previously had been convicted and was required to take 13 years for the robbery and an additional two years for carrying the weapon.

Orton, who is 25 years old, was captured in a running fight with police, following the robbery of a grocery store at 3450 Itaska street on May 20, last. Two men had held up the store, taking $322 from the proprietor and his customers. A motor cycle policeman chanced on the scene as the robbers left the store and gave chase, exchanging shots with the hold-up men. He pursued the robbers until their car collided with a tree and later arrested Orten, who attempted to get away on foot, after emptying his revolver at the officer. At the station Orten told the police where his companion might be found. They went to 1018 South Eighth street, encountered Clarence Walters, 28, who resisted and was killed.

Others who pleaded guilty of robberies and their punishments are: Bradley Snorten, seven years; Mason Martin, 10 years; Edward Coleman, five years; John Meier, five years, commuted to Boonville; Ralph Ruch, 10 years, and John Stewart, five years. Earl Bogen and Oscar Williams, who pleaded guilty of burglary, were sentenced to four years and two years, respectively and George Supple was permitted to take two years in the penitentiary on his plea of guilty of grand larceny.

Persons charged with major criminal offenses who were permitted to plead to lesser degrees of crime and take less than penitentiary punishment were: Elmer Brown, petit larceny, one year, workhouse; John Howard, assault to rob, six months in workhouse; Leroy Austin, larceny of a motor vehicle, one year, workhouse; Ted Bailey, larceny of a motor vehicle, six months, workhouse; Willie Bailey, carrying a concealed weapon, 50 days, workhouse; Pryor W. Powers, petit larceny, three months, workhouse; Eli Hollandsworth, drawing checks with intent to defraud, six months, workhouse; Lyman Jenkins, carrying a concealed weapon, 50 days, workhouse; Frank Johnson, petit larceny, 60 days, workhouse; Oliver Jost, forgery in fourth degree, six months, workhouse; Lulu Nelson, petit larceny, 60 days, workhouse; William Veasley, petit larceny, six months, workhouse; Jack Latore, petit larceny, one year, workhouse, paroled to report for two years; Harry Davis, petit larceny, one year, workhouse, paroled to report for one year, and John Broniszewski, driving while intoxicated, six months workhouse, paroled to report for six months.

LAUNDRY MACHINE MERGER

The American and General Concerns in $1,500,000 Deal.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 28.—Ratification of the contract recently made by the American Laundry Machinery Co. for purchase of certain assets of the General Laundry Machinery Corporation was announced today by E. B. Stanley, president of the first concern. The contract involves a consideration of $1,500,000 to $2,000,000, he said.

Stanley said the American would acquire the name of the General company, its good will, patents, drawings, other intangible property and the usable inventions pertaining to the laundry machinery business. The American also will acquire the use of the General Company's plant at Chicago by purchase or by short-term lease. Stanley said the American would not acquire the plants of the General at Columbus, Pa., or at Troy, N. Y. The American does not assume the bonds of the General or any of its liabilities.

HOW ALDERMEN SOLVED BRIDGE ISSUE

Vacation Taken After Satisfactory Settlement of Troublesome Question of Long Standing.

Settlement of the bridge problem, which with its conflicting interests has vexed St. Louis for many years and which looked more hopeless than ever four months ago, was an outstanding accomplishment of the Board of Aldermen before its summer vacation adjournment Friday.

Intensive work by the Special Bridge Committee reconciled many conflicting views and established the basis upon which the Municipal Bridge will be put to work as a railroad crossing after 20 years' idleness and the Eads Bridge may be made free of tolls for pedestrians and automobiles, as has been told.

At Friday's session of the board, preceding adjournment, Alderman Wiehe, a member of the Special Bridge Committee, gave credit to Chairman Walter J. G. Neun of that committee, who also is president of the board, for rescuing the bridge legislation from what a few months ago appeared to be a deadlock, and related some of the difficulties the committee had overcome.

The bridge legislation was initiated by Mayor Miller last December when he introduced a bill in the Board of Aldermen covering both use of the Municipal Bridge by the railroads and rental of the highway deck of the Eads Bridge by the city with the right to lift the tolls.

What Bill Provided.

Under this bill the Terminal Railroad Association was to build the new approaches to the Municipal Bridge and the city was to purchase them out of rentals paid by the railroads, and for use the vehicular deck of the Eads Bridge the city was to pay $208,500 a year plus 5 per cent interest, and to assume the maintenance and taxes on that part of the bridge.

This bill met with widespread objection and several public hearings failed to develop substantial support for it. Among the business organizations opposing it were the Merchants' Exchange, the Chamber of Commerce and the St. Louis Shippers' Conference. There were two principal objections, first, that the rental proposed for Eads Bridge was excessive, and second, that the Terminal Association would own the new approaches themselves an integral part of the bridge until the city purchased and paid for them in full and thus would be able to control train operation over them.

Mayor Miller suggested eliminating the Eads Bridge provisions and confining the bill to the Municipal Bridge. This was strenuously objected to by downtown business interests which for many years have urged that the highway crossing connecting the business centers of St. Louis and East St. Louis should be free. The Associated Retailers, the Downtown Improvement Association and the City Improvement Association took up the fight for a free vehicular crossing on Eads Bridge.

In this state of opposing interests no progress was made. The Terminal justified its rental price for the Eads Bridge on the ground that it was the five-year average of the tolls which would be surrendered. Consequently when the aldermanic session ended early in April with the close of the city's fiscal year, the bridge bill died.

New Measure Provided.

On the first day ofthe new session Neun obtained the passage of a resolution continuing the special bridge committee and authorizing it to employ special counsel and to examine witnesses.

Former Congressman Cleveland A. Newton was selected as special counsel and although there was no bridge bill before it, the committee at once set itself to the legislative function of preparing one. It held formal hearings at which Newton examined witnesses. Several of these sessions were long and tedious affairs at which witnesses talked about almost everything but the points at issue. This process was continued, however, to give all phases of public opinion an opportunity to be heard, and in the process many pertinent facts already well known to the committee were publicly emphasized.

Finally the committee was ready to write the legislation, but it required concessions on the part of the Terminal. Neun and Newton held conferences with President Miller of the Terminal Association, as a result of which the Terminal gave up much ground and joined with them in working out a mutually satisfactory plan. The degree of co-operation Neun and Newton were able to obtain from the Terminal is shown by the fact that as to the Municipal Bridge, it agreed to lend the city some $3,250,000 to build the approaches and obtain title to them at once, and as to the Eads Bridge, agreed to a rental price considerably below its original demand, leaving the city free of any obligation for maintenance or taxes. Thus at a cost of only $200,000 a year, the city may make the bridge free to all vehicles and pedestrians, but by permitting the Terminal to continue collecting tolls from commercial vehicles, will have to pay only $140,000 a year.

Members of the Special Bridge Committee, besides Chairman Neun, are Aldermen Edward W. Wiehe, Harry P. Riefling, William J. Studt, Edward L. Kuhs, Chauncey J. Krueger, Ralph H. Eilers, Thomas S. Waits, George Meisinger, John A. Fett, William Hoefle and Louis A. Lang.

CHIPPEWA TRUST CO. PETITION IS ARGUED

Judge Hogan Takes Plea for $16,000 Refund Under Advisement.

The petition of the Chippewa Trust Co., 3801 South Broadway, for a refund of $10,000 paid for unimproved real estate which belonged to the defunct Chippewa Bank was argued before Circuit Judge Hogan yesterday. It was taken under advisement.

The Chippewa Bank was closed by the State Finance Department in December, 1923, and its assets are in process of liquidation. A different group formed the Chippewa Trust Co. and assumed $1,000,000 in notes held by the Chippewa Bank at their face value. At the same time, it is alleged, the then Finance Commissioner, F. C. Millspaugh, got the new organization to accept the realty in controversy, located at Marine avenue and Gasconade street, sc that it would facilitate him in speeding up liquidation.

But the trust company's attorney, W. S. Campbell, informed the court his client had not been able to sell the land and had been notified by the present Finance Commissioner, S. L. Cantley, to charge off the property from its assets, since the law forbids a bank to hold title to realty for any purpcse other than as a site for its business. The land which is carried at the original purchase price, never has been used for banking purposes, it was stated.

Campbell contended that the original agreement by which the trust company took title was void, being prohibited by law, and should be set aside. The trust company in asking for the return of its money from existing assets of the defunct bank offers to surrender title to the realty.

The petition was opposed by James V. Frank, local representative of the Attorney-General, who declared that the trust company, having willingly made the agreement, should not be permitted to cancel it because the deal turned out unprofitably. Under certain conditions, he argued, it is legal for a banking institution to hold title to realty for other than a home for its bank. The Supreme Court, he said, has held such title can be lawfully passed to a third person or a stranger. He added only the State can interpose the objection which the petition sets up.

It was pointed out by the trust company counsel it would not diminish the failed bank's remaining assets more than one-half of one per cent if the order was made. Depositors of the Chippewa Bank have to date been paid back 79 per cent on their deposits.

TO TAKE OFFICE AS SECRETARY OF SCHOOL BOARD TUESDAY

Charles A. Roe Was Appointed On May 13 at Salary of $6500.

Charles A. Roe will take office on Tuesday as secretary-treasurer of the Board of Education. He was appointed by the board on May 13 to fill the vacancy caused by the death last September of Hugh W. McNamee. His salary was fixed initially at $6500 a year.

Among the duties of the office are custody of the Board's securities and real estate holdings, keeping of records, handling of receipts, disbursements and pay, and purchase of real estate. The secretary-treasurer is a member of the Sites Committee, which decides on property to be bought for schools. Roe, who is 50 years old, married, and resides at 3137 Allen avenue, was born in England and came here at the age of 12. Lately he has been a salesman for an investment brokerage firm.

Otto L. Zelle, a veteran of the office, has been acting secretary-treasurer since September. After tomorrow he will be assistant secretary at $5500 a year by request of the Board and Channing Miller will be promoted from chief clerk to an assistantship at $5000.

CITES NEED FOR PROBATION SYSTEM FOR JUVENILES

Judge Rosskopf Says Only Ten States Have Organized Plan.

Despite the fact that well-administered probation has proved the most effective force to prevent delinquency and crime in youth, only 10 states in the United States have what might be said to be state-wide probation, Circuit Judge Rosskopf, judge of the Juvenile Court, said yesterday, in connection with the campaign of the National Probation Association for funds to extend probation activities throughout the country.

"More than 200,000 neglected and delinquent children are brought before courts in the United States each year," Judge Rosskopf said. "More than half of these children are not given the help they need because juvenile courts with good probation services are not generally established. If delinquent boys and girls are given careful guidance when they first go wrong, we can prevent a large number of them from entering criminal careers."

George W. Wickersham is president of the National Probation Association. Judge Rosskopf is director of the campaign here.

St. Louisan Free on Probation.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 28.—Abe Paperner, St. Louis junk dealer, who was sentenced to two years in Leavenworth Penitentiary for receiving stolen property, was released today on probation by Federal Judge Louis FitzHenry. Paperner was in the Springfield city jail since he was sentenced.

B.N. a new degree for YOUR Independent Druggist

McKesson SERVICE

THE STANDARD OF QUALITY

THIS is the month when schools and universities all over the country are awarding degrees and diplomas. Among the college graduates will be many pharmacists, ready to serve their practical apprenticeship before taking up their life work as independent druggists.

In addition to the degree which certifies that they have completed the prescribed course of study in pharmacy, they should also be awarded a B. N. . . . Bachelor of Neighborliness.

For if there is one outstanding quality that sets independent drug stores apart from others, it is their humanness. Operated by the men who own them, every independent pharmacy definitely reflects an individual's personality. An individual who is sincere, genial, and neighborly.

No matter how numerous the calls upon him, he is never too busy, never too rushed, to give each neighbor his friendly, personal attention.

He is a permanent and intimate part of the community. He is there to stay and to grow. He realizes well that he cannot do either, unless he makes every transaction a demonstration of how eagerly and how capably an independent druggist cares for your wants.

Try him! See if he doesn't serve you so well that you will always return to the independent drug store.

This ginger ale offers ⅓ MORE FOR YOUR MONEY

It's the only nationally known dry ginger ale in full 16-ounce pint bottles. Buy it in cartons from your druggist. Then you'll always have it in the house.

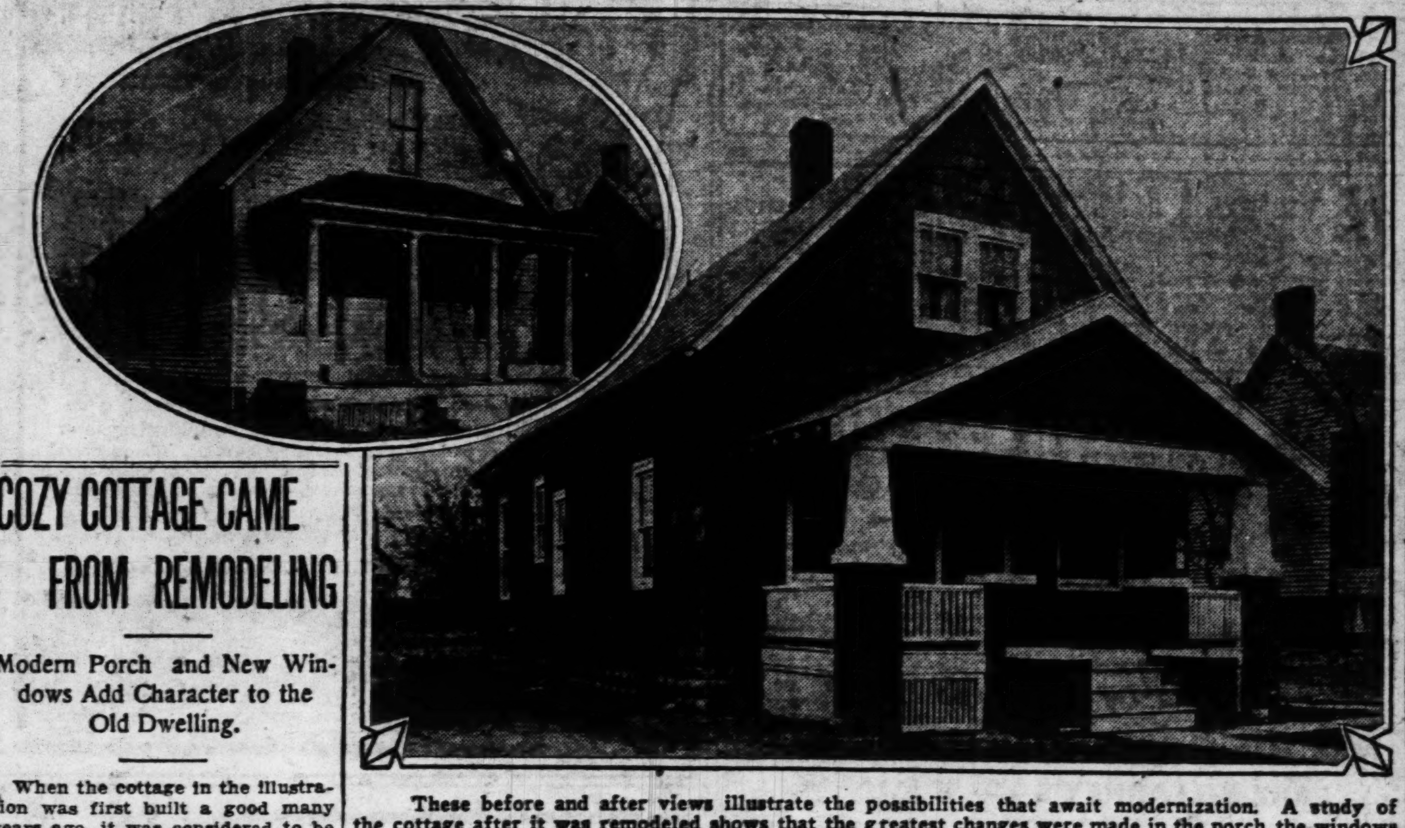
An Old House Made Into a Charming Cottage



These before and after views illustrate the possibilities that await modernization. A study of the cottage after it was remodeled shows that the greatest changes were made in the porch, the windows and the trim.

COZY COTTAGE CAME FROM REMODELING

Modern Porch and New Windows Add Character to the Old Dwelling.

When the cottage in the illustration was first built a good many years ago, it was considered to be one of the most attractive residences on the street.

The owners had taken pains to make its surroundings as pleasant as possible. The two wooden flower boxes on the front porch attest to this statement.

House Grows Old.

As time passed the appearance of the house came in sharp contrast to the cottages that were later constructed in the neighborhood. The shelf-like porch with its flattened roof and round wooden pillars was like a thousand others. The house itself was a plain box with a pitch roof. The windows lacked character and individuality. Decorative appeal had been lost when an uninspired carpenter set in place the plain, narrow sash.

A study of the house as it appeared after being touched by modernization shows that the greatest changes were made in the porch, and the windows and trim. As a matter of fact, these are entirely new.

A New Porch Adds Character.

Instead of a narrow porch across the front, a square porch with an entablature of wood with a steeply pitched roof and a shingled gable was constructed. The pillars at each outside corner were made of brick one-half of the height, the balance being white painted wood. The architrave is also painted white, giving the whole an effective appearance.

The narrow single windows are gone. In their stead are new sash and trim wider and not so high. Today the high, narrow windows are a sign that the building was constructed years ago.

The white painted trim sets off the windows through contrast with the stained shingles that are used as siding.

Upstairs over the front porch the old narrow window has been superseded by an opening fitted with two sashes. This arrangement allows an abundance of natural light to invade the bedroom fitted snugly under the rafters.

This building illustrates the effectiveness of shingles as siding, for here the rich tones of the stained shingles give the dwelling a comfortable, homey atmosphere.

LIGHTNING RODS SAVE HOME OF W. D. ORTHWEIN, JR.

Houses Equipped With Lightning Protection Safe in Electrical Storms.

The merit of lightning protection for buildings was demonstrated Wednesday afternoon when a severe electrical storm passed over St. Louis and St. Louis County.

That day the mechanics of the Miller Lightning Protection Co. installed lightning conductors on the residence of W. D. Orthwein Jr. on the Litzinger road, St. Louis County.

The residence was in the path of the elecrical storm which visited that locality that afternoon. The workmen who had just finished their job of placing the lightning rods on the roof of the Orthwein residence, saw the electrical storm break over the house and the electrical flashes which enveloped the house. The workmen who were on the roof quickly descended to the ground following the flashes which were also seen by other workmen who were also working on the place.

The lightning protection with which the house had been equipped that day is given credit for having warded off, what otherwise might have been a great disaster.

Brighten Dreary Kitchens.

Dreary old kitchens with an ill arrangement or lack of facilities, have little reason for being in this modern age. Kitchens of this type can easily be modernized so as to be light and cheerful and to eliminate much of the work connected with cooking.

Two Factors Important In Remodeling a Home

Beauty and Bodily Comfort Are Essential in the Home That Meets the Requirements of the Modern Family.

The home-owner who decides to modernize his home has in mind two important factors that must enter into every modernizing project:

Both the interior and exterior appearance of his home must be beautiful. And at the same time comfortable. Comfort and beauty are essential if the home is to meet in the highest degree the requirements of the family. If one or both are absent the sense of completeness is not satisfied.

Beauty Reflects Taste.

A beautiful home appeals to the artistic appreciation of the family. It reflects suitably the taste and refinement and good breeding of the household. The judgment of the neighbors about the occupants of the house is based largely on the exterior lines of the building and the character of the furnishings of the interior.

The family that is satisfied to live in an ugly, box-like house with the antiquated Victorian lines that were the style years ago, is marked down at once as lacking in good taste.

If the home has modern lines and an up-to-date appearance, the craving of the family for beautiful surroundings is to a large extent gratified. When this desire for the beautiful is met by artistic fixtures, tastefully decorated room, well-arranged furniture and all the modern touches that are in vogue today, this desire is largely met.

Not only are the requirements of the family met but also the judgment of outsiders vindicated. The home becomes a true expression of the family standing.

Must Be Comfortable.

Important as is beauty to the home owner and his family, the desire of bodily comforts is equally great.

When the home is lacking in those things that cater to the physical well-being of the individual, the home does not have that lure that is always associated with the word. The uncomfortable home is a mere sleeping and eating place—a place to be avoided rather than sought.

To the housewife who is compelled to labor with make-shift household equipment and a dearth of modern conveniences, the old-fashioned house has little appeal. It becomes a sort of unofficial prison to which she is sentenced by circumstances.

But with modernization the home takes on a compelling attraction. It becomes a delightful center of home activities and a pleasant place to be. Outside amusements do not assume the importance of previous days, but become diversions that serve to emphasize the allurement of the home.

DISCARD OLD MOULDINGS WHEN REMODELING HOME

New Designs and Shapes Offer Home Owners a Wide Choice.

Remodeling the interior of an old residence almost always calls for new wood trim and mouldings in the main rooms.

Generally it is considered a more satisfactory plan, when refinishing the interior of rooms, to remove the heavy, old-fashioned mouldings and replace them with the modern and more graceful type.

It is surprising what a wide choice is offered in the new mouldings as regards shape and design.

After the home owner chooses the style that will go well with the proposed decoration scheme and the furniture, a little caution should be exercised as regards the quality of the moulding.

The best may be recognized by its relative sharpness of contour, even maching and the absence of grain or sander marks.

The lumber should be entirely clear, save perhaps for sound knots of small size that may be allowed for exterior moulding only. If you intend them to have a natural finish then no defects at all are allowable.

Standardized mouldings can be found to fit almost any requirement, so that it is seldom necessary to order specially manufactured stuff.

FOOD PRESERVATION IS A HOME PROBLEM

Electric Refrigeration Renders a Home Modern in the Fullest Sense.

The principal advantages of electrical refrigeration as enumerated by L. J. Dubuque Jr., of the R. A. Dubuque Supply Co. Distributers of Trupar Electric Refrigeration are: The abolition of food spoilage and its consequent waste; the removal of the peril of eating tainted foods; freeing the housewife from the mess, care and attention that follow the use of ice for cooling purposes, and, lastly, the charm of having unlimited varieties of icy cold delicacies for the home table.

According to Dubuque, one of the most popular modernization movements of the season revolves around the installation of electrical refrigeration units in private residences.

Doing away with food spoilage, waiting for the iceman, mopping up after him and the elimination of clogged-up drains through simply installing a refrigeration unit which is controlled by a plug in the nearest electric socket makes a home modern in the fullest extent of the word, Dubuque declared.

Other advantages of this new type refrigeration includes the possibility of purchasing perishables in large quantities at a saving in money, time and trouble, as mold and bacteria are instantly halted in their dangerous growth by the continued process of refrigeration which keeps milk and cream sweet and pure, butter cold and hard and fruits, vegetables and meats firm and juicy for long periods of time and without trouble to the housewife.

Electric refrigeration units, according to Dubuque, may be had "ready installed" which eliminates all problems of installation and leaves little possibility of any cause for servicing. He also pointed out it was practical to install electric refrigeration units in iceboxes and refrigerators of the iced type providing the cabinets are well built, with close-fitting doors, free from cracks.

WASTE SPACE IN HOUSES

Large Areas Wasted in Most Old-Type Residences.

A study of the modernizing opportunities for dealers in the attics and basements of old homes, made by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, shows that in an average six-room house of about 23,750 cubic feet enclosed by walls and roof only about 15,000 cubic feet are given over to space used for such common domestic occupancy as resting, eating, sleeping, recreation, entertainment, cooking and the like.

Of the remaining 8750 feet, 5600 are found in the average cellar or basement and about 3150 in the attic.

This space in many houses is not fully utilized. Many home owners will be glad to convert the unused space in their attics and cellars into useable rooms.

LOW BID ON GUARD HANGAR $5000 OVER APROPRIATION

Totaled $82,017 for Building and Equipment; May Dispense With Heating Plant.

Bids for the construction of a hangar for the Thirty-fifth Division, National Guard Air Unit, were opened yesterday by the Board of Public Service.

Low bids for the hangar, which is to be 100x160 feet, and necessary equipment, totaled $82,017, which is $5017 in excess of the appropriation. The board will decide Tuesday whether to dispense with the installation of heating equipment at the present time and proceed with the construction of the hangar or call for new bids.

The low bidders were: For construction, the Dunham Construction Co., $63,404; for plumbing, Rethwilm-Gartland Plumbing Co., $5143; for heating, the Leahy Heating & Ventilating Co., $8495, and for electrical equipment, the Sunlight Electric Co., $4975.

The hangar will be erected at the southwest corner of Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field.

THE MAN WE ARE SEEKING?

We have been authorized by a client to select a sales organization to sell "Truck Fleet Owners" a proven device which saves from 40% to 50% of present truck operation costs now being wasted through "idling motors" while drivers are away from their trucks.

Authority to organize this sales force resulted from our preliminary investigations, surveys and market analysis which proved the unusual sales possibilities for this device.

A definite sales policy formulated on our investigations insures exceptional opportunities both in immediate earnings and future advancement for capable men. Good salaries and liberal commissions.

We will only consider successful salesmen with mechanical or engineering training or aptitude, and prefer men with a knowledge of the truck industry. You must be between 28 and 35 years of age, own a car and be ambitious to increase your present earnings.

Only mail applications will be considered. Please state in first letter, present connections and earnings, sales record, where you have worked and your experience which meets the foregoing qualifications. All inquiries will be treated in strictest confidence.

HOOVER COMMITTEE'S REPORT ON BUSINESS

No Attempt at Prediction in Statement Issued Through Julius Barnes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28. — A study of the present state of national and international business, which was explicitly divorced from prediction or interpretation, was issued today by the national business survey conference through Julius H. Barnes, its chairman.

The organization, set up last fall at President Hoover's suggestion, has previously recorded findings as to commerce and finance fluctuations since the stock market panic last fall, and the statement today declared that it was intended to submit fact in order that "interested individual judgment should form its own opinion."

Easing of interest rates on short time credit, plus a resumption of long term lending on bonds and mortgages was said to characterize the money situation. Foreclosures on Mortgages in May were less than those of last May, and declines in New Yorq State Savings Bank deposits were said to have been "negligible in May and much less than a year ago at the same time."

"Improvement in the financial state of building and loan associations continues," it was added, while installment selling and retail collections were described as showing little change since early spring. Life insurance policies issued in May were less than last year, as were fire insurance policies.

Construction was found to be running at a slower pace than last year, though road building is ahead of 1929 records. A number of industries associated with construction and furnishing were registered as having a less volume of business during the period this year than last.

Car loadings, real estate sales and electric railway passenger traffic were among the factors of business also indicating decreased volume as compared with last year. Telegraph, telephone and cable communication was holding closer to former standards, though electric power consumption was lower than last year. Price declines as to a number of commodities and decreased automobile output, with a recession in miscellaneous manufacturing were also recorded. General employment during May was set at about the same as in April.

"Although business depression continues to be world wide," the summary concluded, "there are some signs of recovery in a few countries. Hopeful signs are apparent in France, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Switzerland and Denmark."

REPORTS LOSS OF $17,000 TO STOCK MARKET SWINDLER

Dayton (O.) Resident Tells Louisville (Ky.) Police After Pursuing Man With Water Pitcher.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 28.—Andrew John Gaillombardo, 51 years old, of Dayton, O., pursued a man wit a water pitcher here today and then told police he had been swindled out of his life's savings of $17,000 by believing a story that the man knew how to "beat" the stock market.

The chase led down the fire escape of the Henry Clay Hotel, along an alley and through a jewelry store. Police came rushing up, thinking the store had been robbed. The man who, Gaillombardo said, gave the name of Robert T. Reed, escaped in an automobile with two accomplices.

Gaillombardo said the man telephoned him from a Dayton Hotel recently and offered $14,000 for a lot. They came to Louisville for Reed to raise the money. Reed found another man's pocketbook with $80 in it and the other man, out of gratitude, told them about a scheme to beat the stock market. Gaillombardo said he believed them when they would return and show how small investments had been doubled, so he let them have $17,000. In a quarrel when it was lost he pursued Reed with the water pitcher.

WORK HARD ONLY POLICY OF NEW DISTRICT DRY CHIEF

George H. Wark, Who Broke Up Wichita Ring, Will Go After the Big Fellows.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 28.—George H. Wark, new prohibition administrator for Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arkansas, was in Kansas City today to confer with prohibition deputies, and according to Wark, the new task of "mopping up" in the cities such as St. Louis, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, and Tulsa will be met with hard work.

"All I know is to work like everything and things will generally turn out all right," Wark said. "The law is the best policy and I shall work hard to enforce it."

There is no doubt Wark will introduce some new methods in his onslaught upon the booze interests in the metropolitan areas. He will train his guns on the sources of liquor supply just as he has done in Kansas in breaking up the liquor ring in Wichita. John Maden, who co-operated with Wark in rounding up Gorges, known as the Capone of Kansas, will be associated with Wark in his attack on liquor in the new district.

LONDON'S NIGHT CLUB 'QUEEN' AGAIN HELD

Mrs. Kate Meyrich Twice in Prison for Selling Liquor Without License.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. Kate Meyerick, London's night club "queen" and mother-in-law of two Peers, was arrested this afternoon charged with selling intoxicants at the "Forty-Three" Club without a license.

The arrest of Mrs. Meyrick, who already has served two prison terms after conviction on similar charges, followed a visit by police to the club early Thursday, when the names of customers were taken and club officers were questioned.

The warrant for her arrest was issued this morning and on hearing of it Mrs. Meyrick surrendered. She was remanded until Thursday at a hearing in Bow Street Police Court.

Last January Mrs. Meyrick was released from serving a 15-month sentence for her part in the bribery of a police sergeant who also was imprisoned.

One of Mrs. Meyrick's daughters was married to the Earl of Kinnoull and the other to Lord de Clifford.

REVEILLE BOY OUT OF MONEY IN MILE AND HALF RACE

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, Ky., June 28.—Gallant Knight, winner of the Fairmount Derby and second in the Kentucky and American Derbies, easily accounted for the forty-eighth renewal of the Latonia Derby here this afternoon.

At the finish of the long mile and one-half test the Audley Stock Farm star had a four-length advantage over the Southland Stable's Play Time, with Johnson N. Camden's Culloden a struggling third.

Reveille Boy, which defeated Gallant Knight in the American Derby, was never a factor and was badly beaten.

Jockey Herman Schutte took Gallant Knight to the front immediately after the rise of the barrier. Setting his own pace, a fast one, under the condition of the resoiled strip, the son of Bright Knight and Ethel Gray stood off repeated challenges from Play Time, Culloden and Besonian and was only coasting through the stretch.

Through his victory, Gallant Knight added $22,075 to his money earnings. He covered the distance in 2:35.

The forty-eighth running of the Clipsetta Stakes, $5000 added, the secondary feature on the card, a dash of 5½ furlongs, was won by Betty Derr, owned by H. P. Gardner. Betty Derr earned $6620 for her owner.

Jockey C. McCrossen gave Betty Derr a masterful ride. She beat Cousin Jo four lengths. Cousin Jo beat Issaquena two lengths for the place.

The distance was covered in 1:08 4-5 and Betty Derr paid $4.72 for each $2 ticket. Nine horses started.

CARNERA'S BOUT WITH WRIGHT IS POSTPONED

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, June 28.—The 10-round bout between Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight candidate, and Bearcat Wright of Omaha, scheduled for Omaha July 3, has been postponed until July 10, it was announced tonight by fight officials.

Carnera asked the postponement on the grounds that he needed more time to prepare for Wright and to fully recover from the effects of the low blow landed by George Godfrey in their bout in Philadelphia Monday.

Gallant Knight, under stout restraint while setting own pace, saved ground on the inside and drawing far out when shaken up on the far turn the second time round, never was in danger thereafter. Play Time followed the winner closely in the first mile on the outside, responded well when put under severe punishment in the final quarter but could not match strides with winner, when it came to a drive. Culloden, under steadying restraint until reaching the final quarter, closed gamely when hard urged to out-finish Besonian. Latter showed a good effort and only weakened in the final hundred yards. Dixie Lad closed considerable ground. Reveille Boy, fractious, broke from out of the stalls, could never race into contention.

Schmeling-Sharkey Fight Articles May Be Signed Thursday

NEW YORK, June 28.

PROSPECTS for the completion of the Schmeling-Sharkey return match were considered first class today, with the announcement by Madison Square Garden officials that they expected to sign contracts by next Thursday. The date proposed for the fight is Sept. 18 or 25.

An agreement has been reached with Arthur Von Bulow, Schmeling's former manager, whereby he is to be paid 26 per cent of Schmeling's share, which will be 37½ per cent of the net receipts. Sharkey's share is to be 12½ per cent. Bulow will then give 6 per cent of his share to Charlie Rose, a New York manager, with an interest in Schmeling.

Schmeling is on his way to Europe in the steamship Bremen, to remain there until time to start training.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 28.—Jimmy Manion, the St. Louis golfing ace lost his quest for a second trans-Mississippi golfing crown here this afternoon when he was defeated by Robert McCrary of Des Moines, six and five.

McCrary was the defending champion so it was a double victory for the Des Moines star. Not since the days of Harry Legg, the great Minneapolis star, has a champion successfully defended his title until today. Legg won four trans-Mississippi tournaments in a row back in 1909, '10, '11 and '12.

Jimmy just couldn't get going today. He managed to play even with the champion up to the green, but once on the green, his putter failed him miserably. Manion three putted six greens today and lost all six holes. He lost two others when he missed short first putts. However, due credit cannot be taken away from McCrary for his victory. He played steady golf, nothing sensational, and no breaks favored him but he hugged par on every hole and whenever he went over par he managed to make up for his errors a little later by sinking a birdie. For the round he shot even with par.

Only Four for Jim.

Jimmy won only four holes during the entire match. One of these he copped with an eagle, two oth-

Miss Virginia Pep Wins Women's Golf Title Fifth Time, Beating Mrs. Wallace

By W. J. McGoogan.

Overcoming a handicap of four holes which Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace, St. Louis Country Club, gained on her in the morning 18 holes, Miss Virginia Pep, Midland Valley golf star, regained the St. Louis women's district championship which she surrendered in 1926, by coming back strong in the afternoon round to win 2 up and 1 to play in the 36-hole final match of the eleventh annual tournament, at the St. Louis Country Club yesterday.

Miss Pep didn't take the lead over the Country Club star until the thirty-second hole of the match. She had played Mrs. Wallace even for the first three holes in the morning, then dropped six out of the next seven holes to be six down. She rallied at that point, however, and won back two of those holes before the morning round was finished and started out strong this afternoon to square the match on the sixth hole.

That done, she relaxed again and Mrs. Wallace took the lead of one up and held it until the eleventh hole, where Miss Pep again squared the match, only to have Mrs. Wallace forge ahead at the twelfth. A splendid 5 on the long thirteenth again brought the Midland Valley girl on even terms and she went ahead this time to go one up at the fourteenth, halved the seventeenth with four and Miss Pep again was the champion of the district, winning the title for the fifth time.

Fourth Meeting.

The two had met previously three times in district finals, Mrs. Wallace winning twice and Miss Pep once, so her triumph yesterday put her on even terms with Mrs. Wallace.

Although Mrs. Wallace's fine 39 on the first nine gave her a medal score of 81 for the morning round to an 87 for Miss Pep, the restored champion really played better golf than that. She made difficult recoveries several times from bad spots, and it seemed that every break was against her. In the afternoon when things were more event, Miss Pep had a fine 82 for the final 18 holes of the match to an 88 for Mrs. Wallace.

Their games were so even practically all day that there was little to choose between them. They both drove well, many times their

ST. LOUIS GIRL BETTERS WORLD RECORD FOR 220

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 28.—Florence Wright, formerly of St. Louis, now running under the colors of the Illinois Women's Athletic Club, broke a world's record this afternoon at the Central A. A. U. track and field meet here. She clipped one second off the 220-yard dash record by running it in :25 4-5 seconds.

Helen Filkey of the same club, broke her own mark by one-fifth of a second in the 80-meter hurdles, being timed at :12 2-5 seconds.

Genevieve Valvoda of Cornell Square, did 5 feet in the high jump for the meet record.

Betty Robinson, youthful Olympic athlete, bettered the world's record in the preliminary heat of the 100-yard dash running it in 11 seconds flat, which is 4-10 of a second better than the old record. Again in the finals of the century, despite the handicap of a damp soggy inside lane, Betty bettered the old record, when she won the event in 11 3-10 seconds.

Some 1500 girls participated in the events, which were witnessed by 10,000 persons at Ogden Park.

New French Champion.

PARIS, June 28.—Aime Raphael won the French middleweight championship tonight, defeating the titleholder, Louis Kessler, on points in a 12-round bout.

Ruth Bailey Defeats Miss Endicott for District Net Title

By Davison Obear.

Ruth Bailey, Webster Groves girl, won the St. Louis District women's tennis championship by defeating Melicent Endicott, the 1929 champion, in the final round of the singles event at Triple A yesterday afternoon. The score was 6—1, 6—3.

It was Miss Bailey's second title. She defeated Miss Endicott in the 1928 tournament, but did not defend her honors last year.

In the first set, Miss Bailey opened strong, winning the first four games and allowing her opponent only six points. Miss Endicott won the fifth game, but Miss Bailey's superior placements gave her the next two games and the first set, 6—1.

Play was closer in the second set. Miss Bailey took the lead at three to two in games. But Miss Endicott put up a brilliant fight during the rest of the set. Miss Bailey won the sixth game and took the following game which went to deuce four times. Miss Endicott won the eighth game which was deuced twice. Miss Bailey followed by taking the ninth game without losing a point, winning the set, 6—3, and the championship.

Doubles Final Today.

Melicent Endicott and Lottie Hagemeyer reached the final round of the doubles by defeating the O'Fallon Park team of Mrs. Violet Furlong and Wilma Benson in a semifinal round match, 6—0, 6—3.

The women's doubles final will be played this morning. Misses Endicott and Hagemeyer, the defending champions, will meet Ruth Bailey and Mrs. Virginia Dueker for the championship. The match will start at 10 o'clock.

Following the doubles final Ruth Bailey will depart for Omaha, where she will participate in the Middle West tennis championship, which will open there tomorrow. Miss Bailey will also play in the Missouri Valley tournament at Des Moines the week of July 7.

Marathoner, Hit by Motorcycle, Goes on to Win

DETROIT, June 28. — Percy Wyer of the Monarch Athletic Club of Toronto, despite his 42 years and a mishap in which he was knocked down by a motorcycle, jogged his 98 pounds to victory in the annual Marathon race of the Cadillac Athletic Club here today to win the event for the third time and gain permanent possession of the Marathon trophy. He covered the 26 miles and 385 yards in two hours and 59 minutes.

Alec Burnside and Ezra Lee, also of the Monarch Club, finished fourth and seventh, respectively, to give the Toronto organization first place in points for the day.

Albert Michaelson, of the Millrose A. C., New York, finished seven minutes behind Wyer to take second place. Michaelson had led from the 17-mile mark to the 23-mile post, where Wyer took the lead and held it.

Wyer was almost eliminated from the race at the end of 15 miles when an escort of motorcycle policemen, who were clearing the way for the runners, swerved into the path of the Marathoners to avoid striking an automobile and one of the machines hit him. He was knocked to the ground but was uninjured.

Eddie White, running under the colors of Staten Island Club, New York, came in third in the time of three hours and 13 minutes. Wyer first won the Marathon in 1926. He also took the event last year.

Ruth Hits Two Homers, Is Ahead of Record Year

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Babe Ruth's two home runs, which brought his total for the season to 29 and put him 10 games and as many days ahead of his 1927 record, were only the final flourish today to the pair of severe beatings the Yankees inflicted on the Cleveland Indians. The scores of the games were 13 to 1 and 14 to 2.

Henry Johnson gave the Indians only seven hits in the first game while Roy Sherid excelled that performance in the second, allowing but five. The Yankees started each game by scoring seven runs in the first inning. Johnson capped the first game rally by hitting a home run and Chapman repeated in the second.

Ruth's two homers came in the second game, one off Holloway and one off Gliatto. In his record year he did not hit his twenty-ninth until July 9.

ROCHESTER SHORTSTOP HERE FOR TREATMENT

Eddie Delker, shortstop for the Rochester Redwings of the International League, reported here yesterday to have an injured leg treated by Dr. Robert F. Hyland, the Cardinals' surgeon.

Delker, who is being counted on by the Cardinals for their regular third sacker next season, was having a good year with the Rochester farm team until he met with his injury.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Charles Flint Rhem doesn't believe the stories he has heard about the lively ball. He'll believe you if you tell him that a pair of tonsils can poison your system and tie up the muscles of your salary wing, but the lively ball stuff is all a myth to this stout-hearted and strong-armed son of Carolina.

Rhem's stubborn that way. Sam Breadon had a tough time getting Flint to agree to a tonsil operation. Sam talked for three years and even got Branch Rickey to do some talking for him. And if you don't believe Branch can slip you the verbal convincer, why you've just never heard him, that's all.

But Rhem was adamant.

"I've heard tell of people bleeding to death from those tonsil operations, Mr. Breadon," he said. "And my folks need me down there in the Carolines. I wouldn't care for myself, but I've always been good to my folks and I'm not going to do anything to take Flint away from them. No sir, I want my tonsils to stay where they are."

Rhem Capitulates.

But finally Flint decided that perhaps the tonsils were doing something to his pitching arm. And you've seen Flint bat and you know if he couldn't pitch, why nobody would choose him on their ball club.

So Flint soliloquized on the futility of life in which there would be no baseball and when Breadon phoned him this spring and brought up the question of the sinister glands, why Rhem capitulated.

"I can't pitch, Mr. Breadon," he explained. "And if I can't pitch I guess the folks wouldn't miss me much anyway. I'll see that doctor in the morning."

Rhem did see the doctor and before he could change his mind the doctor had him on a stretcher on the way to the operating room.

"When Rhem rallied from the anesthetic he was surprised.

"Hell, Doctor, I thought I was going to die. Why that tonsil what do you call it?—Lectomy, ain't nothing. I can feel my arm getting strong already."

And the arm did get stronger. Flint was just as stubborn about the lively ball myth as he was about not wanting to die in the tonsil chamber.

"Give me my high hard one back and I'll take a chance with that lively ball," he drawled in the best Carolinian.

And the high hard one did come back. Flint took a nine-inning five-hit workout in beating the Phillies and then yesterday afternoon he pitched a real ball game. The Giants had lambasted Haines and Grimes and other stars of the Cardinal pitching staff, but Flint didn't believe it was all because of a lively ball.

Rhem Allows Nine Safeties.

Rhem just reared back on his right leg, heaved downers and hooks and fast ones at McGraw's sluggers and he kept nine New York hits so well scattered that the enemy made only two runs, and both of those tallies were tainted.

Leach hit to center field in the fourth inning and scored when Gelbert took Douthit's relay and threw the ball against the Cardinal dugout. The ball bounced back into the field of play, but Umpire Stark ruled that as several Cardinals were sitting near the spot where the ball hit, it was in fact part of the dugout, so he waved Leach home.

Critz, after forcing Pinch Hitter Roettger in the eighth inning, stole second because Mancuso waited for the umpire's call on a pitch to Leach before throwing the ball. Even with the delay Gus almost got his man. An infield out and a pop single followed to give the Giants their second run.

MISS VIRGINIA PEP WINS WOMEN'S GOLF TITLE FOR FIFTH TIME

MIDLAND VALLEY STAR, 4 DOWN AFTER 18 HOLES, DEFEATS MRS. WALLACE BY 2-1 SCORE

drives lying the same distance in the fairway only a few feet apart. Their approaches were good, but the edge in the putting went to Miss Pep and therein lies the reason for her success.

A 10-Footer.

Right at the outset of the morning round on the very first hole, Miss Pep was faced with a very difficult 10-foot putt for a half. She was half stymied by Mrs. Wallace's ball, but slid hers around it and into the hole. On several other occasions she had very difficult putts to make for a win or a half and she was generally equal to the occasion while on the afternoon round Mrs. Wallace was just a bit off on the greens.

It appeared when Mrs. Wallace had a lead of 6 up after 10 holes of the morning round that she would make a runaway race of the contest, but from that point on Miss Pep steadied and reduced Mrs. Wallace's lead to 4 up when they went to lunch.

They started out with three halved holes in succession, each of them turning in 4's for each of the first three holes, but on the fourth Mrs. Wallace gained a lead of one up due to the fact that Miss Pep's second was in a trap to the right of the green. A five on the next hole put Mrs. Wallace 2 up and her splendid drive and an equally fine pitch put her three up on the sixth hole when Miss Pep's second again found a trap.

Miss Pep's tee shot found a trap on the seventh while Mrs. Wallace was safely on and she was down in a par 3 to a four for Miss Pep. After her drive had reached the rough to the left of No. 8 fairway Miss Pep made a fine recovery but Mrs. Wallace was on in 2 and won the hole with two putts to a five for her opponent.

They halved the ninth with fine fives, both were on the green in three and down in two but on the tenth Mrs. Wallace reached the high mark of her drive by going six up with a 4 to Miss Pep's five when the latter was in a trap on her third.

Miss Pep won her first hole of the day when she captured No. 11 with a fine four due to a beautiful drive straight down the middle, a second which was just short of the green, an approach which was dead for a putt while Mrs. Wallace's second was on top of a trap to the left.

Wins Another.

Miss Pep also won No. 12 with a 5 although she dubbed her second shot badly while Mrs. Wallace was in a trap with her tee shot on in three and missed her putt for a half.

Two putts on the thirteenth green gave Miss Pep another victory when Mrs. Wallace three putted after they had both reached putting surface in four. This put Miss Pep on 3 down and they halved the fourteenth in par fours, due largely to a wonderful approach by Virginia.

A 5 on the fifteenth to Mrs. Wallace's six put Virginia only two down but Miss Pep missed a chance for another victory on the sixteenth when her tee shot was strong and to the left while Mrs. Wallace put her first in a trap, was out in another and down in 2 putts.

Mrs. Wallace came back to win the final two holes of the morning round to go to lunch four up, shooting the seventeenth in four to Miss Pep's five and taking a five o nthe eighteenth to a six for Miss Pep when the latter's third shot went into the yawning trap in front of the green.

Mrs. Wallace's Putting Goes Wrong and Miss Pep Takes Three Holes in Succession

They both hit fine tee shots on the first hole of the afternoon rounds but both their seconds were off to the left, Mrs. Wallace with a badly dubbed shot into a trap and her opponent with a pulled shot just beyond. They were both on with their thirds and took two putts apiece.

Miss Pep reduced her opponent's advantage to one up by winning the next three holes in rapid succession, due largely to the failure of Mrs. Wallace's putter. Mrs. Wallace three putted the second green while Miss Pep, in a trap to the left with her tee shot, came out nicely and was down in two putts for a four.

Three Putts Costly.

Three putts on the third green cost Mrs. Wallace that hole, although her try for a half hit Miss Pep's ball close to the hole, despite the fact that she was not stymied.

Mrs. Wallace played the fifth rather badly, pulling her drive into the trees at the left, and her third into a trap over the green, while Miss Pep in the same trap in three came out for one putt and won the hole when Mrs. Wallace's out was strong and she needed two putts.

They halved the fifth in fives and Miss Pep squared the match by winning the sixth with a 5 to Mrs. Wallace's six when the latter put her first on the road to the right, pulled her second to the left. There was a duspute, not by the contestants, but by the referee and some of his advisers as to whether the first one was out of bounds so Mrs. Wallace played both balls, took a six with each of them and lost the hole to Miss Pep's five.

They halved the short seventh with par 3s, both of them being on with their tee shots and down in two putts while Mrs. Wallace forged ahead again at the eighth with a four to Miss Pep's five when Virginia barely missed a long putt for a hailf.

The ninth hole was halved in 5s, Miss Pep reaching the green in three with a splendid shot out of the ditch and Mrs. Wallace also being on in three and both were down in two putts.

The tenth was also halved in 5s while Miss Pep squared the match with a 5 on the eleventh to a 6 for Mrs. Wallace when the latter's third shot went over the green.

Mrs. Wallace was off the twelfth green on the left but laid her ball dead for a three and was one up again when Miss Pep took a 4 but the latter came right back with a 5 on the long thirteenth to again square the match when Mrs. Wallace took a 6.

The Turning Point.

Then came the turning point of the match in Miss Pep's favor when she laid her third to the pin and won No. 14 for a lead of one up and came back with a half on the fifteenth when Mrs. Wallace's desperato try for a half just missed.

Miss Pep's tee shot on the sixteenth was well on the green while Mrs. Wallace was in a trap to the right. She was out with her first effort but Virginia laid hers dead for a three and went two up when Mrs. Wallace's long try missed.

Miss Pep was on the seventeenth in two halved the hole with fours and won the match when Mrs. Wallace, in the trap with her second, came out nicely and got a four.

Trying to better Mrs. Wallace's previous best medal score of 81 for the Eoward A. Faust trophy, they played No. 18 and Miss Pep needed a four for a win or a five for a half but put her third in the trap and took a six.

Notes of the Match

The morning round was followed by a small gallery, some 100 persons sweltered around the course with the players but in the afternoon there were three times that many.

W. Artuhr Stickney refereed the match in the morning while Elliott Whitbread, St. Louis district champion, officiated in the afternoon. Neither of them was caused any worry by the contestants for other than a query occasionally by Miss Pep or Mrs. Wallace neither of them had anything to say and there was never a dispute by either over any shot.

Miss Pep was in the trap in front of No. 18 in the morning, her ball being in the grass on the slope to the green and covered by a large leaf. Rather than bother to ask whether she might remove the leaf, Virginia played right through it and came out all right.

Whitbread had a rather knotty problem to decide in the afternoon when Mrs. Wallace's tee shot went out of bounds on No. 6. The road was recently graded and there was a question as to where the boundary posts were situated. So Cotton had Mrs. Wallace play both balls provisionally and he was going to leave it up to a committee to decide it. However, Mrs. Wallace lost the hole with both balls and the committee was saved the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace was given the Edward A. Faust trophy, presented by her father, for the best medal score made during the round on the strength of her 81 in the morning. She now has one leg on the trophy while Mrs. Hynes, Normandie, champion last year, has two. It must be won three times to be retired from competition.

By Davison Obear.

The Missouri State Tennis Championship for men players opened yesterday afternoon on the Triple A courts and a total of 21 matches were played in the singles. The men's doubles play will begin this afternoon, with the junior singles set for tomorrow morning.

In one of the features of yesterday's play, Herbert Steideman, Washington University player, defeated Raymond Wiese, also from Washington. This was a first round encouter, Steideman winning, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4. Wiese outplayed Steideman to win the opening set. In the next two sets Steideman was forced to play at the top of his game to win.

Gustave Boehmer Jr. seeded No. 2 in the singles draw, won two matches. He defeated Ralph Skrainka, 6—2, 6—3, in a first round contest, and then won from Frank Keaney, 6—4, 6—2, in the second round. Keaney, who recently won the district boys' title for the second successive year, put up a good game against Boehmer and looks like a future champion.

In a close second round match Harold Thielecke defeated Sam Langsdorf Jr., 7—5, 8—6. Thielecke was a trifle too steady for the junior star.

Wray Brown, Karl Kammann, Karl Hodge and Edmund Serrano, the four players who have been participating in the Arkansas State championship at Fort Smith, are expected to get into action this afternoon.

22 Teams In.

A total of 22 teams entered the men's doubles play. The four teams seeded in the draw were Brown and Eggmann, Kammann and Barnes, Boehmer and Hodge, and Smith and Weinstock. A number of first and second round matches will be played today.

The draw for the junior singles event, which was made last night, shows a total of 16 players. With the exception of Alfred Rothschild, recent winner of the district junior title, all of the top-ranking local juniors are entered. There are no out-of-town entries in the junior singles. Sam Schneider, Harry Mendleson, Charles Rovin and Ray Wiese were seeded in the order named.

DOLANS WILL BE AWARDED SOCCER CUP ON JULY 8

By Dent McSkimming.

Aside from its having provided entertainment for thousands of spectators, the Twilight Soccer League, which closed its nine-weeks' schedule last Thursday evening, served its purpose as a training school for young soccer players, in the opinion of the league organizers and other observers.

There was noticeabl improvement in the caliber of team play and individual skill between the date of the league opening, on April 29, and its close, June 26. Much of that improvement was due to the advise and instruction of Oscar Mossmann, who served as the league coach. At the height of the championship race, when each of the four teams was fighting for the title, there was a tendency on the part of the players to forget the rules of ball control and team tactics, but there was a general adherence to the team-play theory.

There is little question that the four clubs which formed the league, the Dolans, the Academys, the German Sports Club and the Cooks, are now equal, if not superior, to any amateur soccer clubs in St. Louis. A team picked from the league could be welded into a unit which might even give the professionals a close game. This is the more surprising since with few exceptions the players of the Twilight League are in their 'teens. Both wing halfbacks of the Dolans are 16-year-old lads and the center forward is only 19.

Pros Are After Stars.

All four managers of the professional league clubs have cast envious eyes upon the more promising players, and some have obtained tentative promises of graduation, but it is the plan of the Twilight League to keep its teams intact with a view to making a bid for places on the United States Olympic team of 1932 when the international games will be played at Los Angeles. It is with this thought in mind, that the organization will retain its present form and play a series of games next fall, before the opening of the regular soccer season.

The United States Football Association trophy will be presented to the Dolan Club manager, Danny Murphy, at a league dinner to be held at the German House on Tuesday, July 8. At the same time announcement will be made of the team which, in the opinion cf the committee, showed greatest improvement from the time of the league's start until its close. This cup was donated by Tommy O'Hanlon, former Scullin halfback.

Chicago Eleven Invited.

Even July 4 is not too hot for soccer, in the opinion of the German Sports Club. This organization has invited the Schwabian Club of Chicago, champions of the German League there, to visit this city for two games during the Fourth holiday period. The German Sports Club will oppose the visitors on Friday and the Cook A. C. will face them on Sunday. The games will be played on the German Club outing field on the Meramec River at the Lemay Ferry road junction.

The Academy A. C. will give a boat excursion on Thursday, July 10, for the purpose of raising funds to defray the expenses of the Twilight League season.

JAY COHN VICTOR IN CHICAGO NET TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Jay Cohn of Santa Monica, Cal., national boys' tennis champion, added another title to his string today by defeating Jack Lynch, Chicago, for the city boys' title, 6—4, 6—4, 7—5.

Catherine Wolfe, Indianapolis, and Clara Zinke, Cincinnati, will meet in the finals of the women's singles and will meet for the title tomorrow. Miss Wolfe disposed of Ruth Oexsman of Cincinnati, 6—4, 6—2, while Miss Zinke eliminated Lucy Jane Hedburg, Chicago, 6—2, 6—2, in today's semifinals.

SCHWAKE AND KNOST IN GOOD SHAPE FOR BOUTS

Chuck Ewing and Joe Brian, Indianapolis, Ind., heavyweights, who will take part in the two feature 10-round matches on tomorrow night's boxing program at the Battery A open-air arena, will arrive in town today and continue their training at a downtown gymnasium, according to an announcement by Eddie Felix, matchmaker for the Walter Hatzfeld Post of the American Legion.

Ewing, a fighter with an impressive record, meets John Schwake, St. Louis' promising heavyweight, and Brian faces Dave Knost, George Wilsman's protege. Ewing has lost seven decisions in 40 professional battles and most of his triumphs were scored via the kayo route. He is a short, robust fighter, who is built along the same lines as Schwake.

Brian has suffered only four setbacks in 36 battles in the professional ranks. His chief claim to fame is that he has met Joe Sekyra, Dayton fighter, who lost on a point decision to Max Schmeling when the new champion startted his American campaign.

Four Five-Round Preliminaries.

Four other bouts, each of five round duration, complete the card. In the headliner of the supporting matches, Joey Reinhardt, slugging Salt Lake City, Utah, welterweight, opposes Georgie Daw, a Pine Lawn battler, who has won five battles and fought to a draw in his six professional bouts. Reinhardt, who boasts of 46 kayo triumps in his four years of fighting in the money division, stamped himself as a powerful puncher on the last Battery fight card when he knocked out Jackie Doss, a Choctaw Indian, in an early round.

Another preliminary bout will bring together Paul Lang and Freddie Perry, former amateur stars, who fought to a draw decision on the last local mitt program.

Schwake in Fine Condition.

Schwake and Knost engaged in hard training sessions yesterday at Olympian Gymnasium. The St. Louis County larruper is in fine physican shape for his match and is anxious to chalk up another knockout. He has not suffered a defeat since he has been battling in the professional ranks. His record includes victories over Walter Radka, Chuck Anderson, Billy Rhodes, Genio Peru on knockouts; Tiny Roebuck on a foul, and Frankie Wine on a decision. He also had a no-decision bout with Knost.

Knost, in 20 fights, has dropped but one verdict. In his last two fights he chalked up kayo triumphs, stopping Pat Fay of St. Paul and Jack Carney of Milwaukee.

Tulane Player Wins College Tennis Title

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 28.—In a match that bristled with sparkling tennis, Clifford Sutter, from Tulane University, today defeated Julius Seligson of Lehigh, to win the national intercollegiate tennis singles championship. The scores were 6—3, 3—6, 6—2, 8—6.

Sutter captured the title Berkley Bell of the University of Texas, was prevented from defending when he went to Europe with the United States Davis Cup team.

The defeat of Seligson marked his first in 66 college combats. Two years ago he sat on the throne occupied by Sutter today., but last year he was prevented from playing for the title the second time when, through a misunderstanding, he failed to appear for his semi-final match with Bell and was defaulted.

Sutter, who is a junior deserved his victory. Trailing in the fourth set, 5—2, with delivery against him, he changed his tactics of matching Seligson in deep driving, to play at the net.

Dolf Muehleisen and Bob Muench, University of California, won the doubles championship, defeating Stanley Almquist and Sherman Lockwood, University of Oregon, in the final, 6—3, 6—2, 12—14, 7—5.

SEMIFINALS TO BE PLAYED TODAY IN EAST SIDE LEAGUES

Semifinal contests in the first half races of both the Municipal and Parochial baseball leagues in East St. Louis are to be played this afternoon. The Polish National Alliance paces the Muny wheel by a game over the Circle Packers while the Blessed Sacrament of Belleville, have won five in a row to lead the Parochial parade.

This afternoon's schedules follow:

MUNICIPAL LEAGUE.

Wray's Column

Maxie Leaves Us.

MAX SCHMELING, first heavyweight to become world champion by the foul blow route, is on the waves, headed for Germany, promising to return next Sept. 18 or 25 to renew his argument with Jack Sharkey.

Insinuations have been cast on Maxie's sincerity in wanting this match, but the fact seems to be that Schmeling is perfectly willing to take a chance with Sharkey, in return for $175,000 or so.

The official condition he makes is that his first manager, Von Bulow, who has been receiving more than 20 per cent of Max's earnings without doing anything to earn it, be bought off, or his contract canceled.

Schmeling, if this is not done, would have to give up another 20 per cent of his 37 per cent of the gate to Bulow Sept. 25 which is only two or three weeks before the expiration of his contract.

Schmeling naturally has felt aggrieved that he should have to pay Von Bulow for services not rendered and for matches he did not arrange.

The Garden promises to solve the problem and the real burden of closing this match is not on Schmeling but on the promoters. Sharkey has made a wonderful proposition. He stands ready to fight for 12½ per cent and pay Von Bulow out of his share—that ought to cut the Gordian knot.

Sharkey Is Earnest.

SHARKEY'S attitude in this has the fans all rooting for him. After many tactical blunders, his manager has at last taken a step that puts his fighter in a good light.

There is no doubt that Sharkey and his manager feel that Schmeling was extremely lucky to gain the title on a foul. Most of those who sat at the ringside know that Schmeling was heavily battered for two rounds or more. The pictures will prove it to anyone interested who did not see the show.

Unless Maxie puts in some overtime before September, he will take another boxing lesson next September and possibly be eliminated. If the temperamental Sharkey can keep his jinx under control for a few rounds he should beat Maxie.

Maxie's only hope is that, like Dempsey, he will be able to take a terrific beating at the start and then outgame his foe. He is a slow beginner at best.

"Rain Check" Fouls.

IT'S almost a week since we had a foul—except in the wrestling game, where fouls are part of the program. In New Orleans last week a foul in a mat encounter developed an interesting phase, because the commission's ruling will be applied also to boxing, should a foul develop later in the ring sport.

With each wrestler owning a fall (quite regular), a foul by one of the principals caused the bout to be stopped and the money held up. The commission ruled that the athletes would have to wrestle again, free of charge.

That's the "rain-check" idea.

Is seems a bit unfair to the man fouled to make him work overtime because of his opponent's offense!

Flash Light Test.

THE Pennsylvania State Commission's plan is the only one that appeals to this writer. That is: Stop the show, give the decision tot he offended party, give the victim his full guarantee and take away the purse of the offender and his license as well.

That jerks 'em up short.

Incidentally, the Pennsylvania commission doctor, Webb Vaughan, pulled a new one on us —the "flashlight" test.

When Carnera fell to the floor after the Godfrey foul, Dr. Vaughan immediately entered the ring and examined Carnera's eye. He pushed back the eyelid and thrust a tiny flashlight, about the size of a lead pencil, close to the eye and turned on the juice. Almost immediately afterwards he waved the seconds to come into the ring and take their man to the corner.

The action was rather mystifying. Here is Dr. Vaughan's explanation:

"If a fighter is faking a foul, the flashlight test will get a reaction from the pupil and cause winking of the involuntary nerves. If the fighter is really hurt the eye remains still."

If the matter is as open-and-shut as the doctor's explanation makes it appear, the "flashlight test" ought to be in universal use.

U. S. PLAYERS FIGURE TO WIN 3 NET TITLES AT WIMBLEDON

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 28. —When the big canvas cover that protects the precious turf of the famous center court was drawn into place tonight at the close of the first week's play in the Wimbledon championships, the names of American players dotted the final stages of the draw sheets. Unless untoward events occur next week at least three 1930 Wimbledon titles are likely to go to the United States.

And that isn't counting on a possible victory for Big Bill Tilden over Henri Cochet, reigning singles champion, but only on Helen Wills Moody winning her fourth women's singles title is as many years, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn repeating their men's doubles triumph of last season, and the new firm of Mrs. Moody and Elizabeth Ryan taking the women's doubles crown.

A Great Final?

The Tilden-Cochet final is in prospect for next Saturday and, although the tall American was given a stiff fight during some stages of his match today against Ed Andrews, equally tall and considerably more massive New Zealander, Tilden's rare gifts for the game were his rallies in tight corners and he won three straight sets, 6—4, 6—4, 6—2.

Tilden was the fifth American to reach the final eight in the men's singles play, George Lott having gained his niche by beating the South African, P. D. B. Spence, 6—1, 6—3, 10—8. Spence, a canny veteran, has played only intermittent tennis lately and across the net from the Chicago youth today appeared sorely in need of practice.

Lott's skimming drives and aggressive tactics gave him mastery until the third set when he allowed Spence to pull up from 4 to 1 in games to lead him and play for the set point at 5—6 and 'vantage, but Lott pulled out and finally won the set, 10—8.

Lott's game today—and particularly that of the smashing, hard-hitting Allison and Van Ryn in the doubles—was typical of the American type of tennis seen all week at Wimbledon, tennis typified by severe hitting in every type of stroke and by every player from Helen Moody's effortless drives, which at their strongest all but knocked her opponents off their feet, to the strong attacks of men such as Gregory Mangin, Van Ryn and Johnny Doeg. Tilden has power when he cares to summon it but the variety of his strokes is his court strategy and his deft, delicate touches still give him unrivaled place among the Americans as a matinee attraction for the Wimbledon crowds, but their wagers are likely to be on the machine-like Frenchman, Cochet, if the two meet next Saturday.

Bill a Question.

What Tilden can do at his best is a question often asked at Wimbledon, but with Cochet winning through all his early rounds with ease he is still very much of a favorite despite the great record of play Tilden has established in Europe in the past six months. Tilden's next opponent will be J. C. Gregory, who is Great Britain's only representative in the final eight and if he wins he faces Jean Borotra or George Lott in the semi-finals.

In the upper half of the draw are Cochet and three Americans. The Frenchman must beat Allison to meet the winner of the Mangin-Doeg match.

In the women's singles Mrs. Moody dominates her half of the draw where the others are Phyllis Mudford, her next opponent; Joan Ridley and Mme. Mathieu of France, the lower half comprises Betty Nuthall and Elizabeth Ryan, Helen Jacobs and Cecelie Aussem, the German star.

Only three rounds of the men's doubles have been played and there are four American pairs still in the running. The titleholders, Allison and Van Ryn, who whipped the Japanese pair, Timeo Abe and Takeichi Harada today, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4, have as companions George Lott and Johnny Doeg, Berkeley Bell and Gregory Mangin, and Tilden, who is paired with the Dutchman, Hans Timmer.

Mrs. Moody and Elizabeth Ryan, Edith Cross of San Francisco and Sarah Palfrey of Boston also have reached the third round of the women's doubles while Allison and Miss Cross, Mangin and Miss Palfrey, and the Anglo-American pair, Jack Crawford and Miss Ryan, are in the third round of the mixed doubles.

Monday's play includes Tilden against J. C. Gregory, Allison against Cochet, Mangin against Doeg, and Borotra against Lott in the singles.

McWEENY AGREES TO JOIN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Officials of the Columbus American Association Baseball Club announced late today that they had come to terms with Douglas McWeeny, pitcher, and that the hurler would join the club at Milwaukee Monday. McWeeny, released to Columbus by the Cincinnati Reds, at first refused to join the Senators.

BLAEHOLDER FAILS TO CHAMPIONS AFTER TIED IN FIRST

By a Special Correspondent of PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—While of sour playing in the final game of the they had the saving grace of being able timely fashion, so a pair of natty two-bag Max Bishop in the ninth enabled them to

It was the third straight series the champions have won from Western adversaries, the winners taking three out of four from Bill Killefer's men and maintaining their lead in first place in the American League race.

In winning today the Athletics spotted the Browns three runs and when Warren Collins blanked the champs in the first five innings, it looked as if they were destined to defeat.

Come Out of It.

In the sixth, however, the Athletics snapped out of their lethargy and one vivid knock tied the game into a knot. In this round, Rip made the social error of passing Cochrane and Simmons. Up came "Gallant" Foxx, who swung his bat with tremendous power and caught the ball on the stitching. It sailed to the top of the stands in left center for his twenty-first home run of the year and the three runs that resulted evened things up.

Then in the seventh the A's collected another pair. Earnshaw singled and Melillo threw to second too late to stop the pitcher when Bishop dribbled one to the second baseman. Haas advanced both men and they came home when Cochrane dashed a vibrant single to right.

Earnshaw, who succeeded Walberg in the third after errors of omission and commission gave the Browns three runs in the second, blanked the Browns until the eighth when he passed Goslin and Kress. Gullic was there with a sacrifice and Goslin took a chance and scored after Foxx had made a commendable catch of Melillo's foul.

In the ninth, Earnshaw walked Pinch-Hitted Badgro and fanned emergency bat-carrier Kimsey. When Blue walked, Mack, in alarm, dismissed Earnshaw and sent for Quinn to quiet the storm.

Only an error prevented the old spitter from stopping the enemy dead.

McNeely rolled to McNair, who stepped on second and had a double play in sight, but he threw over Foxx's head and the error let Badgro hike home with the tying run. Then Quinn fanned Goslin.

In the last half Blaeholder was on duty for the Browns. McNair atoned for his error by lashing a two-bagger to left. Quinn fanned but Bishop drove the ball to the score board and McNair came home with the winning run.

Quinn Is Winner.

In the last analysis, Quinn was finally took inspiration from the courageous hurling of Rhem and in the sixth singles by Bottomley and Mancuso, a sacrifice bunt by Rhem and a sacrifice fly by Douthit tied the score. Then in the seventh Ray Blades, a worthy comrade of the game Rhem, hit a home run into the left field seats to put the Cards ahead.

Singles by Frisch and Bottomley followed to make the score 3 to 1 and in the eighth, with our old friend "Shucks" Pruett pitching the Redbirds added three more to their total. Lindstrom fumbled Rhem's grounder and Douthit singled to center. Adams popped out, but Blades beat out a grounder to Jackson, filling the bases, and Frisch smashed a double past Lindstrom, scoring Rhem and Douthit. Chaplin relieved Pruett and as Lindstrom's hand was bruised by Frisch's smash, Reese went to third base for the Giants. Hafey fouled to Reese, but Gelbert reached first on Reese's wild throw and Blades scored the third run of the inning.

It is a treat to see a game like the one Rhem pitched, and it is a treat to see a pitcher who takes his beatings and his victories without crying over the lively ball. But then you'd expect such courage from a man who thought a tonsil operation meant almost sure death, and yet was ready to trade the chance for his high fast ball.

Redbird Notes

Sylvester Johnson and Bill Hallahan will be the starting pitchers in today's double-header with the Giants. Bill Walker, a product of the East St. Louis sandlots, is sure to hurl one of the games for McGraw and Pete Donohue may be on the hill in the other.

The Brooklyn Robins, who still are in first place by a narrow margin, will open a three-game series here tomorrow and it would be just like the Cardinals to take them for a ride.

A small Saturday crowd of 4200 cash customers attended the third game of the New York series.

Ray Blades, one of the gamest ball players of all time, ignored the concrete of the pavilion wall going after Jackson's drive in the

Spence, a canny veteran, has played only intermittent tennis lately and across the net from the Chicago youth today appeared sorely in need of practice.

Lott's skimming drives and aggressive tactics gave him mastery until the third set when he allowed Spence to pull up from 4 to 1 in games to lead him and play for the set point at 5—6 and 'vantage, but Lott pulled out and finally won the set, 10—8.

Lott's game today—and particularly that of the smashing, hard-hitting Allison and Van Ryn in the doubles—was typical of the American type of tennis seen all week at Wimbledon, tennis typified by severe hitting in every type of stroke and by every player from Helen Moody's effortless drives, which at their strongest all but knocked her opponents off their feet, to the strong attacks of men such as Gregory Mangin, Van Ryn and Johnny Doeg. Tilden has power when he cares to summon it but the variety of his strokes is his court strategy and his deft, delicate touches still give him unrivaled place among the Americans as a matinee attraction for the Wimbledon crowds, but their wagers are likely to be on the machine-like Frenchman, Cochet, if the two meet next Saturday.

Bill a Question.

What Tilden can do at his best is a question often asked at Wimbledon, but with Cochet winning through all his early rounds with ease he is still very much of a favorite despite the great record of play Tilden has established in Europe in the past six months. Tilden's next opponent will be J. C. Gregory, who is Great Britain's only representative in the final eight and if he wins he faces Jean Borotra or George Lott in the semifinals.

In the upper half of the draw are Cochet and three Americans. The Frenchman must beat Allison to meet the winner of the Mangin-Doeg match.

In the women's singles Mrs. Moody dominates her half of the draw where the others are Phyllis Mudford, her next opponents; Joan Ridley and Mme. Mathieu of France, the lower half comprises Betty Nuthall and Elizabeth Ryan, Helen Jacobs and Cecelie Aussem, the German star.

Only three rounds of the men's doubles have been played and there are four American pairs still in the running. The titleholders, Allison and Van Ryn, who whipped the Japanese pair, Timeo Abe and Takeichi Harada today, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4, have as companions George Lott and Johnny Doeg, Berkeley Bell and Gregory Mangin, and Tilden, who is paired with the Dutchman, Hans Timmer.

Mrs. Moody and Elizabeth Ryan, Edith Cross of San Francisco and Sarah Palfrey of Boston also have reached the third round of the women's doubles while Allison and Miss Cross, Mangin and Miss Palfrey, and the Anglo-American pair, Jack Crawford and Miss Ryan, are in the third round of the mixed doubles.

Monday's play includes Tilden against J. C. Gregory, Allison against Cochet, Mangin against Doeg, and Borotra against Lott in the singles.

McWEENY AGREES TO JOIN COLUMBUS

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Officials of the Columbus American Association Baseball Club announced late today that they had come to terms with Douglas McWeeny, pitcher, and that the hurler would join the club at Milwaukee Monday. McWeeny, released to Columbus by the Cincinnati Reds, at first refused to join the Senators.

BLAEHOLDER FAILS TO HOLD CHAMPIONS AFTER SCORE IS TIED IN FIRST HALF OF 9TH

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—While the Athletics crowded a lot of sour playing in the final game of the set with the Browns today, they had the saving grace of being able to connect with the ball in timely fashion, so a pair of natty two-baggers hit by Eric McNair and Max Bishop in the ninth enabled them to nose out the visitors, 6-5.

It was the third straight series the champions have won from Western adversaries, the winners taking three out of four from Bill Killefer's men and maintaining their lead in first place in the American League race.

In winning today the Athletics spotted the Browns three runs and when Warren Collins blanked the champs in the first five innings, it looked as if they were destined to defeat.

Come Out of It.

In the sixth, however, the Athletics snapped out of their lethargy and one vivid knock tied the game into a knot. In this round, Rip made the social error of passing Cochrane and Simmons. Up came "Gallant" Foxx, who swung his bat with tremendous power and caught the ball on the stitching. It sailed to the top of the stands in left center for his twenty-first home run of the year and the three runs that resulted evened things up.

Then in the seventh the A's collected another pair. Earnshaw singled and Melillo threw to second too late to stop the pitcher when Bishop dribbled one to the second baseman. Haas advanced both men and they came home when Cochrane dashed a vibrant single to right.

Earnshaw, who succeeded Walberg in the third after errors of omission and commission gave the Browns three runs in the second, blanked the Browns until the eighth when he passed Goslin and Kress. Gullic was there with a sacrifice and Goslin took a chance and scored after Foxx had made a commendable catch of Melillo's foul.

In the ninth, Earnshaw walked Pinch-Hitted Badgro and fanned emergency bat-carrier Kimsey. When Blue walked, Mack, in alarm, dismissed Earnshaw and sent for Quinn to quiet the storm.

Only an error prevented the old spitter from stopping the enemy dead.

McNeely rolled to McNair, who stepped on second and had a double play in sight, but he threw over Foxx's head and the error let Badgro hike home with the tying run. Then Quinn fanned Goslin.

In the last half Blaeholder was on duty for the Browns. McNair atoned for his error by lashing a two-bagger to left. Quinn fanned but Bishop drove the ball to the score board and McNair came home with the winning run.

Quinn Is Winner.

In the last analysis, Quinn was the winner and Blaeholder the loser. Walberg, the starting pitcher, was roughly used by his mates in the third. Two flukey hits and errors by Bishop and McNair gave the Browns three runs, but Mack reasoned it was not Walberg's day to shine any way and took him out.

The Browns collected five hits, three off Walberg, two off Earnshaw and none off Quinn. Earnshaw was wild and issued seven passes while Collins gave four.

The attendance was 15,000.

Flint Rhem Stops Giants And Cardinals Win, 6 to 2

finally took inspiration from the courageous hurling of Rhem and in the sixth singles by Bottomley and Mancuso, a sacrifice bunt by Rhem and a sacrifice fly by Douthit tied the score. Then in the seventh Ray Blades, a worthy comrade of the game Rhem, hit a home run into the left field seats to put the Cards ahead.

Singles by Frisch and Bottomley followed to make the score 3 to 1 and in the eighth, with our old friend "Shucks" Pruett pitching the Redbirds added three more to their total. Lindstrom fumbled Rhem's grounder and Douthit singled to center. Adams popped out, but Blades beat out a grounder to Jackson, filling the bases, and Frisch smashed a double past Lindstrom, scoring Rhem and Douthit. Chaplin relieved Pruett and as Lindstrom's hand was bruised by Frisch's smash, Reese went to third base for the Giants. Hafey fouled to Reese, but Gelbert reached first on Reese's wild throw and Blades scored the third run of the inning.

It is a treat to see a game like the one Rhem pitched, and it is a treat to see a pitcher who takes his beatings and his victories without crying over the lively ball. But then you'd expect such courage from a man who thought a tonsil operation meant almost sure death, and yet was ready to trade the chance for his high fast ball.

Redbird Notes

Sylvester Johnson and Bill Hallahan will be the starting pitchers in today's double-header with the Giants. Bill Walker, a product of the East St. Louis sandlots, is sure to hurl one of the games for McGraw and Pete Donohue may be on the hill in the other.

The Brooklyn Robins, who still are in first place by a narrow margin, will open a three-game series here tomorrow and it would be just like the Cardinals to take them for a ride.

A small Saturday crowd of 4200 cash customers attended the third game of the New York series.

Ray Blades, one of the gamest ball players of all time, ignored the concrete of the pavilion wall going after Jackson's drive in the fifth inning. Ray's knee and elbow brushed the wire that sags against the wall, but what are a few lacerations in Blades' life?

Rhem missed two attempts to bunt in the sixth inning, but after slashing a foul down the third-base line, he caught the Giants unprepared and laid down a perfect bunt on the next one, to move Bottomley to third and Mancuso to second.

MacFAYDEN PITCHES FIFTH VICTORY IN ROW

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, June 28.—The Red Sox today pushed the Chicago White Sox into the American League cellar by defeating them, 4 to 2. It was Boston's second consecutive victory over Chicago.

For Pitcher Danny MacFayden it was his sixth victory of the month and his fifth in a row. His single in the fourth inning knocked in the first of three runs made off Lefty (Dutch) Henry in that frame.

ST. LOUISAN SETS RECORD IN U. S. TURNFEST

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 28.—The thirty-fourth national turnfest of the American Turnerbund drew to a close tonight with the Philadelphia Turnverein holding permanent possession of the gold wreath, emblematic of national team supremacy. It was the third time the Philadelphia Society had won the turnfest championship in 24 years.

Philadelphia won by a close margin over the St. Louis Society, but the exact number of points lead could not be determined definitely until all scores had been checked by the National technical committee which makes the awards.

Two national turnfest records were broken in today's athletic events, the last of the week of gymnasium, track, field and court contests.

William Pump of Schnectady, former Colgate University track star, cleared the bar at 12 feet 2 inches, to set a new pole vault record. The old record of 11 feet was tied by Conrad Boye of Los Angeles, and Carl Klass of Indianapolis.

Edgar Kulla of Concordia Turnverein, St. Louis, bettered the 1201 yard high hurdles record by 2-5 of a second. His time was 16 3-5 seconds, compared to the old record of 17 seconds.

Diplomas and prizes were awarded to individual athletes at the final outdoor ceremony this afternoon. Approximately 3000 turners from all parts of the United States took part in the turnfest.

Three St. Louisans — Glenn Warren, Barth Rossfeld and Earl Jansen—finished second, third and fourth, respectively, in the mile run, which was won by William Deranck of Buffalo.

COLUMBIA A. C. WILL MEET HELLRUNGS IN U. CITY GAME TODAY

The Columbia Athletic Club will meet the Hellrungs in what should be one of the best games of the season in the University City League today at Heman Park, in University City. The game is called for 2:30 on diamond No. 2. With only two games remaining on the schedule for the first half of the split season, both teams are tied for second place—one game back of the Uniteds. A defeat will mean elimination, provided the Uniteds down the County Chamber of Commerce.

After winning six straight games, the Uniteds have been in a slump, losing their last two starts. The Lumber men will tackle the Chamber of Commerce at 1 o'clock on diamond No. 1.

The University City Knights of Columbus, who last Sunday surprised by easily downing the Hellrungs, will meet the Trumbulls in the night-cap.

The standings:

TEAM.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Uniteds	6	2	.750
Hellrungs	5	3	.625
Columbia Athletic Club	5	3	.625
Co. Chamber of Comm.	4	4	.500
Knights of Columbus	3	5	.375
Trumbulls	1	7	.125

White Sox Get Mulleavey, Star Toledo Shortstop

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Another step in the reconstruction of the Chicago White Sox was taken today with the purchase of Gordon Mulleavey, sensational shortstop with the Toledo club of the American Association. The White Sox gave two players for the young star.

William Hunnefield, an infielder, and Bob Weiland, young left-handed pitcher, were sent to the Toledo club in exchange for Mulleavey. Hunnefield and Weiland were released on option.

Mulleavey will join the White Sox in New York on Monday. Scouts for the club say Mulleavey is the best infielding prospect in the American Association, as well as a dangerous hitter.

Sixteen St. Louis Crews and Three Single Scullers Will Row at Cleveland, This Week

By Damon Kerby.

Sixteen crews and three single scullers, carrying the hopes of five St. Louis rowing clubs, will compete in the Central States Regatta at Cleveland, Friday and Saturday, July 4 and 5. The local oarsmen will depart Wednesday and Thursday.

Of all sports, both professional and amateur, rowing probably requires the longest and hardest training, and the boys who do the heavy training appear for the shortest time in competition. It is not unusual for a crew to train for several months for one particular race that is run off in a few minutes' time. That situation is the case in regard to the St. Louis crews, some of which have been in training since Jan. 15, in preparation for the Central States regatta. Only one crew—the Century Senior eight—has announced its intention of competing in a national regatta if it is victorious at Cleveland.

The Century senior eight, by the way, is favored to win its race at Cleveland. Last year this crew rowed to a dead heat for first place in the same event with the fast St. Catherine's crew of Ontario. The Canadians failed to enter this year.

Of course, reversals are almost the rule rather than the exception in rowing, and a "dark horse" entry may row away from the field; but on the available form Coach Heyne of Century believes that his crew has the power and pluck to send them over the line a winner.

Centurys Won Their Only Start.

In their only interclub competition this season, the Century senior eight had little trouble in beating the powerful young junior crew of the St. Louis Rowing Club. They did not have to raise their stroke above 30 to finish in front, while in trials late this week they sent their shell over the mile and a half route with strokes as high as 36 a minute.

Besides Century, St. Louis will be represented in the eight-oared senior race by crews from Western and St. Louis Rowing clubs. Neither crew competed in the eight-oared open event at Century Boat Club last Sunday.

Western Juniors Powerful.

With five victories in its last five starts, the junior six-oared barge crew of the Western Rowing Club will be a serious contender in its Central States race. Western also has bright prospects in the senior single scull race, in which Adolph Kreuder, Municipal champion, will be Western's representative.

The Western Rowing Club will have the largest representation among the St. Louis clubs, with entries in seven events. In addition to competing in the junior six-oared barge and senior single scull, Western has filed entries in the junior single scull, four-oared single shell, senior six-oared barge and junior and senior eight-oared shell.

North End Rowing Club will enter six events, having filed entries in the junior and senior double shell, junior and senior four-oared shell, and junior and senior six-oared barge.

Besides its senior eight, Century will send an entrant in the senior single scull. Central has entered the junior and senior six-oared barge and the St. Louis Rowing Club the junior and senior eight-oared shell.

Strong crews from Cleveland, Quincy, Ill., Detroit, Chicago and Wyandotte, Mich., will furnish the competition for the St. Louis oarsmen.

McCRARY KEEPS T-M TITLE, BEATING MANION 6 AND 5

ers with birdies and the third with with a par when McCrary three putted, the only time he three-putted during the entire day.

Jimmy started out well and traveled the first nine holes even with par and the two made the first turn of the morning play all even.

But, it was on the second nine holes of the morning round that Jimmy played his worst golf and he's still trying to find out just what went wrong.

He had been doing better than holding his own up to the fourteenth green. In fact, he had McCrary fighting an up-hill battle because he was out-driving him and was generally inside of him on the green.

But on the fourteenth, he three-putted a green, the third from only four feet. The miss irritated Jimmy. The cool McCrary in the meantime was shooting nice steady golf and jumped at the opportunity to get Jimmy down when Manion slid off his game for just a few holes. On the last five holes of the morning round, McCrary won four of them and would have won the fifth if Manion had not stymied him. No other golfer ever took four holes in a row from Manion in the tournament and he said no one ever did it in any tournament. Anyway, the damage was done. Manion lost two of these four holes because he three-putted and he lost the other two because his iron hooked him into traps which cost extra strokes.

A Costly Slip.

This was the slip which cost Manion the match. He was three down at the end of the morning round and try as he might, he could not overcome the lead. In the afternoon he was all over the course trying to get on the first green and finally took a six to McCrary's four to be four down. He recovered a hole with a birdie two on five but he lost it again on the seventh when his brassie went over the green and his chip was over the cup. In the meantime McCrary was down in par three.

Manion shot the round in 36 in spite of the 6 on No. 1. This was just two over par but McCrary shot a 34.

While the result looks as though it were an easy match for McCrary it was anything but that. Manion kept plugging along on every hole and kept McCrary shooting his best in order to keep ahead.

Jimmy had hopes of keeping in the running on the thirty-first a 136 yard hole. He collected a deuce there in the morning and had five on the hole during the tournament, but deuces were scarce when he needed them most and this was no exception. His putt just lipped the cup but failed to fall and when McCrary sank his second putt for a half it was all over.

As Play Went.

In the third Manion had a three-foot putt for a half and missed. McCrary had a five-foot putt for a half on the fourth and missed, Manion going one up again. They halved the fifth, McCrary having to skip a stymie to put his three-foot putt in.

Manion blew an 18-inch putt on the sixth and the match was even. They halved the seventh, eighth and ninth in par figures.

Manion was leading 1 up until the fourteenth, having won No. 13 with a brilliant bit of shooting. McCrary took the fourteenth when he sank his fourth with Manion having had trouble reaching the green. They halved the fifteenth and, on No. 16 Manion missed a four-foot putt and McCrary took the hole. Manion was in trouble all the way on No. 17 and finally picked up conceding to his opponent. On No. 18, Manion again took three putts and went three down.

In the afternoon, Manion again started poorly and lost the nineteenth. They halved the twentieth in birdies, each sinking a long putt. The twenty-first hole saw both on in 2 and two-putting for a half in 4. The same procedure followed for No. 21 and on No. 22, Manion won back a hole with a 2, putting his No. 4 iron shot within two feet of the cup. No. 24 was halved in fours and McCrary won the twenty-fifth to go 4 up again. The twenty-sixth was halved in fours.

SENATORS RUN WINNING STREAK TO EIGHT GAMES

PRINCETON MAN PLAYS AMAZING GOLF TO TAKE COLLEGE TITLE

By the Associated Press.

OAKMONT, Pa., June 28. — George T. Dunlap Jr., was only a Princeton student this morning, but this afternoon he was a super-golfer, coming from behind in one of the most sensational rallies in any first grade competition to win the intercollegiate championship of America. He defeated Lawrence Moller, Notre Dame, five up and four to play.

After the little blonde East Orange, N. J., youth had been on the defensive all day against the steady golf of Moller, a student in architectural engineering, he rose in his might in the afternoon to win seven straight holes and change his stutus from five down to two up.

After that he was never headed. Moller, a stocky, serious lad from Quincy, Ill., refused to crack but he could not stand up against the barrage of threes and fours laid down by the Tiger from old Nassau.

And Then the Fun Began.

Dunlap went to luncheon four down after the first 18 holes of the 36-hole match. His start in the afternoon round could hardly have been worse. For the first time in a week's play he sent his tee-shot at the nineteenth flying out of bounds and with a penalty of stroke and distance he was three after his second drive. With the second ball he scored a par five but with the penalty he was charged with seven while Moller was down in par five and was five up.

There was no thought then that the big gallery was about to see a near-golfing miracle. Had any one suggested that the Princeton boy would not lose another hole he would have been laughed to scorn. But that happened.

For the 14 holes played in the afternoon, Dunlap was one stroke under par on one of the most exacting golf courses in existence. He had four birdies, eight pars and was over par on two holes. From the twentieth to the twenty-sixth holes, inclusive, the slight Princeton youth was four under fours.

Dunlap is the first Princeton man to win the championship since J. Simpson Dean took the title in 1921. The first championship, played in 1897, was won by a Princetonian, Louis P. Bayard.

Dunlap and Moller tied at 153 for the 36 holes of the qualifying round and it was agreed that the medal would go to the player who was leading after the first 18 holes today. As Moller was four up at that stage, he divided the honors of the competition with Dunlap.

AFTER NINE DEFEATS, PHILS BEAT PIRATES TO GAIN EVEN BREAK

PITTSBURG, June 28.—Philadelphia won the second game of a double header with the Pirates today and brought to an end a nine-game losing streak. The Pirates had extended their string of victories to five straight by winning the first encounter.

The Phils got to Leon Chagnon, Pirate rookie, for 13 hits in the nightcap and won, 6 to 4.

Glen Spencer, another Pittsburg rookie, pitched good ball in the first game, his first start for the Pirates, and Pittsburg triumphed, 6 to 3.

CUBS WITHIN 7 POINTS OF ROBINS AFTER WINNING

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Cubs gained a tie in games with the Brooklyn Robins for the National League lead today, although they remained a few points behind in percentage. They accomplished the feat by defeating Brooklyn, 4 to 2, in a close mound duel between Pat Malone and Ray Phelps. It was Chicago's second straight victory in the series.

Malone allowed but seven hits and scattered them through six innings, while Phelps permitted the Cubs to bunch a few of their nine blows in the fifth and seventh frames for three of their runs.

Kiki Cuyler led the Chicago hitting with a double and two singles, while Grimm made two doubles.

Al Mamaux Made Newark Manager

NEWARK, N. J., June 28.—The appointment of Al Mamaux, pitching ace, as manager of the Newark club of the International League, was announced today by President J. P. Sinnott. Mamaux succeeds Tris Speaker, who resigned last week.

Mamaux, who is 36 years old, got his major league start with the Pittsburg Pirates in 1913, going to Brooklyn in 1918 in the trade that sent Burleigh Grimes and Aaron Ward to the Robins for Casey Stengel and George Cutshaw.

REDS FOR FIRST TIME WIN FOUR IN ROW

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—For the first time this season the Reds have won four games in a row, accomplishing the feat today by rallying three runs in the seventh which earned a 5 to 4 decision over the Boston Braves.

Stripp led the Cincinnati attack with three hits, one a double, in four times at bat.

The Reds used four pitchers. Boston knocked Kolp from the mound in the third inning.

PRINCESS PEROXIDE BEATS FIELD OF BEST 2-YEAR-OLDS AT FAIRMOUNT

BIRTHDAY GIFT, THE ODDS-ON FAVORITE, FINISHES FIFTH: GENUINE CAPTURES THE FOURTH

By Dent McSkimming.

Another 2-year-old sensation bit the dust at Fairmount yesterday afternoon when Birthday Gift, heralded as a coming champion, winner of his only two previous starts, finished fifth as Princess Peroxide triumphed in the Fairmount Golf Club Stakes. The Princess thus took the mythical title of champion of 2-year-olds for the meeting. Battle Sweep was second and Foolhardy third.

So far as Princess Peroxide's victory is concerned, the race was truly run. She had started five times before at Fairmount, winning twice, finished third twice and fourth on the other occasion, beaten only three lengths. So, too, had Battle Sweep, a perfect right to challenge the winner and Foolhardy also was a logical contender.

Birthday Gift Quoted at 1 to 2.

The failure of Birthday Gift was a shock to the patrons. He went to the post at the unusually short odds of 1 to 2. He had won two races in impressive style and had burned up the track in workouts. His trainer, A. V. Thomas, confidently predicted the gelding would break the track record.

The field of eleven was held at the post for nine minutes and when the barrier was sprung Birthday Gift was flat-footed. Before Judy could get him moving, the others were far ahead. Princess Peroxide in front, increasing her advantage at every stride. Then Birthday Gift started to run. Fifteenth lengths back of the leader, he started his drive. He caught and passed one horse after another until, as they reached the turn, he had only Foolhardy and Princess Peroxide before him. In the middle of the turn he poked his nose in front of Foolhardy's but this was the high water mark of his drive.

The burden of 118 pounds and the tremendous effort entailed in passing up nine horses sapped the strength of the youngster and he wilted.

Foolhardy regained second position and Battle Sweep and Master Halligan also came on to pass him up in the run through the stretch. Princess Peroxide a very weary horse, staggered up to the finish line a half a length in front of Battle Sweep.

Princess Peroxide was well ridden by Joe Serio, whose alertness at the post had much to do with the filly's early advantage. The refund on the winner was $24.78.

The Saturday crowd only comfortably filled the grand stand. It was estimated that 4500 attended.

The secondary feature went to Mrs. W. J. Potter's consistent horse Genuine, which has not been out of the money in his last six starts. Cimerak had him off well from the six furlong barrier and except for a brief challenge by Sawdust, he had the race to himself all the way. His time for the three-quarters was 1:12 4-5. Essie, fighting a game battle was nosed out for second money by Calome. Irfaneh came with a rush through the stretch far on the outside, and finished fourth, a move which indicates the mare is near the top of her form.

Sir Raoul winner of the sixth had the race all but won at the head of the stretch when Cimerak suddenly brought Virado up to challenge. It was then that Sir Raoul exhibited unusual stamina and courage for he put on a second burst of speed and quickly drew away from this serious threat, and he was going well at the finish. Sterling Silver finished third.

Thistle Gold Takes Opener.

In winning the first race of the day, Thistle Gold merely had to be the best of a very bad lot.

Griff W. lost the second race only because Cimerak had him away poorly as the barrier was sprung. He was last as they reached the half-mile ground, but he came with such a rush that he passed all but two horses, and was beat only a head for second money. Cuevas was the winner and Kit Carson was second.

Black Dancer warmed up for the occasion, scored a surprise victori in overtaking Melita in the stretch to win the third race. Lansqunet also showing improved form, came fast in the stretch to finish third.

Victory in Dwyer Stakes Makes His Earnings $210,230

GALLANT FOX.

SANDE PILOTS GALLANT FOX TO VICTORY IN DWYER STAKES

By the Associated Press.

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., June 28.—William Woodward's Gallant Fox, winner of the Wood Memorial, Preakness, Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Stakes, added the Dwyer Stakes to his list when he won that event here today and by his victory can be acclaimed champion of the 3-year-old division.

Gallant Fox was ridden by Sande and the veteran rode a perfect race on the son of Sir Galahad III. The colt carried 126 pounds and ran the mile and one-half in 2:32 2-5, which is 3 and 2-5 seconds slower than the track record for the distance.

Gallant Fox has won a grand total of $210,230 in his two years of racing and stands an excellent chance of surpassing Zev's record of $313,000.

While Gallant Fox won, he did not win with the ease in which he scored his previous victories. Sande had to use the whip freely on the colt. At the far turn Sande hit Gallant Fox and again in the stretch the boy used the whip but Gallant Fox gave his best.

GOG-A-MAN SETS TRACK RECORD AT KINGSHIGHWAY

Gog-a-Man, running in the eighth race at Kingshighway Kennel Club last night broke the track record for five-sixteenths of a mile, when he ran the distance in 32 1-5 seconds, which is one-fifth of a second slower than the world's record. Jolly Irishman, which held the old mark of 32 2-5, was second to Gog-a-Man.

Copperhead, by winning the sixth race, defended his title as champion at the three-sixteents distance.

PAUL BUNYAN WINS PEABODY STAKE BY HEAD FROM IRONSIDES

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Paul Bunyan, which has the habit of turning in a brilliant race when a large purse is at stake, took the measure of 10 classy thoroughbreds today to win the Francis S. Peabody Handicap, the feature of the closing day at Washington Park.

Little considered in the wagering because of the presence of such consistent performers as Sun Beau and The Nut, the 4-year-old chestnut son of Paul Weidel paid $32.94 for his victorious jaunt over the mile and a quarter track.

Ironsides, a 5-year-old son of Man O'War owned by C. B. Irvin, finished second only a head back of the driving Paul Bunyan with R. Cardwell's Lady Broadcast third. The winner stepped the route in 2:04 3-5 to earn the $11,050 purse.

For the greater part of the journey Jockey Morrison rated Paul Bunyan close to the leaders but heading into the stretch, he let his mount pass the pace-setting Ironsides, which had moved up slowly. Far from being beaten, however, the offspring of the super-horse came again but just failed to get up, although defeating Lady Broadcast by a length and a half.

Jean Valjean, The Nut, Ben Machree, Galahad, Whiskery and Sun Beau, the Eastern favorite, finished in that order.

Uncle Martin	108	1	5	5^{h}	8	10	10	H. R. Riley	32.47

Thistle Gold broke forwardly, followed the pace to the stretch, where he drew into the lead and had enough left to withstand the challenge of Lady O'Neil. The latter worked her way to the leaders, made a game bid, but could not overhaul the winner. Elfish, outrun to the final quarter, slipped through on the rail and was going gamely at the end. Henry Sommers made up some ground. Doctor Glenn showed early speed. Betty Dean got to the lead, then ran out badly at the stretch turn and lost much ground. Curveur was outrun to the stretch, then made up some ground.

Two-dollar mutuels paid: Thistle Gold, win $18.58, place $11.38, show $5.16; Lady O'Nell, place $9.50, show $4.56; Elfish, show $3.54.

Pitcher Bair, a school star of Philadelphia, has joined the Fairmount Black Diamonds. He was recommended by Manager Burt Shotton of the Phillies.

LA HAY HITS THREE HOMERS BUT BELL TEAM IS DEFEATED, 10 TO 7

WO PITCHERS WIN TWIN BILLS; NINE IN A ROW OR TOWER CAMP

La Hay, second baseman on the Bell Employes' team, hit three home runs and a single in six times at bat yesterday afternoon, but the Bell team was defeated by the Manchesters, 10 to 7, in the Commercial League of the Municipal Baseball Association.

Tower Camp won its ninth consecutive game in the Commercial League, defeating the Custodians, 23 to 0. Wielandy and Harshany, who shared the pitching duties for the winners, allowed only three hits, two of which were made off Wielandy in the first three innings.

There were two fine pitching performances turned in by hurlers who pitched double-headers yesterday. Williams of the Western Electrics allowed the Peters Shoe team only two hits and one run in the first and four hits and no runs in the second game. The teams are in the Y. M. C. A. No. 1 division.

Zurkel of Moloneys in the Y. M. C. A. No. 2, twirled his team to a dual victor over the Quick Meals, 14 to 4 and 5 to 3. Zurkel permitted four hits in the first and eight hits in the second contest.

Wabash easily won the first game of a twin bill from the Terra Cottas, 11 to 0, when Hamblin shut out the Terra Cottas on two hits. The teams are in the Y. M. C. A. No. 1 division. Terra Cotta won the second contest, 16 to 10.

Another two-hit pitching performance was turned in by Gossrow of the Candy Boosters, in the Junior Employed Boys' League, the Boosters winning, 4 to 0.

Altmensberger in the Junior Evangelical League, yielded only one hit and fanned 19 Zion batters in seven innings. Altmensberger hurls for the Independents.

The Calvary Baptists of the Sunday School League, tried out Millinkamp, a new pitcher, yesterday, and he let down East Grand with three hits and no run, while striking out 10 and walking three. The score was 4 to 0.

CALIFORNIA GIRL WINS COLLEGE NET TITLE

BROOKLINE, Mass., June 28.—Josephine N. Cruickshank of the University of California gained the girls' intercollegiate singles tennis title by defeating Marjorie L. Sachs of Radcliffe College and Cambridge, the former North and South champion, 6—1, 6—0, here today at the Longwood grass courts.

The tournament, which failed to attract Marjorie Gladman of the University of Southern California, East to defend her 1929 title, was dominated at every stage by Miss Cruickshank, who advanced through four rounds before losing a single game.

Miss Cruickshank joined forces with Dorrance Chase, Simmons' student, and gained the doubles title by defeating Miss Sachs and Fanny Curtis, after a hard fight. The scores were 6—3, 5—7, 6—3.

HINES AND BEAVER WIN COTTON STATES NET CHAMPIONSHIP

ANNISTON, Ala., June 28.—Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., and "Judge" Beaver of Gainesville, Ga., today won the cotton states senior tennis doubles championship by defeating Jack Mooney and George Boynton of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6—2, 7—5, 6—2.

They won the junior doubles title here yesterday by default.

Senators Try Out Two.

Pitcher Barre and Infielder Nash, both of whom played on the Kansas Aggie team this spring, have joined the Hartford Senators for trials.

COMPETITION ON PLAYGROUNDS TO BEGIN TOMORROW

With 63 of the public school playgrounds competing, the annual season of inter-playground games will get under way this week on the play centers maintained in various parts of the city by the Board of Education. Tomorrow, 28 of the playgrounds will open their schedules, while on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, the remaining centers will swing into action. The season this year will be of six weeks' duration, and a total of 3780 games will be played during that period in the nine forms of inter-playground sport.

This year, as last, there will be five games for boys and four for girls. Junior boys will play dodge ball and horseshoes, while intermediates are to take part in baseball. Senior boys will play baseball and pitch horseshoes. In the girls sports there has been one change from last season, in that intermediates will play captain ball this summer instead of end ball. Juniors will play end ball, while seniors are to take part in net handball and volleyball.

Age Limit in Two Divisions.

Among the boys, those under 15 years of age and less than 55 inches tall are juniors, while the age limit is the same for intermediates, although they may be up to 58 inches in height. Senior boys must be under 16 years old and not more than 65 inches tall. Girls, to qualify as juniors, must be less than 15 years old and 55 inches in height, while intermediates cannot be more than 62 inches tall. Seniors may not be over 15 years of age or taller than 65 inches.

The 56 playgrounds for white children have been divided into 14 groups, and each playground of a group is scheduled to play each other play center in its group twice in each of the nine games. The various group champions in the different games will then meet in an elimination series, to determine the two finalists in each sport who are to play at the Festival in the Public Schools Stadium on Aug. 23 for the city championship.

Few of last year's title-holders are favored to repeat this season. Oak Hill School playground, winner of the senior baseball championship for three successive summers, has been hard hit by ineligibility and is not expected to reach the finals. The Oak Hill crew opens against Long on Tuesday. The intermediate baseball champions, Dozier, start their season by taking on Hamilton on Thursday. Scullin, winner of senior horseshoes, will undertake the defense of its title on Tuesday against Harrison, while the junior champions, Carondelet, meet Des Peres in their opening match on Wednesday. Dozier, winner of dodge ball in 1928 and 1929, will attempt to make it three in a row when it begins the season against Hamilton on Thursday.

Girls Start Play Wednesday.

In the girls' games, Laclede, winner of the volleyball title last summer, plays Hempstead on Wednesday, while on Tuesday the net handball champions, the Farragut girls, open against Ashland, and the 1929 end ball winners, Hodgen, meet Grant on the same day.

THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE.

MONDAY.

BOYS: Gardenville at Buder, Shaw at Mullanphy, Humboldt at Clinton, Glasgow at Columbia, Farragut at Ashland, Emerson at Arlington, Mark Twain at Baden.

GIRLS: Lyon at Woodward, Mason at Wilkinson, Froebel at Scruggs, Rock Spring at Wyman, Cupples at Stix, Dozier at Hamilton, Eliot at Lowell.

TUESDAY.

ST. LOUIS STARS TAKE SERIES OPENER FROM CHICAGO GIANTS, 16-7

The St. Louis Stars of the Negro National Baseball League defeated the Chicago American Giants in the opening game of their series yesterday at the Stars' Park. The score was 16 to 7. Bell furnished the fielding features of the contest when he raced to deep center field to snare flies hit in that section. Hensley, the winning pitcher, scored his tenth victory out of 12 starts this season for the St. Louis Stars.

There will be a double-header this afternoon between the same teams with the first contest starting at 1:30 o'clock.

DENMARK WINS AND QUALIFIES FOR FINAL IN CUP YACHT SERIES

GOTHENBERG, Sweden, June 28.—Denmark won the fifth day's sail in the competition for the Gold Cup with Sweden second and the United States third. The representatives of these three nations thereby qualified for the final race. Times for the entries were: Denmark, 2 hours, 21 minutes, 39 seconds; Sweden, 2:22:30; United States, 2:25:25; Holland, 2:24:52; Norway, 2:25:42; Finland, 2:25:44.

THREE HEAVYWEIGHT MAT BOUTS SCHEDULED FOR BATTERY A ARENA

The second outdoor wrestling show of the summer season will take place Wednesday night at the Battery A arena, where Promoter Tom Packs has three heavyweight matches scheduled. In the finish bout, Daviscourt, stormy California headlock artist, will take on Jim Clinstock, powerful Oklahoma Indian.

Clinstock and Daviscourt have been very successful on the local mat. The Indian has won all his local bouts, with the exception of his scrap with Champion Jimmy Londos and Dick Shikat, former title-holder. In his last bout here he pinned Fred Grobmeier, rangy Iowan, in the quick time of 13 minutes. Daviscourt has been scoring triumphs with great regularity. His last two local battles saw him win over Grobmeier and Frank Judson, former Harvard wrestling instructor.

In the semi-windup bout, limited to one hour of milling, George Hagen, former champion of the Marine Corps, faces August Bankart, of Sweden. Hagen wrestled Rudy Dusek to a draw on the last local mat card. Bankart has been in this country only a short time, but, nevertheless, he has met most of the top-notchers.

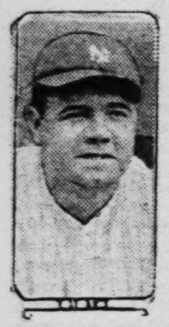
RUTH PICKS CUBS, GIANTS AND ROBINS TO FIGHT IT OUT FOR FLA

ATHLETICS NEED GREAT PITCHING TO WIN IN A. L. 'BABE' DECLARES

By Babe Ruth.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The next two weeks are likely to be important ones in both leagues. If the Yankees are to win the pennant they'll have to make their real bid for it during this present home stay. And if the Dodgers are to win in the National League they'll have to prove their class on this road trip they're on right now.

A lot of baseball fans have expressed real surprise at the slump of the Athletics last week. Personally I'm not surprised. I've got the A's doped about this way. They need real pitching to win. If the pitchers can duplicate the work of last season the pennant will stick right in Philadelphia. But if the pitching ever falls off they're sunk. The infield and the club defense isn't strong enough to win without high-class pitching and if it comes down to a matter of punch both the Yankees and the Cleveland Indians will have it on the A's.



BABE RUTH.

I've had a lot of letters recently asking me if it was true that there was dissension among the Philadelphia players. Naturally I am not in any position to know about that. But frankly I don't believe it. I've known those Athletic players for a long time—ever since they came into the league as a matter of fact. I've known Connie Mack longer than I have the players. And it's my own opinion that the A's as ballplayers are entirely too smart to let dissension and argument bother then in their fight for a pennant. You always hear stories like that about clubs that are in a slump.

Earlier in the spring a lot of stories went around to the effect that the Yankee players were fighting Bob Shawkey and wouldn't play ball for him. The untruth of those statements is shown by the present standing of the club, and the A's probably will answer the slander stories about them the same way.

Looks Like Three-Team Race.

The National League race, which started out to be a six-club affair, isn't looking as close now as it did earlier. Right now it looks like three teams would be in the fight to the finish—the Dodgers, the Giants and the Cubs. The Giants, on paper, look the strongest of the lot—but you can't discount Brooklyn's batting punch and the caliber of Uncle Robbie's pitching staff. So long as Vance, Luque, Phelps, Clark and the rest can pitch a high brand of ball, the Dodgers will be in that race right up to their chins. And unless the Giants can get a little better brand of pitching than they have been getting, they're likely to finish back of both the Cubs and the Dodgers.

You know, there's this to be said for Brooklyn, too: They don't get credit for being as good as they are. Most of the fans are so accustomed to see the Dodgers kicking around in the second division that they can't believe their eyes now when they see Brooklyn up there at the top. And they can't believe, either, that it isn't all a joke.

That very fact is in the Dodgers' favor, too. For the other clubs didn't take the early season spurt very seriously and now when they begin to get wise to the fact that Uncle Robbie has a trouble maker, the Dodgers are so far out front that they're hard to catch. I picked them way back, like most of the other critics, and I'm one of the fellows who find it hard to believe that the Dodgers are really in the race. But, more power to them. There's no one I'd rather see win than Uncle Robbie, and I certainly would get a kick out of playing Brooklyn in a world series.

Does Not Expect to Set Mark.

A lot of people seem to think I have a pretty good chance of setting a new home run record this season. Personally I hardly expect to. To beat that mark of 60 I would have to have about all the breaks there are. Sixty home runs a year you know is an average of about one homer every two and a half games, and that's quite a mark.

There are other records that I'm more interested in than the home run mark right now. One of them is scoring runs. Thus far this season I've scored enough runs to put me well on the way to a new record and if pitchers continue to give me bases on balls every other time I'm up I'll break the scoring record. You know there's one thing I don't believe in and that's the intentional pass. I'll admit there are occasions now and then when it's good strategy to pass a man, but when they give out bases on balls like they have to me this spring it's a laugh. All you have to do is look at the record to see what happens.

Anna 17, Carterville 3

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ANNA, Ill., June 28.—The Anna sluggers buried Carterville here today under a score of 17 to 3. Gubleman nipped Emrich, Carterville pitcher, for two home runs, while Hagebush, a young Washington U. student, held Carterville hitless for six innings.

WRAY'S Column

"fouls have spoiled ring contests representing $2,000,000 of gate receipts, the State commission says and does nothing."

It charges that in nine years the commission has done nothing to improve boxing conditions and has proved itself incompetent to deal with a real crisis. It calls upon the Governor to replace the present members of the commission, one of whom is octogenarian William Muldoon.

At long range it would appear that the commission hasn't done much during its tenure of office except create antagonism and maintain a haughty attitude toward other boxing commissions.

They Do It Right.

IT was noticeable that the Pennsylvania commission, confronted with exactly the same situation as developed in the Schmeling-Sharkey affair, handled its crisis with decision and common sense. The referee knew his business, there was no mobbing of the ring by seconds and managers: no wordy arguments or threats by irate handlers—everything was disposed of systematically and sensibly.

The administration of justice the next day at the commission hearing was firm but fair. Godfrey got his. Carnera was commended for his fine showing.

New York might go to school to Pennsylvania, in this matter.

The Week's Fights.

THREE or four fistic entanglements will interest fans this week. The only one of title proportions is the fight on July 4 at San Francisco between Young Jack Thompson, new welter title holder, and Young Corbett.

This bout may see Corbett gain the crown. In a previous meeting he defeated Thompson and he may repeat it.

The welter class has some very good fighters, but there isn't any red-hot interest looked for until Jimmy McLarnin gets into action. That's the boy they all want to see.

Primo Carnera has a bout scheduled with the Negro, Bearcat Wright, at Omaha, next Wednesday, but has asked a postponement of one week to get ready for it. Primo was in splendid condition for the Godfrey fight and ought not to need much polishing for the Bearcat, who is just a third-rater.

Earl Mastro, the handsome little bantam fighter, and Buddy Taylor are scheduled to fight Tuesday. The old war horse, Taylor, is still good, but Earl is lightning fast. If he could hit a little harder Earl would be a standout in this division. As it is, he throws a storm of gloves and is hard to outbox.

Two "eliminated" heavyweight candidates will fight at Chicago Wednesday. Johnny Risko, who seems to be going better now than at any time of his career, will oppose Tuffy Griffiths, a phenomenon exploded more than once. Tuffy isn't rugged enough for this class. Although he holds a decision over Risko, the wise boys are figuring that Tuffy has passed out of the picture and the Rubber Man will outlast him.

Up to Carnera.

THE chance for some interesting heavyweight activity this summer seems to rest with Carnera and his schedule. If Primo were matched with Campolo, Von Porat or some other big men it would afford him much-needed fighting experience and enable him to prove that his showing against Godfrey was not a flash in the pan.

NEW DRIVERS IN RACES TODAY AT CREVE COEUR

Twenty-one prominent dirt track automobile drivers will seek honors at the Speedway at Upper Creve Coeur Lake this afternoon.

The 21 who will compete in the 45 miles of racing on the program will not be known until the speed trials are concluded at noon, but it is expected that several favorites, including Young Howdy Wilcox of Indianapolis, Howard "Speed" Adams of Cedar Rapids, Pat Cunningham of St. Joseph, Mo., and Art Withrow and Bryan Saulpaugh of St. Louis will survive the time tests.

Several drivers new to St. Louis are entered in the eliminations.

A five-mile championship race for the six drivers making the best time in the trials and a 20-mile event for the three winners in each of the five-mile preliminaries, feature the card. The victor in the championship test will be crowned "speed king" of the track, irrespective of his showing in the long grind. There also will be a five-mile consolation affair for those who fail to finish in the money in the three preliminaries.

Cash awards will total $1300, purses in the main event being $500, $200 and $100, and in each of the five five-mile events, $50, $30 and $20.

The first race will start promptly at 2:30 o'clock, with the other numbers following at half-hour intervals, making the start of the championship event at 4:30 and the 20-mile at 5.

Louis E. "Ed" Montgomery, president of the track, announced that parking will be free, beginning today.

The entries follow:

Leo Kracke, L-4; Roscoe Ford, 13; Howard "Speed" Adams, 300; Bennie Booker 17; Bill McCoy, 15; James Ewers, 87; Young Howdy Wilcox, 1; Bod Stroud, 4; John Boyd, 3; Vernon McComb, 500; Teddy Barnes, 12; Doc Jones, 32; Ben Galion, 53; Toots Campo, 38-2; Joe Hesseling, 76; George Barringer, 22; Pat Cunningham, 700; Earl Hovender, 60; J. Y. Davis, 7-11; Pete Alberts, C-4; "Red" Campbell, 7; G. R. Davis, 77; Charles Lichtenberg, 5; Arthur Knepper, 1; Oscar Buschman, 4; Ogle Brown, 29; John Tersinor, V-5; Art Withrow, 26; Bryan Saulpaugh, 100; Fred Fansin, 8; J. M. Cagany, 10.

Busses will run to the track from the end of the Delmar Olive line in University City, from 7100 Manchester, and from Wells avenue and the Hodiamont tracks.

EAST ST. LOUIS MUNY NET CHAMPIONSHIPS TO START ON JULY 19

Saturday, July 19, has been the date selected for the start of the Municipal Athletic Association's annual tennis championships on the Jones Park courts in East St. Louis.

Honors are to be decided in the boys, juniors and men's division and juniors and seniors for women. The entries are to close on Thursday, July 17, at 5 p. m., and all residents of the East St. Louis Park District are eligible to compete.

WRAY BROWN WINS ARKANSAS TENNIS TITLE

FORT SMITH, Ark., June 28.—Flashing the same brilliant tennis which has characterized his years of play in national circles, Wray D. Brown of St. Louis, today added the Arkansas State Tennis title to his list in a sparkling finals match with Arch Holder, defending champion, at the Fort Smith Country Club courts. The Missouri Valley Champion won in straight sets, 6—1, 6—1 and 6—0.

Following up his morning singles triumph, Brown returned to the court in the afternoon with Edmund Serrano, to capture the Arkansas doubles crown in a spirited match with the two Karls, Kaumann and Hodge, also of St. Louis. The scores of the match were 3—6, 6—0, 6—3 and 6—0.

The brilliant, and at times spectacular, play of Brown overshadowed all others in the final matches, just as his steady work throughout preliminary rounds stamped him as possibly the greatest player ever to appear on an Arkansas court. There was no apparent weakness in any department of the Missourian's game as he bowled aside some of the leading lights of both his State and several of the southern states.

Holder, a 20-year-old lad playing his second major tournament and in his fifth year of competitive play, fought a spirited battle against the more experienced Brown and went down with colors flying.

STOCK BEARS FIND EFFORTS INCREASINGLY INEFFECTUAL

Share Prices, as Measured by Index of 90 Issues Actually Show a Gain for the Week of 1 4-5 Points, Although Index Made a New 1930 Low Tuesday.

SATURDAY'S TRADE IS SLOWEST IN 2 YEARS

Selling of Motor Accessory Shares and a Few Rails Brings About Moderate Declines but Demand for General Electric Prompts a Covering Movement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28. — The grand bear barbecue in the stock market has dragged wearily through its fourth week, so wearily that by today the bears had mostly either gone to sleep, or gone home. This carnival of pessimists has monopolized the speculative pastures for so long that the bulls have grown too lean, or too timid, to charge in and take command, as they might normally be expected to do under the circumstances.

Bearish efforts during the week have been increasingly ineffectual, and trading has lagged until today the turnover on the Stock Exchange was the smallest in nearly two years. Stock prices, as measured by the Standard Statistics Index of 90 shares actually show a gain for the week of 1 4-5 points, although the index was depressed on Tuesday to a new low for the year, the lowest level since the troublesome days of November. The index of 20 rails actually broke through the November bottom, and recorded the lowest level since 1927.

No Technical Bebound.

With the market apparently dragging on bottom, Wall Street is perplexed that no violent technical rebound occurs. The fact seems to be that speculators for the rise have had such bad luck during the past two months that they haven't the courage to resume aggressive operations until business news becomes favorable enough to give them a decided advantage in dealing with the Bears. Professional speculation during the past few days seems to have been almost entirely for the decline, but the market seems to be completely sold out. Nevertheless, there is no sure sign that it is, and a number of big bear traders are still waiting around.

Constructive interests in the market are hopeful that the midyear reinvestment demand may turn the tide in decisive manner. More than $1,000,000,000 will be made available for investment in early July by the midyear interest and dividend payments. Some brokers report that there has already developed a considerable stream of bargain hunter and investment buying, and what with the thorough cleaning out of weak marginal accounts, the technical condition of the market should be strong.

On the other hand, a survey by one of the ntion's largest banks indicates that the decline is more than of seasonal proportions. Second quarter earnings statements will be appearing shortly, and they are not expected to be very cheerful in many cases, and there are still more dividends that are expected to be reduced. An upward trend in business is expected to make its appearance late in July or in August.

Experiment Was Costly.

Pessimism has reigned supreme in Wall street, and has probably been carried to extremes, but under present conditions, constructive interests say there is no use trying to put stocks up by talk, particularly since the cheerful talk of a few months ago has proven so costly.

Some of the leading commodity markets were again acutely weak early in the week, and like stocks, failed to show much recuperative power. Steel production declined only slightly, but indications are for a further dip next week, with vacations an influence. Brokers' loans dropped $371,000,000 the largest drop since the panic days, but there is a feeling one quarter that transfer of loans from brokerage accounts directly to banks may have been a factor. Wall street would be more certain that hangover liquidation was completed if

LOCAL STOCK TRADE QUIETER DURING WEEK

Volume of Business Shows Marked Recession From Previous Week, but Total Is Near That of Recent Periods — Some Leaders Rise.

Trading on the St. Louis Stock Exchange fell off sharply during the last week, aggregate business amounting to but about 35 per cent of that the preceding week, but improvement in prices was noted in some of the old-time leaders. The volume was nearer the level of recent weeks.

Wagner Electric and International Shoe, the two most active shares of the week moved within a range of only about a point. The shoe issue, however, recorded a new 1929-30 low before selling net higher. Wagner closed one-half point higher after being down early in week.

National Candy sold higher while Ely-Walker and Hydraulic Press Brick preferred recorded declines. Scullin Steel preference closed higher. Rice-Stix sold at 13.

Johnson, Stephen, Shinkle sold up four points and Dr. Pepper which dropped 11½ points the previous week on decline to 37½ sold up to 42, for a recovery of four and one-half points, Landis Machine gained seven, selling between 32 and 37.

In the banking group, First National Bank sold between 78¾ and 79½. The stock sold ex-dividend 25 cents on Friday. Mercantile-Commerce sold at 245 to 251.

bank loans on securities would come down. Call money on Thursday touched 1½ per cent for the first time in 13 years, but cheap money will not be helpful to stocks until someone decides to use it.

Prospects for the bond market are regarded as the most cheerful, particularly since the further drop in call money rates. In fact, bonds began to show a better tone, although demand was not very actvie, the condition statement of New York member bank showed a gain of about $30,000,000 in security investments, and with money as cheap as it is, bond dealers hope that banking and institutional demand for bonds will increase.

Slowest Day in Two Years.

Transactions today amounted to only 586,590 shares.

With many traders out of town for the week-end, there was little to influence the course of prices one way or the other. Selling of motor accesory shares and a few rails brought out moderate declines but the appearance of a demand for General Electric in the late dealings prompted a covering movement and the close was irregular. U. S. Steel, American Can, Radio, American Telephone and General Motors showed fractional advances.

Bearish activities of the first hour and a half were on a turnover that seemed destined to establish a new low Saturday volume for the past four years. Sales to 11:30 o'clock totaled only 350,000 shares, so that the covering movement of the last 30 minutes accounted for a large proportion of the day's business.

The strength in General Electric, which closed 1¾ higher, spread to Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, Vanadium, American Tobacco "B," National Biscuit and Electric Power and Light, up 1 to nearly 3 points. Timken Roller Bearing and Electric Auto Lite declined to new lows, the latter regaining part of its decline. Southern Railway was again in supply and was pushed to another new minimum of 89⅛, closing at 89⅞ for a 2½-point loss.

Rail Earning Statement.

St. Louis-San Francisco, Erie and Rock Island were also heavy. North American, after dropping more than 2 points, recovered.

Most of the railroad earnings statements coming to hand today showed large declines in May net operating income. The Youngstown steel district reported that Republic Steel would maintain operations next week at 65 per cent of capacity because of an increase in pipe orders, but that Sheet and Tube is reducing to 60 per cent of rated capacity from 65.

Wheat and corn averaked about a cent lower, but cotton made small net advances.

Foreign Exchange rates were irregular. Sterling cables advances, but the Spanish peseta continued its slump.

BUSINESS INDICATOR

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Building in the region east of the Rocky Mountains spurted sharply during the week ended June 21, and for the first time in months indicated a gain over the corresponding period of last year. Figures that follow are the report of contracts executed for comparable periods and filed with the Census Bureau:

Week ended June 21	$22,666,000
Previous week	15,673,000
Same week of 1929	20,454,000

Cities Service to California.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—A new giant in California oil was seen in announcement by President Henry L. Doherty that the Cities Service Co., $1,000,000,000 Eastern oil marketing corporation, will extend its activities to the Pacific Coast.

Doherty, here to study California oil markets, said his company plans to purchase existing facilities but if those negotiations fail, a new distributing and marketing structure will be built.

COPPER MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A fair day to day busines for export continued in copper but domestic fabricators, who are said to be covered well ahead, remained generally out of the market. An inquiry for 600 tons of wire was reported to be the only sizeable domestic business outstanding. After recent fluctuations, the market has held steady at 12 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut valley. Previous offerings from cupstom smelters at concessions were absorbed and there was no pressure from that source.

Tin prices reacted from early week steadiness owing to the setback in London and reports that some producers were not in sympathy with proposals to curtail operations.

A decline of $3 a ton in the price of lead failed to stimulate demand, but there was a little more inquiry with the market steady at the end of the week.

Zinc continued to work lower.

G. H. WALKER RETURNS TO ST. LOUIS BROKERAGE

Resigned Post With Harriman & Co., New York to Become Partner of Firm Here.

G. H. Walker, a former St. Louisan and former partner in the St. Louis firm of G. H. Walker & Co., has resigned from W. A. Harriman & Co., New York, and is again a partner in G. H. Walker & Co., it was announced yesterday.

At the firm's office it was said Walker was still in New York and was undecided as to whether his future business activity would be here or there. The reason for the change was not announced.

FIRST CAR OF NEW WHEAT BRINGS 98C AT AUCTION

The first car of new wheat was on the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange today and was auctioned off at 98 cents a bushel. The grain was grown at Painton, Mo., and tested 63 pounds to the bushel. The moisture content was 10.4 per cent, which was said to be low for new wheat. The grain, which contained 2 per cent rye, graded No. 2. The car was received by the J. H. Teasdale Commission Co. and was bought by the Commonwealth Mills.

Earlier in the week sample was shown on the floor of wheat delivered to a nearby elevator operated by a local firm.

DIVIDEND DECLARATIONS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Directors of the Sharon Steel Hoop Co. have declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common shares, payable July 25 to stock of record July 5, placing that issue on a $1 annual basis compared with $2 paid previously. A statement issued by the directors said it was deemed wise to conserve the "present excellent current position of the company until a more definite forward movement in business is in evidence."

HIGH GRADE RAIL LIENS MAKE BEST SHOWING

Bond Prices Continue Irregular —Broad List of Issues Figure in Activity.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—High grade railroad issues made the best showing in bond trading today, as prices continued irregular.

A broad list of issues participated in the activity which was above the usual standard for the half-day session closing the week. High-grade corporation issues were fairly steady, with speculative issues easier. Convertibles were irregular.

Railroad bonds showing moderate gain included Canadian National 5s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, St. Paul 5s and 4¾s, Erie 5s of '75, Great Northern 4½s, several Pennsylvania issues, Southern Railway 6½, Reading General 4½s and Union Pacific refunding 4s. Central Railroad of New Jersey 5s rose 1¼ points and Texas Pacific 5 B's gained nearly a point.

The convertible group was more stable than it has been all week. Atchison 4½s and New York, New Haven 6s gained more than a point. Among warrant issues Pathe 7s appreciated nearly 3.

The weakness of Bolivian and Colombian issues was the feature of the foreign group. Losses ranged from 1 to 5 points. Trading in foreign issues was largely of a speculative character with European Governments quiet. Norway 6s, Norwegian Hydro Electric 5½s, German 5½s, were the most active and steady. Swiss 5½s sold near the year's high, with a gain of ⅞ of a point. Estonia 7s dropped 2 points to a new low.

Turnover in United States Governments was small and little change resulted. Liberty first 4¼s reached a new high for the year.

COTTON PRICES HIGHER IN A QUIET MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Cotton was quiet here today, but showed a generally steady undertone on week-end covering which seemed to be promoted by prospects for continued hot weather in the South, and relatively steady Liverpool cables.

July contracts sold up to 13.60c and closed at 13.59c, while the new October advanced to 13.06c and closed at 13.02c, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 6 to 9 points. Spot was quiet, middling 13.70c.

The opening was steady at an advance of 6 points to a decline of 4 points, near months being higher on the better cables, while there was some liquidation in the latter deliveries. The selling was limited, however, and after the initial offerings had been absorbed on setbacks of two or three points, the market steadied up on a moderate demand. This was attributed largely to covering, but there may have been some local buying late in the morning on the prospect for continued high temperatures in the western belt. The old October contract advanced to 13.31c and the new December to 13.22c, with the more active months showing net advances of about 6 to 12 points at the best. Closing quotations were a few points off under realizing on some positions.

A report was said to have reached the market here from the Southwest referring to unfavorable effects of recent high temperatures on the plant, while there seemed little prospect of anything more than possible showers in central belt sections next week, so far as indicated by the week-end forecast. Reports of a steadier tone in the stock market may have been a contributing factor on the late morning upturn in cotton, but trading was not active and some brokers attributed the fluctuations chiefly to the usual week-end evening up of accounts.

Cable received here from Liverpool said there had been continental buying together with covering and end-month trade calling in that market, but reported that the sales of cotton cloths and yarns were unimportant with buyers cautious. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 67,000 bales, against 60,742 last year. A private crop report was issued placing the decrease in acreage at 3.3 per cent, the condition at 71 per cent and the indicated yield at 14,435,000 bales.

HIGH GRADE RAIL LIENS MAKE BEST SHOWING

Bond Prices Continue Irregular —Broad List of Issues Figure in Activity.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—High grade railroad issues made the best showing in bond trading today, as prices continued irregular.

A broad list of issues participated in the activity which was above the usual standard for the half-day session closing the week. High-grade corporation issues were fairly steady, with speculative issues easier. Convertibles were irregular.

Railroad bonds showing moderate gain included Canadian National 5s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s, St. Paul 5s and 4¾s, Erie 5s of '75, Great Northern 4½s, several Pennsylvania issues, Southern Railway 6½, Reading General 4½s and Union Pacific refunding 4s. Central Railroad of New Jersey 5s rose 1½ points and Texas Pacific 5 B's gained nearly a point.

The convertible group was more stable than it has been all week. Atchison 4½s and New York, New Haven 6s gained more than a point. Among warrant issues Pathe 7s appreciated nearly 3.

The weakness of Bolivian and Colombian issues was the feature of the foreign group. Losses ranged from 1 to 5 points. Trading in foreign issues was largely of a speculative character with European Governments quiet. Norway 6s, Norwegian Hydro Electric 5½s, German 5½s, were the most active and steady. Swiss 5½s sold near the year's high, with a gain of ⅞ of a point. Estonia 7s dropped 2 points to a new low.

Turnover in United States Governments was small and little change resulted. Liberty first 4¼s reached a new high for the year.

COTTON PRICES HIGHER IN A QUIET MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Cotton was quiet here today, but showed a generally steady undertone on week-end covering which seemed to be promoted by prospects for continued hot weather in the South, and relatively steady Liverpool cables.

July contracts sold up to 13.60c and closed at 13.59c, while the new October advanced to 13.06c and closed at 13.02c, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 6 to 9 points. Spot was quiet, middling 13.70c.

The opening was steady at an advance of 6 points to a decline of 4 points, near months being higher on the better cables, while there was some liquidation in the latter deliveries. The selling was limited, however, and after the initial offerings had been absorbed on setbacks of two or three points, the market steadied up on a moderate demand. This was attributed largely to covering, but there may have been some local buying late in the morning on the prospect for continued high temperatures in the western belt. The old October contract advanced to 13.31c and the new December to 13.22c, with the more active months showing net advances of about 6 to 12 points at the best. Closing quotations were a few points off under realizing on some positions.

A report was said to have reached the market here from the Southwest referring to unfavorable effects of recent high temperatures on the plant, while there seemed little prospect of anything more than possible showers in central belt sections next week, so far as indicated by the week-end forecast. Reports of a steadier tone in the stock market may have been a contributing factor on the late morning upturn in cotton, but trading was not active and some brokers attributed the fluctuations chiefly to the usual week-end evening up of accounts.

Cable received here from Liverpool said there had been continental buying together with covering and end-month trade calling in that market, but reported that the sales of cotton cloths and yarns were unimportant with buyers cautious. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 67,000 bales, against 60,742 last year. A private crop report was issued placing the decrease in acreage at 3.3 per cent, the condition at 71 per cent and the indicated yield at 14,435,000 bales.

CURB MARKET SALES ARE 267,200 SHARES

Total Is Smallest in About Two Years — Price Changes Mainly Narrow.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The Curb market was virtually neglected today. Transactions for the two-hour session aggregated only 267,200 shares, the smallest in about two years. Save in a handful of issues, price changes were narrow and of little consequence.

Electric Bond and Share was one of the more active issues. Bear pressure was again in evidence during the early part of the session, and this issue was depressed more than a point, but it rallied to close unchanged. American Gas sagged 4 points, and failed to rally. There was some interest in Utilities Power & Light, which moved up about a point. In the gas issues American Natural Gas gained 2.

In the industrials Deere and Dow Chemical each lost more than 5 points. Federal Screw declined to new low at 17. Aviation Corporation of the Americas, a recent strong spot, eased in profit taking. Hazeltine and Newport Co. were firm, closing about 2 points higher. Technicolor, a recent bear favorite, rallied more than 3 points.

In the oils, Continental of Maine broke 6½ points to a new low at 10, apparently reflecting nothing but an absence of bids, as the market in this stock is thin. Cosden gained more than a point. In the mines, Newmont rallied 5 points.

Investment trusts were practically ignored. Securities Corporation General declined about a point to a new low. Initial dividend of 10 cents has been declared. There was some activity in Goldman Sachs, which rose ⅝.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, June 28.—The peseta today went to a new low level for recent years. At closing the peseta was quoted at 9.11 to the dollar and 44.30 to the pound, which is said to be the lowest since the Spanish-American war.

The gradual slump of the Spanish monetary unit began in the closing days of the Primo de Rivera dictatorship and has continued since Gen. Berenguer took over the Government.

STEADY TO HIGHER PRICES FOR CATTLE

Decrease of 37 Per Cent in Country Loadings Halts Drastic Declines of Previous Weeks.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., June 28 (United States Department of Agriculture).—A decrease of 37 per cent in country loadings this week, as compared with average receipts for the two preceding weeks, had the effect of halting the drastic declines of last week and the week preceding. Compared with the close of last week, steers, mixed yearlings and heifers sold steady to 25c higher, some desirable fed steers and fat mixed yearlings and heifers showing the advance; cows 25c higher; cutters, low cutters and bulls steady; vealers $1.50 higher; stocker and feeder steers 25c higher.

Tops for week: 1197-pound matured steers, 927-pound yearlings and 560-pound mixed yearlings, $11; 568-pound heifers, $10.75; cows, $8; sausage bulls, $6.25 (Monday); vealers, $11; stocker and feeder steers, $8.35. Steers averaging 1302 to 1837 pounds ranged from $8.75 to $10.70, bulk $9.50 to $10.70, while that group scaling 1216 to 1286 pounds ranged from $7.75 to $10.40, the majority $8.50 to $10.40. Steers averaging 1110 to 1197 pounds ranged from $8 to $10.50, bulk $8.75 to $10.10. Lightweight steers ranged from $6 to $11, the majority $7.25 to $9.75, while bulk of all steers brought $7.25 to $10.50. Bulk of fat steers registered $9.50 to $10.75. Fat mixed yearlings and heifers spread from $8.50 to $11, bulk $8.50 to $10; medium fleshed kinds, $7.50 to $8.50. Most cows scored $5 to $6; low cutters largely $3 to $3.50. Best sausage bulls earned $6 today; top vealers, $11. Bulk and top prices the corresponding time last year were as follows: Steers, $12 to $14.40, top $15; fat mixed yearlings and heifers, $13 to $14, top $14.60; medium fleshed heifers, $11.50 to $12.50; cows, $8 to $9.25, top $11; low cutters, $5.75 to $6.25; top sausage bulls, $9.75; top vealers, $14.50; stocker and feeder steers, $8.75 to $11.90, top $12.

Hogs Lower for Week.

Swine receipts this week approximated 58,000 head, compared with actual arrivals of 59,533 last week and 68,294 corresponding week last year. Reflecting the downward movement, dressed pork prices and influenced by light Eastern shipments, porker values suffered quite sharp losses. On Tuesday, bulk of hogs sold at $9 and below for the first time since Jan. 4, 1929. Tuesday proved to be low day, however, since the lower levels made prices attractive to killers and all interests bought quite freely on later sessions. Around 25c of the loss was regained by the close of the week, but a net loss for the Saturday to Saturday period of 25c to 40c was recorded. Packing sows declined 50c. The Saturday deal was active to all interests, steady to strong with Friday, and an early clearance was effected. Top price was $9.25, which figure was paid for most of the better 160 to 260 pound weights. A few less finished or plainer quality lightweights sold at $9.15. Most of the 110 to 140 pound pigs and light lights realized $8.50 to $9, a few lighter pigs down to $8.25. Packing sows bulked at $7.85 to $8.

Fat Lambs Steady to Lower.

Receipts of sheep and lambs this week approximated 23,500 head, compared with actual arrivals of 20,575 last week and 20,906 corresponding week last year. Packers were bearish most of the week, especially on lower grade lambs and succeeded in effecting uneven declines. Fat lambs finished the week steady to 25c lower for the Saturday-to-Saturday period, while medium grade descriptions declined 50c and throwouts $1. Attempts were also made to force fat ewe quotations sharply downward, but marketings were so light that a weak to 25c lower deal was all that could be quoted. A few small lots of prime graded lambs reached $12, but the top on sizeable lots this week was $11.75. At the finish most of the graded lambs and occasional loads of other choice lambs reached $11.50, while bulk of desirable natives went at $10.75 to $11.25. Less finished lambs or lots carrying many bucks sold at $10.50 and below. Common throwouts were removed at $4.50. Yearlings and aged wethers were almost entirely lacking all week. Desirable light and handyweight fat ewes moved at $3 to $3.50 and medium and heavyweight descriptions realized $2.50 to $3.

WHEAT PRICE DOWN IN WEEK-END TRADE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, June 28.—The wheat market was lower at the week-end session, closing ⅝c to 1c off, corn finishing ⅝c to 1⅛c lower.

The wheat market was dominated by the report of rain in Canada. Other news of day included ⅜d to ⅝d higher close at Liverpool, decrease in wheat stocks at Kansas City, report of black rust in North Dakota and report of apparent quiet export situation.

In the cash grain market soft wheat was up 1c to 2c, with sales of No. 2 at 1c higher prices and No. 3s about 2c up. There were only a few cars on sale and the demand was limited. Sales of old No. 2 were on a basis 5½c above the Chicago July figure and No. 3 at 4½c above. The first car of new wheat was on the market. The grain was bright starchy Southeast Missouri wheat testing 63 pounds with but 10.4 per cent moisture and graded No. 2 on account of containing 2 per cent rye. The car was auctioned off on the floor of the exchange and brought 1½c. Hard wheat was down 1½c. Offerings were light and there was a quiet local demand. Milling grades cleared closely. Sales of No. 1 winter were on a basis about ½c below the Chicago July figure and No. 2 yellow 1½c below. Corn was off ½c to 2½c, with the yellow varieties mainly 1 and 1½c lower. The difference between the cash yellow and futures narrowed to 3 and 4½c for good grades. Glucose plants took the bulk of the available supply. Oats were steady to ½c lower. Offerings were limited, but there was only a fair demand.

July wheat opened at 88½c, September wheat 93c, December wheat 99c, July corn 76½c, September corn 74⅛c and December corn 67½c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 224,000 bushels, compared with 231,000 a week ago and 95,200 a year ago, included 118 cars local and 42 through. Corn receipts, which were 84,000 bushels, compared with 43,400 a week ago and 196,000 a year ago, included 50 cars local and 10 through. Oats receipts, which were 46,200 bushels, compared with 37,400 a week ago and 37,400 a year ago, included 19 cars local and 2 through. Hay receipts were 4 cars local and 2 through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

WHEAT—No. 2 red winter, 96c; new 98; No. 3 red winter, 95c; light garlicky 92c; No. 1 hard winter, 90c; No. 2 yellow hard, 89c; sample grade mixed, 60 per cent hard 79c.

CORN—No. 1 yellow, 79c to 79¼c; No. 2 yellow, 78½c; No. 3 yellow, 77½c; No. 4 yellow, 76c; No. 2 white, 82½c; No. 5 white, 78c.

OATS—No. 2 white, 38½c; No. 3 white 38c; No. 4 white, 38c to 36½c.

Flour and Meal.

Flour market was quiet. Hard 95 per cent was offered down to $4 jute and quoted also by mill here at $4.80 in jute. Sales reported were as follows: 500 barrels hard and 750 barrels soft domestic by local mill and 500 barrels soft patent by East Side mill to the South on private terms, 600 barrels soft patent (by Southern Illinois mill) at $6 and 500 barrels do (do) at $5.90 in 98-lb. cotton.

Nominally new jute, soft winter patents, $5.75 to $6; special brands in cotton, $6.35 to $7.25; straight and 95 per cent, $4.25 to $4.50; extra fancy round, $3.60 to $3.90; clears, $3.25 to $3.50; low grades and second clear, $3 to $3.25; hard 95 per cent, $4.10 to $4.85; straight, $3.90 to $4.25; high patent, $5.95 in cotton; first clears, $3.50 to $3.85; low grades and second clears, $3 to $3.25; spring patent, $5.40; second clears, $2.90 to $3.10; No. 2 semolina was quoted Chicago 3⅛c; standard, 3c, and No. 3, 2⅞c per lb.

St. Louis Bran Market.

Wheat feed was dull and weaker. Pure and soft bran was quoted from the West at $20; also standard bran $20.25 and pure bran at $20.50 and grey shorts at $25.50 and $25; and standard middlings quoted at $23.75. Oat feed was unchanged at $6.80 and white hominy feed $26. Sales reported were as follows; 150 tons standard bran (from the West, immediate) late yesterday, $20 and local mill sold 1 split car (to go out) pure bran $21 and grey shorts $26.50.

Transactions in mill feed futures totaled 500 tons.

WHEAT PRICE DECLINES ON RAIN IN CANADA

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Quick right-about face action of wheat prices today gave an exhibition of what a weather market can do. Starting with an advance in quotations, the market suddenly underwent a downward slide of 2c a bushel from the top figures reached, mainly because of rain relief in Canadian Prairie Provinces.

Accelerating the tumble of wheat values was report of increasing movement of newly harvested domestic winter wheat, together with prediction heard that United States spring wheat this season would mature fast enough to beat black rust, the outcome in this case also being purely a question of weather.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy at the day's bottom level ⅝-1⅝c a bushel under yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅝-1⅛c off, oats ¼-⅜c down, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 47 cents.

Except for dispatches indicating that wheat in every one of the prairie provinces had again been snatched by rains from possible disaster, most of the day's market developments were of a kind that ordinarily would spell higher prices. Liverpool quotations showed an upward slant, and word came from Kansas City that despite progress of the harvest in the Southwest the stock of wheat on hand in Kansas City showed a 1,600,000 bushel shrinkage in the last week, the largest decrease during any single week this season. Another factor which usually would tend to lift prices was word that in South Dakota black rust is prevalent where wheat is only in the blossom stage.

Advice, however, showing that Canadian rains were persisting appeared to put everything else into the background for at least the time being, so far as the wheat market here was concerned. Alone of all the deliveries of wheat in Chicago, the price of December wheat contracts clung stubbornly to the old-time standard of $1 a bushel. July, representing wheat now being harvested in the Southwest and West, was down to practically 10c a bushel lower than $1, and it was pointed out that receipts of wheat at the eight principal points southwest today totaled about 1700 cars. Toward the end of the day, too, notice was also taken that North American wheat export business had again apparently reached something of a halt, temporarily at least.

Corn and oats sagged as a result of wheat weakness. December oats reached the lowest prices of the season.

Provisions were irregular, lard easing slightly, but meats tightening up, although trade was meager.

PLANS MEETING OF DRY STATES' GOVERNORS

U. S. Attorney-General May Ask Hoover to Call Conference.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Attorney-General Mitchell, in making an appeal for co-operation of State officials for enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, may have the President call a conference of the governors of the states that had statewide prohibition laws before the nation did. He will write to Governors and Attorney-Generals of states not in sympathy with the Volstead act. That he has the support of the President in his program for more forceful efforts on the part of local governments is not doubted by members of Congress in touch with the White House.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—With the avowed intention of obtaining greater enforcement of the prohibition law through increased activity of agents and co-operation with State authorities, the Department of Justice has completed final arrangements for taking over the enforcement problem from the Treasury next Tuesday.

The reorganization is the fifth since prohibition enforcement started in 1920. With the shift of enforcement to the Justice Department, James M. Doran remains in the Treasury as director of the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol at the same salary he received as Commissioner of Prohibition. Seymour Lowman also will remain as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

In taking over the work Attorney-General Mitchell said he expected closer co-operation between United States District Attorneys and enforcement officers and announced he would have no laggards in his department.

In selecting the prohibition administrators, the Attorney-General said changes may be made in the personnel. Mitchell has already selected Amos W. W. Woodcock of Baltimore as Director of the Department's prohibition division and Howard T. Jones as assistant director.

While no anouncement has been made of plans of the new enforcement officers, reports are that the department will concentrate its attention on the wet spots of the nation. About 1700 agents will be at the command of the new director and it has been said that he will reduce the number of agents in territories where states take a good share of the enforcement problem and throw them into sections where there is no State law or State co-operation in enforcement.

EAST COAST LINER TOWED IN AFTER STRIKING WRECKAGE

Governor Dingley's Propellor Put Out of Commission Off Eastport, Me.

By the Associated Press.

EASTPORT, Me., June 28.—The Governor Dingley of the Eastern Steamship Lines was towed toward port tonight by the Coast Guard cutter Kickapoo after she had been forced to anchor off Machias, Me., when her propellor struck submerged wreckage and became useless. The Governor Dingley was bound from Boston to Eastport and New Brunswick points with 360 passengers.

The accident occured early this morning in a fog. The Dingley's anchor was dropped immediately and radio calls for aid sent out. Capt. J. V. Ingalls said that she was in no danger, however, and need only a tow. The Coast Guard cutters Ossipi and Kickapoo responded.

The passengers showed little excitement, some of them being unaware that anything was amiss until they came on deck later in the morning.

RITCHIE DECLARES U. S. HAS BECOME DICTATOR

Maryland Governor Says Citizens Are Followed Constantly by Spies.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 28.—Government is no longer the protector of individual rights, but is rapidly becoming the dictator of them, Gov. Alfred Ritchie of Maryland said here tonight in an address at the concluding session of the meeting of the Maryland State Bar Association.

"Inspectors and spies and official regulators follow the American citizen from birth to death," the Maryland executive said. "In some places, he cannot marry whom he pleases, but must mate in accordance with the eugenic dictates of a state bureaucracy. In other places, when his children come, a police power tries to tell him how he shall rear them and what schools he shall send them to and what they shall not be taught.

"Here he is told what he may eat, there what he may smoke, and everywhere is told what he may drink. What he may read or write or see on the stage is prescribed, too.

"Whether you see Government in terms of the 'old freedom' or the 'new freedom,' surely it is important to the cause of human freedom that it be something of which you are a part. Yet instead of seeing it as something made by you and for you, you are beginning to see yourself as made by it and for it.

Government Abuses.

"All this involves the abuse of government instead of the use of government. Social reformers become impatient with a government of laws and demand a government of men. They pin their faith on administrative and executive agencies as more direct and flexible to attain their ends than the law and justice administered by the courts.

"Thus it is that when the larger interests of society, like agriculture and industry, production and distribution, come in conflict, the tendency is no longer to look to the law but to some presidential commissioner or administrative or legislative device; and that agency, in turn, looks not to any traditional rule of law for guidance but to the powers conferred upon it by the Legislature or perhaps only by public opinion or even by some entirely extra governmental group."

"It would be interesting to speculate what the Constitution would be if rewritten today. Would it sparkle with its old simplicity and beauty and spirit, or would it, as in China, be a system of moral precepts?

Present Issues.

"However, this may be, the certain thing before us is the growing tendency to demand that everyone fall instep with the social and moral uplift of the hour, and regard the Constitution, when it stands in the way, as more or less out of date and not to be taken too seriously.

"If I rightly sense danger in this growing disregard of constitutional limitations, the hope before us is that the organic law has not yet been amended or interpreted beyond repair or restoration. Most of what is traditional and American and inspiring still remains in it.

"Free speech, free worship, the right to assemble and petition for the redress of grievances, the sanctity of the home, individual liberty, equality before the law, all these are still in the Constitution, even though a break has come in some of them."

W. B. THOMPSON SET ASIDE $10,000,000 FOR PLANT STUDY

Friends of Late Copper Magnate Disclose Endowment of Institute at Yonkers, N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

YONKERS, N. Y., June 28. — Col. William Boyce Thompson, copper magnate and philanthropist, who died at his home here last night, had set aside $10,000,000 to endow the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research in Yonkers, friends announced today. The institute was founded six years ago by Col. Thompson, and has become known over the world for its experiments in studying the diseases of plant life.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the home. Burial will take place in Tarrytown.

Col. Thompson's neighbors today discussed several hitherto little known phases of his life. It was related that he prided himself on having predicted the Bolshevik Government in Russia would endure. The prediction was made in reports to President Wilson and David Lloyd George of England, while Thompson was head of the American Red Cross Mission in Russia after the downfall of the Czar's government.

Dr. Ernst Feder Learns Routine in Omaha.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., June 28. — Dr. Ernst Feder is editor of the Berlin Tageblatt, but here today he assumed the rule of a "cub" reporter and covered several "runs" for the World-Herald.

Dr. Feder, after a half day at "pounding" the street, returned to the newspaper office, rolled up his sleeves and pounded his story out on an American typewriter. He is one of 12 European journalists who visited Omaha today as guests of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

EX-OFFICIALS INDICTED FOR LIQUOR BRIBERY

Five Former Canton (O.) Executives and Police Sergeant Accused of Getting $11,000.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., June 28.—Canton bootleggers and liquor runners paid $11,000 in protection money that found its way into the pockets of former city officials and a former police sergeant, it is charged in conspiracy indictments against six men. Details of the indictments, made public today with the surrender of the last two of the six men wanted, disclosed that E. E. Curtis, former Canton Safety Director, is charged with receiving $6200 for protection of three saloons in 1928 and 1929.

Former Councilman Arthur Drukenbrod is charged with making an agreement with a bootlegger to "prevent or warn him in advance of raids" and to have received four weekly payments of $200 each from June 11 to July 2, 1928.

Curtis Drukenbrod, former Police Sergeant Ellis Darany, and "Big John" Gust and Mike Smith, confectionery owners, are alleged to have received $11,000.

Darany, former head of the Canton vice squad, received $2940 from operators of a string of saloons, the indictments charge, for either preventing or giving advance warnings of raids. John Courlis, restaurant keeper, and Smith were named as co-conspirators, while Smith is charged with operating a saloon.

All were released under bond.

11-YEAR-OLD BOY WRITES VOLUME ABOUT HOOVER

President Is Anxiously Awaiting Home-Printed Copy of Book.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.—President Hoover today let it be known that he is "anxiously awaiting" a copy of the new book, "Our President, Herbert Hoover," written and printed by 11-year-old William J. Marsh Jr., of New Milford, Conn. It was said at the White House that Mr. Hoover had read with much interest the report of young Marsh's publishing venture.

The fact that the boy after six months' labor as its author, printed the small volume on an antiquated press, which his father had picked up for 50 cents impressed the President. The newest life of Herbert Hoover contains some quaint observations, for all its author's extreme youth, on the life of American Presidents.

WOMAN SHOT BY HUSBAND AT MISSION SERVICE DIES

"Good," Drawls Slayer, Who Killed Pastor in Pulpit at Niagara Falls.

By the Associated Press.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., June 28.—Mrs. Frank Ross, wonded by her jealous husband Friday night during a mission service here, died in a hospital tonight. The husband, arrested on a charge of murder, was informed in his cell of his wife's death.

"Good," he drawled, and went to sleep.

Ross' victims now number two, the Rev. Edgard R. Wood, who was killed in his pulpit, and Mrs. Ross, whose associations with the clergyman aroused the husband's ire, Leonard Twoe, a member of the congregation, also under suspicion by the husband, was wounded, but is expected to recover.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., June 28. — Zinc concentrate prices were unchanged in the tri-state district this week despite lower slab zinc quotations. Lead prices declined in line with a lower pig lead market. Prices stood at prime western grades zinc, $29; floats, $28; lead, $60 a ton, a $2.50 drop.

ALL POLICEMEN SENT TO NEW PRECINCTS

Board Reverts to Policy of Transferring Men for Good of the Service.

All of St. Louis' 1800 patrolmen and all of the uniformed sergeants on the force were transferred to new beats and precincts this morning as the Board of Police Commissioners returned to the policy of the previous board in transferring all beat men every six months to prevent them from becoming "fixtures."

District captains were informed of the transfer order at a meeting at Police Headquarters yesterday. The last similar transfer occurred under the old board, about a year ago.

Later in the day, Detective Sergeant Charles McKenna and the five men under him in the police gambling squad were transferred to street duty "for the good of the service," and Detective Sergt. Charles Shelton was placed in charge of the squad, which will consist of five new detectives.

Acting President Kreismann of the board said last night that the only reason for the order was for the general good of the service. He was asked if the underlying reason was a feeling that patrolmen and sergeants had not paid enough attention to liquor and gambling law violations in their territories, leaving enforcement of these laws generally to special squads. Kreismann declared this was not the case.

At a recent meeting with captains, Chief Gerk told them the uniformed force was expected to pay full attention to liquor and gambling violations and not rely on special groups.

LAVARRE GETS 20 MORE DAYS

Ex-Publisher in Jail Since May 27 for Contempt Freed on Bond.

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 28.—Wm. Levarre, former southeastern newspaper publisher, today was sentenced by Federal Judge Barrett to serve 20 additional days in jail for criminal contempt of court. Lavarre has been in jail here since May 27, pending a decision in the case. Late today he was released on $5000 bond, following a special order by Federal Judge W. H. Barrett allowing his counsel 30 days in which to file a bill of exceptions.

The contempt charges were brought against Lavarre originally by Federal Judge Deaver, Macon, Ga., as the result of Lavarre's failure to comply with court orders in connection with his litigation with Harold Hall, former associated in the operation of a chain of Georgia and South Carolina newspapers.

60 ARRESTED IN KANSAS RAID

Thirty Dry Agents Make Surprise Visit in Crawford County.

PITTSBURG, Kan., June 28.—Entering Crawford County early today in a surprise raid, 30 Federal agents, assisted by county officers, tonight had 60 persons in custody on liquor charges. The raid netted nine stills, several hundred gallons of liquor, and 7000 gallons of mash.

Armed with 80 warrants, agents, headed by Donald H. McIvor of Wichita, United States Marshal for Kansas, entered the county from three sides about 3:30 o'clock this morning. Twelve prisoners were taken in the early morning hours and pick-up arrests continued throughout the day. All warrants were issued as the result of the work of three undercover men who had been operating here a month. Sales of liquor are charged in all the warrants.

Burglary in L. W. Werner's Home.

Burglars entered the home of Louis W. Werner, 26 Westmoreland place, Friday night or yesterday. Members of the family are out of town and the police could not learn what had been taken.

NEWPORT is anticipating an unusually lively season on account of the trial and elimination races of the four yachts that have entered as contestants for the honor of defending the America's Cup against the Shamrock V in September. The races are to be held on the Block Island course a convenient distance from Newport and the neighboring resorts.

Over the week-end many yachts came into Newport harbor returning from the Yale-Harvard races at New London. Among them was the Ara, having on board Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and the former's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Earl E. T. Smith. They were guests at a large luncheon given at Dudley place, by Mr. Vanderbilt's elder daughter, Mrs. Muriel Vanderbilt Church.

Mrs. Henry Leverett Chase of St. Louis has opened her summer home at Saunderstown, across from Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster Tilton of St. Louis and New York, have taken a cottage at Watch Hill for their first summer in the cottage colony. They were among the early arrivals and with their two children, Ann Stickney and Webster Jr, spent several weeks at the Misquamicut Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright, St. Louis, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Byers, Pittsburg, at the Yale-Harvard boat races, returning with them to Cedarhurst, their cottage at Watch Hill, for a visit of a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Shinkle, St. Louis, are expected at Watch Hill for the early season although they are planning to spend part of the summer abroad, sailing late in July accompanied by their son, Jack. Mrs. Shinkle is among those who are to assist Mrs. Louise DeKoven Phelps at the sale she is planning to hold at the Anchorage for the benefit of a settlement house in which she is interested in her home city of Chicago.

Miss Virginia Eggmann to Wed Frederick W. Dieffenbach III.

AT a bridge luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Theodore A. Eggmann, at her home, 1408 North Forty-fourth street, East St. Louis, announcement was made of the engagement of Mr. Eggmann's sister, Miss Virginia Eggmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August M. Eggmann of Kingston drive, East St. Louis, and Frederick W. Dieffenbach III, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Dieffenbach Jr., of Asbury Park, N. J. The news is of interest in St. Louis where Miss Eggmann has numerous friends. The prospective bridegroom was best man at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Eggmann several months ago.

The party was given in honor of Miss Eggman's guests, Miss Becky Dickerson of Charleston, W. Va.; Miss Penelope Borden, Long Island, N. Y., and Miss Marian Ristine, Evanston, Ill. The luncheon table was decorated with orchid larkspur and yellow roses, and more of the blossoms were used about the rooms. The announcement was made on maps tracing the courtship of Mr. Dieffenbach and his fiancee, with a road leading from East St. Louis to Asbury Park over the sea of matrimony.

Miss Eggmann is a graduate of Dana Hall and Pine Manor, Wellesley, Mass. She is a member of the Junior Service League and has traveled abroad. Mr. Dieffenbach is a graduate of Cornell University and is a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. The wedding will take place in October.

Mrs. Theodore Eggmann was, before her marriage, Miss Dorothy Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Green, 6203 Washington boulevard.

THE marriage of Miss Jean Frances Peck and Wyllys King Ambler, St. Louis, will take place next Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Peck, 100 Ashland avenue, Buffalo, N. Y. Miss Peck is a graduate of the Principia, St. Louis and Columbia University, New York. Mr. Ambler is a graduate of Park College, class of 1922, and is western correspondent of the City Bank Farmers' Trust Co. of New York.

Miss Clara Peck, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor, and Miss Katherine King, Pelham Manor, N. Y., and Miss Jacquelin Ambler, Kirkwood, bridesmaids. The bride will wear cream satin with a collar of old family lace and will carry cream colored roses and baby's breath with lilies of the valley. The maid of honor will wear blue point d'esprit with fitted bodice and ankle length skirts, trimmed with graduated tucks. The bridesmaids will be similarly gowned in pink. They will wear old-fashioned lace mitts and carry Colonial bouquets. Arthur Ambler Jr., will be best man and Seymour King, Pelham Manor, and William Peck, Scarsdale, N. Y., groomsmen.

Mr. Ambler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ambler, Kirkwood, will motor to Buffalo for the wedding, and later to Westhampton, L. I. They will return by way of Washington and Fauquier County, Va., Mr. Ambler's former home.

Other out-of-town guests include Mrs. Wyllys King, grandmother of the bridegroom, and Miss Katherine King, his aunt, both of Kirkwood; Mr. and Mrs. Edward King, New York and Westhampton, formerly of Kirkwood; Mrs. Mark Malloy and her children, Joplin, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Peck, Scarsdale, N. Y.

After the wedding Mr. Ambler and his bride will motor to Lake Placid, N. Y., returning by way of Canada, to make their home for the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Ambler Sr.

The marriage of Miss Frances Beal, daughter of Mrs. C. C. Beal, 229 Bompart avenue, Webster Groves, to Meade McArdle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Montrose P. McArdle, 439 Belleview avenue, Webster Groves, took place Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church, with Dr. J. J. Wilkins of Christ Church Cathedral officiating.

The bride wore an afternoon gown of eggshell tinted chiffon made on princess lines with a deep cape effect. She wore a large lace hat of the same shade, trimmed with eggshell satin. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley and Angelus roses. The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Stribling, wore a frock of pink chiffon, made with a tight bodice and full skirt, with a wide peplum of the chiffon trimming the skirt. Her hat was of pink lace, trimmed with rose satin, and she carried an arm bouquet of Killarney roses and gypsophelia. The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Walker, wore a frock of blue chiffon and carried an arm bouquet of Pernet roses and delphinium of the turquoise shade.

Arthur Jones was best man for Mr. McArdle. Schell Furry and Harvey Miller were the groomsmen.

A small reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. McArdle and his bride departed for a honeymoon in Wisconsin. They will make their home at 439 Belleview avenue, Webster Groves, upon their return.

Weddings and Engagements

THE marriage of Miss Jean Frances Peck and Wyllys King Ambler, St. Louis, will take place next Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Peck, 100 Ashland avenue, Buffalo, N. Y. Miss Peck is a graduate of the Principia, St. Louis and Columbia University, New York. Mr. Ambler is a graduate of Park College, class of 1922, and is western correspondent of the City Bank Farmers' Trust Co. of New York.

Miss Clara Peck, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor, and Miss Katherine King, Pelham Manor, N. Y., and Miss Jacquelin Ambler, Kirkwood, bridesmaids. The bride will wear cream satin with a collar of old family lace and will carry cream colored roses and baby's breath with lilies of the valley. The maid of honor will wear blue point d'esprit with fitted bodice and ankle length skirts, trimmed with graduated tucks. The bridesmaids will be similarly gowned in pink. They will wear old-fashioned lace mitts and carry Colonial bouquets. Arthur Ambler Jr., will be best man and Seymour King, Pelham Manor, and William Peck, Scarsdale, N. Y., groomsmen.

Mr. Ambler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ambler, Kirkwood, will motor to Buffalo for the wedding, and later to Westhampton, L. I. They will return by way of Washington and Fauquier County, Va., Mr. Ambler's former home.

Other out-of-town guests include Mrs. Wyllys King, grandmother of the bridegroom, and Miss Katherine King, his aunt, both of Kirkwood; Mr. and Mrs. Edward King, New York and Westhampton, formerly of Kirkwood; Mrs. Mark Malloy and her children, Joplin, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Peck, Scarsdale, N. Y.

After the wedding Mr. Ambler and his bride will motor to Lake Placid, N. Y., returning by way of Canada, to make their home for the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Ambler Sr.

The marriage of Miss Frances Beal, daughter of Mrs. C. C. Beal, 229 Bompart avenue, Webster Groves, to Meade McArdle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Montrose P. McArdle, 439 Belleview avenue, Webster Groves, took place Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church, with Dr. J. J. Wilkins of Christ Church Cathedral officiating.

The bride wore an afternoon gown of eggshell tinted chiffon made on princess lines with a deep cape effect. She wore a large lace hat of the same shade, trimmed with eggshell satin Her flowers were an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley and Angelus roses. The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Stribling, wore a frock of pink chiffon, made with a tight bodice and full skirt, with a wide peplum of the chiffon trimming the skirt. Her hat was of pink lace, trimmed with rose satin, and she carried an arm bouquet of Killarney roses and gypsophelia. The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Walker, wore a frock of blue chiffon and carried an arm bouquet of Pernet roses and delphinium of the turquoise shade.

Arthur Jones was best man for Mr. McArdle. Schell Furry and Harvey Miller were the groomsmen.

A small reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. McArdle and his bride departed for a honeymoon in Wisconsin. They will make their home at 439 Belleview avenue, Webster Groves, upon their return.

Announcements have been received in St. Louis of the marriage of Miss Jane Serafini Flynn, daughter of Mrs. Agnes S. Flynn, 4906 Argyle place, and Robert Eli Chappell of Baton Rouge, La., son of Mrs. Clarence J. Hicks of Pelham Manor, N. Y., which took place June 21 in Baton Rouge.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark. The Rev. F. L. Gassler of St. Joseph's Catholic Church officiated. An improvised altar, decorated with roses and garden flowers against a background of ferns, was erected in the home. The bride wore a gown of flesh tinted chiffon, with a shoulder corsage of pale pink roses and sweetpeas. She was attended by Mrs. Willard Curtis Clark as matron of honor, who wore blue chiffon with a corsage of sweetpeas.

The bride has been the guest for several weeks of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Curtis Clark. She is a graduate of St. Mary's Academy, Denver, Colo. Mr. Chappell is a graduate of Cornell University.

There were several out-of-town guests, including the mothers of the bride and bridegroom.

THE engagement of Miss Rose Hall, daughter of Mrs. Violet Adams Hall, of the Versailles Apartments to John L. Gilmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gilmore, 6186 Westminster place, was announced Thursday at a swimming party followed by luncheon at the Algonquin Golf Club. The wedding will take place at Our Lady of Lourdes Church early in August.

Miss Hall was graduated from Sacred Heart Convent at Maryville and made an informal debut several seasons ago. She has traveled extensively with her mother, both in Europe and this country. Mr. Gilmore was graduated from St. Louis University and also is a graduate of Washington University School of Law.

A wedding of interest which took place yesterday afternoon was that of Miss Dorothe Parke Cole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parke E. Cole of the Coronado Hotel, and William Truitt Tiffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Tiffin of Ferguson. The Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor performed the ceremony at the Second Presbyterian Church in the presence of the two families. There were no attendants. The bride wore pink chiffon with a maline hat to match and a shoulder corsage.

The marriage of Miss Rosetta E. Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Hughes, 3861 Botanical avenue, and Earl M. Walther, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Walther, 3917 Shaw boulevard, took place Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. George Grinham were the only attendants. Following a wedding supper at the Bevo Mill a reception for the wedding party was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents after which the pair left for a motor trip in the East. On their return they will make their home at 3949 De Tonty street.

The marriage of Miss Marion Eloise Casey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Casey, 2833 Laclede road, and Dr. Elmer Pfingsten Schluer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil H. Schluer, took place Saturday afternoon, June 14, at 4:30 o'clock in the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. James E. Crowther officiating.

Miss Virginia Kieussie was maid of honor and Miss Ethel Schluer, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Marian Pfingsten were bridesmaids. Dr. Allen B. Potter was best man and Harold Casey, brother of the bride, and Ralph Schluer, brother of the bridegroom, were groomsmen. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore chiffon gowns in pastel shades with hats and slippers to match. The maid of honor carried blue cornflowers and the bridesmaids yellow roses. The bride wore a gown of flesh tinted chiffon and lace with matching hat and slippers.

Following a short wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Schluer will be at home after July 1, at 2833 Laclede road, until the completion of their home in University Park. Both Dr. Schluer and his bride were graduated from Washington University.

The marriage of Miss Berniece Frances Brockman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brockman, 6729 Smiley avenue, and Victor Joseph Harrison, took place Wednesday evening at St. John's Episcopal Church.

The bride was gowned in a sleeveless eggshell-tinted satin model, fitted to the figure. A veil of eggshell-colored tulle was held in place by a cap of embroidered net and orange blossoms. Her slippers and long kid gloves matched the gown. She carried tea roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Kathryne Buck, maid of honor, wore a pale mulberry organdie gown made with a drop shoulder bodice and a large bow at the back. The full skirt touched the floor. She wore a poke bonnet of hairbraid trimmed in velvet. Her flowers were Pernet roses tied in deep orchid.

The bridesmaids, Miss Maryalys Brockman, Miss Mary Layne, Miss Helen Barron, Miss Ruth Schulte and Miss Loretta Seibert, wore organdie garden frocks in the rainbow colors, pink, orchid, blue, Nile green and peach, respectively. The bodices were trimmed with rosebud shoulder straps, the skirts being full length. The maids wore slippers to match their frocks, and wide hairbraid garden hats, and carried larkspur and gladioli tied with ribbon to correspond with their gowns. Dorothy Mae Salsman and Lillian Hampe, flower girls, wore pink and blue taffeta and carried baskets of spring flowers.

Roy Fledderman Jr. was ring bearer; Robert Brockman, brother of the bride, was best man, and the groomsmen were Edward Goodberlet, cousin of the bridegroom; Albert Young, Bert Bell, Joseph Edelman and Gustav Kertz.

A wedding supper and reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison will spend a month touring the West.

The marriage of Miss Vera Grace Kemper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Kemper of 4720 Milentz avenue, and William G. Baber Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Baber, 2523 Semple avenue, took place Thursday morning, June 19, at 9 o'clock at St. Pius' Church, the Rev. Fr. Garaghty officiating. The bride's attendant was her sister, Miss Ruth Kemper. The best man was Robert Klein.

A wedding breakfast was served at Hotel Saum. Mr. Baber and his bride are spending their honeymoon in the East and will return to St. Louis the middle of next month.

The wedding of Mrs. Evelyn Gertrude Singer, 7571 Stanford avenue, University City, and Clay Holland Tabler, 6545 Arsenal street, took place at 3:30 p. m., Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Tabler left immediately after the ceremony for a two months' tour of the East and the South.

Miss Leona Wollblock, daughter of Mrs. Eva Wollblock, 2302 Pestalozzi street, and Joseph A. Parente, of St. Louis, were married Wednesday, June 18, at St. Francis de Sales Church, the Rev. Father Winkelman officiating. Mrs. Marguerite Sticka, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Mary Alessandrelli was bridesmaid. Events at Capital In Outdoor Setting

WASHINGTON, June 28.

SOCIETY has made its annual shift of scene from the drawing room to the garden and there is hardly an event from weddings to dinner parties which has not an outdoor setting. From the swimming pool to tea and back to the water again is the order of things, and popular are the hosts who boast big swimming pools like the one at Evermay, old Georgetown estate of Alexander C. Kirk of Chicago, now counselor of the United States Embassy in Rome.

Another huge pool is located on the estate of Mrs. Anne Archbold on Reservoir road. The pool at Wild Acres, the estate of Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, and the pool at the place of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman at Edgemoor and a dozen others attract the fashionable set.

Luncheon, bridge, swimming and tea is a popular schedule for the younger element of society, with, of course, a dinner party and dance following. Even at the White House formality is laid aside and comfort sought in the many little parties the President entertains.

The general exodus of society from Washington over July 4 started this week and the capital will be virtually deserted for almost an entire week. With this holiday falling on Friday, even the Government clerks will have three days of leisure, for there will be no Government offices open Saturday.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon, probably will spend the holiday in the Green Spring Valley of Maryland, between Baltimore and Washington, where his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, have a beautiful country home. Paul Mellon, son of the Secretary, who has just returned from Cambridge, England, is with his sister.

Congresswoman Ruth Bryan Owen of Florida, who has been appointed a delegate to the Interparliamentary Union, to be held in London, was one of the guests of the Woman's National Press Club. After dinner Mrs. Owen sang Negro spirituals to her own accompaniment after the manner in which she entertained the soldiers during the war.

Congressman Grant M. Hudson of East Lansing, Mich. was married late today to Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer at Unionville, N. J. The wedding was in the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Allen.

Crane Co. Employes' Picnic.

Employes here of the Crane Co., manufacturers of heating and plumbing material, will observe the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the company with a picnic at the Wabash Club grounds, in Ferguson next Thursday, in connection with a more extensive celebration at Chicago, which will be attended by officers, branch managers and factory heads of the corporation. The company was founded in Chicago in 1855, when one of its early inventons was a device to keep tiny fish out of water supply pipes.

EAST ST. LOUIS SOCIAL NOTES

MRS. CHARLES J. SCHIELE, Mrs. Thomas L. Fekete Jr. and Mrs. A. T. Spivey have returned from French Lick Springs, Ind., where they spent two weeks.

Miss Marie Huschle, daughter of Rudolph Huschle of 1802 Baugh avenue, and Dr. Thomas W. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Miller of Alton, Ill., were married Thursday morning at nuptial high mass at St. Henry's Church.

Miss Huschle wore a gown of ivory satin made along princesse lines with a long train. Her veil of silk tulle was arranged in a cap with sprays of orange blossoms at either side. She wore white gloves and carried a white satin prayer book and an arm bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Weber, the maid of honor, wore a frock of yellow taffeta trimmed with Alencon lace and carried a bouquet of roses.

Miss Mary Agnes Keeley, Miss Kathryn Miller, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Dorothy McEvilly were bridesmaids. They wore frocks of net in pastel shades of pink, blue and green. Their large hats matching their frocks had long streamers at the back reaching the floor. They wore corsages of roses.

Marie Eisle was flower girl. She wore a frock of white net.

Earl Miller attended his brother as best man. Robert McGlynn and Edward Morrisey and Harold Hoefert of Alton were groomsmen.

A wedding breakfast was served to 75 guests at the Knights of Columbus Club following the ceremony.

Dr. and Mrs. Miller have departed on an extended honeymoon through the North and East. They will make their home in Alton, Ill.

Mrs. George Smith and her children of Long Island are guests of Mrs. Smith's father, Judge E. C. Kramer of Signal Hill boulevard.

Mrs. John A. Campbell of Pennsylvania avenue entertained at dinner at the St. Clair Country Club Thursday evening in honor of Miss Margaret Campbell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Campbell, whose marriage to Russell Fisher of New York will take place July 1, and in honor of Miss Marcile Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Wood, who will be married to James Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Reid, in Tuscon, Ariz., Monday. The guests were: Miss Maude Rae Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. Tully Van Boyd, Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. J. Clark Waddell, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Wood and Mr. J. F. Reid.

Mrs. Harry S. Kramer of 503 North Twenty-fourth street has as guests this week Mrs. O. G. Stelle and Mrs. B. G. Ray of Alton, Ill.

Mrs. Fred W. Lehman of State street entertained at a bridge luncheon at the St. Clair Country Club yesterday, announcing the engagement of her niece, Miss Marie Couch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Couch, to Paul Mullane. The guests were: Miss Helen Rutledge, Miss Marcella Mullane, Miss Elizabeth Carter, Miss Margaret Avault, Miss Lucille Stienne, Miss Leona Reay, Miss Arlynn Pulsing, Miss Pauline Alvey, Miss Bernice Brefeld of Trenton, Ill.; Miss Teresa Wiegers, Miss Agnes Fahrner, Miss Teresa Nebel, Miss Norma Muth of St. Louis, Miss Viola Kuehn, Miss Pauline Couch, Miss Catherine Rutledge, Miss Margaret Rutledge, Miss Mildred Doyle, Miss Julia Fahrner, Miss Mary Elizabeth Tate of St. Louis, Miss Catherine Mullane, Miss Ruth Miller, Mrs. Norman P. Roewe, Mrs. Edmund McAtee, Mrs. Al Downs, Mrs. Wesley Strait, Mrs. D. E. Harris, Mrs. Vernon Heim, Mrs. Arthur Weaver, Mrs. E. J. Henrickson Jr., Mrs. T. M. Wieland, Mrs. Joseph Hagen, Mrs. Mary Paridy, Mrs. Joseph Dahler, Mrs. H. D. Couch, Mrs. S. Paridy, Mrs. J. A. Craft, Mrs. Lucien Craft, Mrs. M. O. O'Rourke, Mrs. James Mullane, Mrs. J. Fahrner and Mrs. Thomas Miller.

Miss Alice Stack of 3219 Lincoln avenue will leave tomorrow for California for a six week's visit.

Mrs. James C. Leigh of North Park drive was hostess to the members of her bridge club Friday evening. The guests were: Miss Mildred Ropiequet, Miss Margaret Shreve, Miss Martha McQuilkin, Miss Exzilla Schanot, Miss Gertrude Merker of St. Louis, Miss Edith Markert, Mrs. J. William Harrington, Mrs. Russell E. King, Mrs. Bart E. Schmitt and Mrs. Cletus Canavan.

Miss Ellen Wilson Yohe departed Wednesday for an extended tour of the West. She will return early in September.

Mrs. J. Wallace Huegely of 1200 College avenue was hostess to her bridge club at her home Wednesday afternoon. The guests were: Mrs. Gentry Ganote, Mrs. Valden S. Coulter, Mrs. Charles G. Kurrus Jr., Mrs. Charles Burke, Mrs. Cletus Canavan and Mrs. George A. Halpin.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Webster of Dallas, Tex., are the guests of Mr. Webster's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Webster of North Eighth street.

Mrs. Charles M. Horner of 1700 State street was hostess to the members of her bridge club at luncheon at the St. Clair Country Club Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Springer and family of North Thirty-sixth street, departed Thursday to spend the summer at their summer home in Dowagiac, Mich.

ENGAGED

MISS VIRGINIA EGGMANN,

DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Eggmann, whose engagement to Fred W. Dieffenbach III of Asbury Park, N. Y., was announced at a bridge luncheon yesterday.

A right way and a wrong way to do Everything

The right way to wash clothes is the "two successive suds" method advocated by Good Housekeeping Institute and other authorities. But this method is thoroughly convenient with only one washer in the world, the sensational new

DEXTER Fastwin

1 Even for a small washing the Dexter "Fastwin" saves handling at least one tub of water, and saves time and effort, as compared with any single-tub washer properly used.

2 The Dexter "Fastwin" can wash properly at least twice as much clothing per hour (including all operations from hamper to line) as any single-tub washer made.

3 Only by the "2 suds" washing method (which is thoroughly convenient only with the Dexter "Fastwin"), can that "grayish tinge" and that "harsh feel" be kept out of clothes month after month, without soaking or boiling.

4 The Dexter "Fastwin" thus offers a very substantial and easily demonstrated advantage over any single-tub washer that is, or ever can be built—even though The Dexter Company builds the finest of single-tub washers also.

5 Builders of fine washers for more than a quarter century. The Dexter Company originated the double-tub type of washer 16 years ago, and the first one ever made is still in weekly use.

6 More than 100,000 delighted users say they could never again be satisfied with any more single-tub washer.

Dexter Fastwin is not only the most convenient washer in the world for thorough washing, but it is also much the fastest. It will wash twice as many pounds of clothes per hour (including all operations from hamper to line) as any single-tub washer made. It is, however, very compact and offers the most convenient thorough system available for even very small families.

SPECIAL OFFER
Full-Size 35c Tube of Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream for only 10c with Coupon Below At All Drug and Department Stores

NO MORE COLD CREAMS

No More Skin Foods or Astringents This New Way

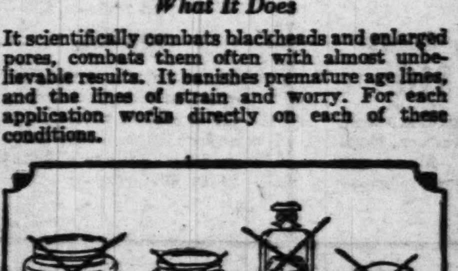
A Scientific Discovery that Condenses a Complete Professional Facial Into a Single Application, Taking Less Than 3 Minutes, That Combines the 4 Fundamentals in Skin Care Urged by Experts!

NOW comes a remarkable new development in beauty science. A discovery that experts say will soon change all previous methods in skin care.

A way that condenses the four fundamentals of scientific skin care into a single, three-minute home application! And that provides the exact same effect of a Complete Professional Facial costing $3 or more.

What It Does

It scientifically combats blackheads and enlarged pores, combats them often with almost unbelievable results. It banishes premature age lines, and the lines of strain and worry. For each application works directly on each of these conditions.



Cleansing creams, skin foods, astringents and powder bases are completely eliminated—for the functions of all four are embodied in one unique creation.

It completely eliminates the use of costly special creams and lotions. Of old-time cleansing creams, of skin foods and astringents. For the functions of all four are embodied in this one unique creation.

Do you wonder, then, that largely on expert advice, tens of thousands of women are adopting it?

What It Is

It is called Lady Esther Four-Purpose Cream. And it marks the application of totally new principles in skin care as defined by the most recent scientific findings of ablest specialists in the field of beauty culture.

Each applichtion has four distinct actions on the skin.

Cleansing action that cleanses the pores. And thus ends the use of an ordinary cleansing cream.

Tissue stimulating action that invigorates the deep tissues of the skin. And thus that ends the use of a special "Skin Food."

LADY ESTHER
FOUR-PURPOSE FACE CREAM

The four fundamentals of skin care are condensed into a single, 3-minute application.

Astringent action that eradicates worry, strain, and premature age lines, refines pores. And thus that makes the use of youth creams and astringents a folly.

Softening action that forms a perfect base for powder. And thus banishes the need of a powder base.

Those four things it does. Age lines soon go under this daily care. Flabby tissues strengthen and become firm. The skin is kept clean—for the astringent action of this cream closes the pores after they've been cleaned. And thus closes them against accumulations that foster imperfections.

Missouri And Illinois Face Loss Of Stations

Adoption by Radio Commission of Unit System of Estimating Quotas Indicates Reduction of Broadcasting Facilities in Both States.

Adoption by the Federal Radio Commission of a unit system for figuring the station quotas of the various states is regarded as presaging the loss eventually of broadcasting facilities by Missouri and Illinois.

The system adopted assesses a value in units for stations of certain powers on a full time and part time basis. For example, a station of 5000 watts using full time is valued at five units. One of 1000 watts operating with others on a channel is valued at one unit. A 1000 watts station operating daytime only is valued at half a unit. A 500-watt station operating one hour at night is held at .32 of a unit, while if it operates two hours at night it is held at .35 of a unit and if it works three hours at night, at .38 of a unit.

Figured on a population basis, Missouri, which now has stations on a basis of 16 units, would be entitled to only 10½ units. Illinois, which now has 35 units worth of stations, would be entitled to only 22 units. New York, Texas, California would be other heavy losers of stations were the unit system to be put into effect.

The Radio Commission, by a vote of three to two, has decided to hold hearings on the applications of KFI, Los Angeles, and KGO, Oakland, Cal., for 50,000-watt construction permits.

WCCO, Minneapolis, is seeking authority to increase power to 10,000 watts.

An application has been made to consolidate WREC, Whitehaven, Tenn., and WOAN to operate on 600 kc. as WREC-WOAN.

KFRC, San Francisco, has asked for a permit to increase power from 1000 to 5000 watts on 610 kc.

Great Advances In Broadcasting Are Heralded

WASHINGTON, June 28.—This summer is heralding the greatest advances in American radio since broadcasting became a popular medium of entertainment only a few years ago.

Most important of all, undoubtedly, is the $250,000,000 Rockefeller project for a center in New York City devoted to entertainment and the cultural arts. Back of this gigantic undertaking may be discerned the hand of "Roxy" (S. L. Rothafel).

Covering three square blocks fronting Fifth avenue, this new theater and radio center of the nation, designed as an architectural classic and projected for completion by the fall of 1933, not only will furnish theatergoers with the best in music and drama, but will be the source from which the finest in radio broadcasting—and later television—will flow.

Radio Corporation of America is collaborating with the Rockefeller interests in the development of what is already being designated as a "radio city." The R. C. A. and its subsidiaries and affiliates will lease the major portion of the quarters of the great new block of buildings. The National Broadcasting Co. alone will have 27 studios, 10 of them constructed for "photography and recording," which means that they are being built with television in view.

To "Roxy" more than to any other single individual belongs credit for this project. It was "Roxy" who long ago dreamed of it, who first conceived it and convinced John D. Rockefeller Jr. that it would be a splendid and lasting contribution to the art of showmanship. "Roxy" is expected to hold a sort of superdictatorship over the four great theaters of the group, which will be devoted to drama, musical comedy, variety and sound pictures.

Warner Brothers are reported along Broadway to be casting about more seriously than ever for a way to enter broadcasting on a larger scale by operating a new national network of their own. It is difficult to see on the radio map where these motion picture producers, now in the radio set and phonograph producing business, will be able to get stations with adequate wave lengths and of sufficient power that are not already linked by

Seidel in New Radio Series

TOSCHA SEIDEL, violinist, who is to be featured with orchestra in a new series of concerts on Thursday nights over the Columbia chain.

Violin Virtuoso in Series of Thursday Night Air Concerts

A new series of Thursday night concerts of fine music is to be broadcast over the Columbia chain at 7:30 Thursday nights. The concerts will feature Toscha Seidel, internationally known violinist, and a symphony orchestra conducted by Howard Barlow.

It is said that the decision to launch this symphonic series was due to listeners' response to the recitals that Seidel has been giving over the CBS net Sunday afternoons. Seidel came to radio with a reputation as one of the violin virtuosi of Europe. He won great popularity in concert in this country, as well as abroad, and his radio concerts have invariably been successful.

Seidel plans to play the Adagio from Bruch's G Minor Concerto and a number of other important works, new and old.

His first concert in the new series is scheduled for next Thursday night. On the night of July 10 he is to play music by Wagner, including "The Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger" and "Die Albumblatt."

Applications for New Radio Stations Average One a Day

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON.—New broadcasting stations would be established at the rate of one a day if the Federal Radio Commission heeded the appeals received.

In the face of the fact that broadcasters describe their business as the most unstable of all American commercial undertakings, because they hold their wave length tenures by virtue of Federal licenses of only three months' duration, hundreds of applications are on file from all parts of the country for authorization to broadcast.

In the first four months of this year 114 applications for new stations were received. Although the applicants generally are supported by strong political interests, their requests almost invariably are denied because the air is already overcrowded with more than 600 stations.

Last year several hundred such applications were received. The commission authorized the erection of two or three new stations in communities too remote for good radio service. The applications on file since last Jan. 1 came from practically every state in the Union. None has been granted, and the chances are that none will, even though they are mostly for local low-powered affairs.

St. Louis Topic Of Radio Salute Tuesday Evening

Entire Westinghouse Program to Be Devoted to Telling Nation About This City.

Why St. Louis is the center of America's industrial empire, not only geographically but commercially as well, will be broadcast throughout the country at 8 o'clock next Tuesday night. The broadcast may be heard locally over KWK.

For half an hour 34 stations, located in the important centers of the country, will tell the story of St. Louis and the reasons for its selection by commerce, finance and culture as a strategic center of one of the richest areas in the United States.

The Salute to St. Louis is part of a policy which marks a new step in radio entertainment. The aim of the program is to publicize the industries, living conditions, wealth, culture and recreational facilities of St. Louis.

The Salute will not rely upon a recital of familiar historical facts. Instead, the city's strategic location, its industries, its great power resources, its shipping and the benefits offered its citizens, will be developed.

The broadcast will emphasize St. Louis' location at the intersection of the main transcontinental rail and air route and the Mississippi River trade route.

Music will play part in the salute. Frederick G. Rodgers, nationally known broadcasting expert, has selected the music to interpret the characteristics of the midwest metropolis. "March of the Indian Phantoms," by the St. Louis composer, E. R. Kroeger; "The Youth of Hercules, "The St. Louis Blues, "The Thunderer March" and "The Westinghouse Overture" are some of the music programmed.

The two musical units which were the first to broadcast musical entertainment have been combined for the St. Louis Salute series. They are the KDKA Little Symphony orchestra and the Westinghouse band under the joint directorship of Victor Saudek and T. J. Vastine.

Frederick Rodgers has arranged the St. Louis Salute and will act as the narrator.

KDKA, Pittsburg, Pa., will sponsor the program.

New York Welcome To Bobby Jones Will Go on Air Wednesday

New York's welcome to Bobby Jones, fresh from his golf victories in England, will be broadcast by the combined NBC networks when Jones arrives Wednesday.

The winner of the British open and amateur championship will be greeted aboard ship by Mayor Walker's official welcoming committee, and will be escorted to City Hall, where the Mayor will extend a welcome on behalf of the city.

While the time of the program cannot be set until definite word is received as to the time of the liner's arrival at Quarantine, it is expected to begin somewhere between 10:30 and 12 noon.

XEN, Mexico City, seems to be using the 715 kc. channel, which is between WGN and WOR.

Where Middle Western Motorists Find Ideal Summer Vacation Spot

LAKE TANEYCOMO, south of Springfield, in the Missouri Ozarks. A score and more resorts have sprung up around the lake in recent years. The view is from Highway 76 and was made possible when trees in the foreground were cleared away by the State Highway Department in its roadside beautification campaign.

Scenic Motor Trip to Lake Taneycomo in Ozarks

Vacationists Will Find Many Attractions, From Fishing and Bathing to Golfing and Tennis — Detour Necessary From Rolla Through Cabool—Manchester Road Closed

By ROBERT L. BRADLEY,
Automobile Editor.

SURROUNDED on every side by the forest-covered slopes of the Ozarks at their highest and best, Lake Taneycomo, 58 miles south of Springfield and about 300 from St. Louis, is within an easy day's drive and, with its numerous water-front resorts offers diversified vacation attractions. The southern tip of the lake is not far from the Arkansas line.

Since last fall the route from this city has been changed, due to paving construction on U. S. Highway No. 66 between Rolla and Lebanon. It is now necessary to detour south from Rolla on Highway 63 to Cabool, then west on U. S. 60. This detour adds 32 miles to the trip, but the roads, although somewhat dusty, due to hot, dry weather, are in good condition.

Leaving St. Louis at Forest Park, the motorist takes the Clayton road to Ballas road, the first main highway past Denny, and goes south on Ballas to Manchester road, which is U. S. 66. This somewhat indirect way of getting out the city is made necessary by Manchester road being close from Hanley to Ballas roads, while paving and widening work is going on. The Balls way is just as short, however, and motorists will find this road has a smooth, dustless surface, wide enough for two lines of traffic.

Complains of Speeders.

Much of the congestion heretofore encountered on Manchester road, near the city limits will be eliminated by the widening, not to mention some disagreeably bumpy stretches.

Once on Manchester, the route lies straight out No. 66 to Rolla. Stopping at a filling station six miles west of St. Clair for gasoline, we met up with Justice of the Peace Duke, whose jurisdiction extends along the highway in either direction for 31 miles. Justice Duke complained of the growing number of automobile accidents that are occurring in his district, many of them fatal. Since Jan. 1, he told us, there have been 21 deaths from accidents, compared to but 48 fatalities in the whole of 1929.

"And the heavy touring season is just starting up," he said. "People get the idea that 66 is a race track. They don't take into consideration the fact that there are more curves along this stretch than at any other. What causes the accidents is high speed and reckless driving at the curves."

Duke is of the opinion that uniformed State patrols should be established, covering the principal highways. Such patrols in other states, he declared, have materially reduced the automobile death rate. And after hearing of the heavy accident toll in his district, and seeing how some cars took the corners we were inclined to agree that something ought to be done.

First Impression of Ozarks.

At Rolla, the route lies south over U. S. 63 and on this pleasant 74-mile stretch to Cabool, one obtains his first impression of the scenic splendor of the Ozarks that is to come. The foot-hills begin to appear, with their gently undulating slopes. Now and then a straggling band of grazing sheep is passed. The farms along the road seem well kept up. Houses have had their spring coats of paint, the fences—even the rail variety—are in a good state of repair and even in the heat of the day there is a hint of cool shadows as stretches of fragrant woods pass by.

We had picked up a nail somewhere south of Rolla and one tire was almost flat when we reached Cabool, so we had an opportunity to watch the passing cars while a mechanic repaired the damage. The number of out-State licenses was unusual. We saw machines from Connecticut, Georgia and Maryland, apparently bound for the same destination as ourselves, or possibly taking the southern route to Arizona and California, while there were a profusion of vehicles from Middle Western states and quite a few from the West itself. It would seem that 1930 is a touring year.

West out of Cabool, then, over U. S. 60, we found another good road although, to be sure, it was quite dusty. It had rained heavily a day or so before we passed, yet the road was just as dry and dusty as before.

Route Misses Springfield.

It is 72 miles from Cabool to Springfield, but one need not go that far to get to Taneycomo. Ten miles this side of Springfield, No. 60 strikes U. S. 65 and this route is followed south to Branson, which is 47 miles from the intersection.

At a little town called Ozark, the Ozarks really begin to manifest their greatness. Ozark itself, a sleepy little town with red brick buildings and several hundred more population on Saturday nights than during the week, is quite attractive. Then when you get a little way out, you find yourself riding along the crest of a steep cedar-covered ridge. At times, you look almost straight down to where, far below, a little mountain creek runs merrily along. At other times you can see miles and miles in all directions—horizons of dark hills and green plateaus.

It must be remarked that No. 65 is very, very dusty. When we drove over it, newly laid gravel sent up a steady cloud of dirt and dust. North of Ozark the State has laid tarvia, however, and it is to be hoped that more of this surfacing will be applied during the summer.

The road finally starts to descend, soon crosses the White River, at the bottom of a great cliff, skirts a little creek and then crosses another bridge, right in the town of Branson, and you are in Hollister.

Quaint Little Village.

Here is a quaint little town that has the appearance of an English village, with its rocky houses and stores and picturesque little tavern. The streets are clean and the people are progressive, most of them having started in business on a shoestring and literally grown with the town.

The story of Hollister in recent years is the story of Taney County—a rapid development with one main industry—that of entertaining vacation visitors. Some of the citizens plan to build a $250,000 hotel near Hollister in a year or two. Everybody is enthusiastic over the growing tourist business. People down there are apparently little affected by any business depression elsewhere. Business is good in Taney County.

Hollister and Branson are at one end of Lake Taneycomo, Forsythe, the county seat, at the other. Two roads connect the towns—No. 76 along the north shore of the lake and No. 78 along the south. Near Forsythe is the power dam across the White River that formed this large body of water.

Rockaway Beach, situated at the broadest part of the lake, reached by way of No. 76A, which runs down from No. 76, has its hotels, cottages, dance places, tennis courts and bathing beach.

Between Rockaway Beach and Forsythe lies the Shepherd of the Hills country, made famous by Harold Bell Wright's book. Many of the landmarks he mentioned still exist. And there is a

Vacation Trip Leads Through North Woods of Wisconsin

Picturesque Lake Section Traversed on Motor Tour From St. Louis—Route Lies Through Illinois to Madison and Kilbourn, With Dells of Wisconsin River an Attraction.

By HELEN KIRKSEY.

RAINBOW'S END—That is Wisconsin to the motorist. For the summer vacationist it is a land of dreams, and to the fisherman a realm of realization, while the traveler will find there an incomparable array of picturesque delights. The trip to the North Woods from St. Louis is like riding rainbows almost all the way.

The first part of Illinois is not scenically impressive, but there is real grandeur to look forward to and the average person will be half way to La Salle before he gets settled to the ride.

Leaving St. Louis, or rather the Mississippi River on the Illinois side—we prefer the bridges to the north of the city—we took U. S. Route 66 through Edwardsville to Litchfield from where we continued on State Highway 16 to Pana and north on U. S. 51 across the Wisconsin line at Beloit to Janesville. If we had planned a pilgrimage to historic Springfield and Lincoln's tomb we should have stayed on 66 through Litchfield and out of Springfield to Bloomington where 66 and 51 meet. At La Salle we crossed the picturesque Illinois River near the Starved Rock State Park. That name is intriguing and would bear investigation. Just above La Salle, at Mendota, the Black Hawk Trail makes the grand detour to Dixon and follows the Rock River back to Rockford. This way is 20 miles longer than the direct route but the road along the high bluffs overlooking the river is majestic. Between Dixon and Rockford there is an heroic monument of Chief Black Hawk, cut in native stone.

"Four-Lake" Capital City.

At Janesville we left 51 and, still on pavement, followed State Highway 13 to Madison, the "four-lake" capital of Wisconsin, where the State university is located. A spot of serene beauty is the Lincoln terrace on the campus.

We were prompted to stop at Kilbourn for a visit at the Dells of the Wisconsin River, a renowned geological feature. During the boat trip through the Dells we gazed on the scene of a terrific struggle between Black Hawk's tribe and the Sioux, who had come out of Minnesota to take possession of his domain. We looked upon the site of America's original "One long hop," where Black Hawk, on his horse, is supposed to have jumped across the river at a point where the rocky banks are 52 feet apart and the river 150 feet deep. We reveled in the forest primeval, with the rocks and rills; the furtive furry, scampering things, and the wild columbine that make one's heart dance. We marveled at the bronze of the water, darkened by minerals in the region of its source. We even shivered at the prospect of "Witches Gulch." Later, at twilight, we drove out of Kilbourn to a place where the road crosses one of the deep ravines, Cold Water Canyon, and climbed down Giant's Stairway for another eerie thrill.

Kilbourn is a typical tourist town, with provisions and accommodations for every type of visitor.

The most direct and scenic route from Kilbourn northward is State Route 13 by way of Wisconsin Rapids to Stevens Point, where the paving of No. 51 is resumed.

Paper-Making an Industry.

One of the great industries of this part of the state is manufacturing paper from wood plup. Mills are seen at many of the towns along the way. The country is uncultivated, gas stations are far apart and the only evidence of civilization is the forest fire prevention signs and an occasional steel observation tower atop a hill. What few fences there are are mostly made of stumps, great clusters of aged roots set on edge and lending a most rustic effect. There is a vigorous campaign against fire and the motorist and camper are constantly reminded of the danger of the forests.

Generally speaking, the roads in Wisconsin are not to be classed with those of many other states where touring is attractive, as there is not a great deal of paving except in the eastern part. This condition is credited to a state law whereby each county controls, in proportion to its automobiles and roads, the progress of improvement on Federal highways. In Northern Wisconsin where there is less habi-

Tourist Visitors Will Find State A Courteous Host

Police Officials Pledge Co-operation in Motor Club Campaign.

Every possible courtesy will be extended to automobile tourists entering Missouri this summer, the Chiefs of Police of the various cities and municipalities in the State have assuredthe automobile Club of Missouri. In response to a recent questionnaire, they pledged their co-operation in the club's campaign to see that visitors are treated politely and intelligently.

In his reply, Chief Gerk said: "Now that the 1930 touring season is on, our commanding officers are urging upon their men the necessity of being kind and polite to tourists. Now and then an individual police officer may be a little curt or short in his dealings with motor travelers, but, on the whole, I think our force will stack up favorably with those of other cities, in courtesy and readiness to be helpful."

Another police official declared that "it has become one of the first duties of police officers to act as the courteous host to visiting motorists."

Stands for Safety.

In its letter to the police chiefs, the club declared that it has always stood for safety, and "holds no brief for the careless or reckless driver." Continuing, the letter stated:

"We contend, however, that in most of the cases against motor vehicle drivers, the offenses committed are misdemeanors and the defendants should be accorded their legal rights, instead of being treated like criminals, as has been done on some occasions.

"Unfortunately, there have been times when an individual officer has so far forgotten his duty as a public officer that he has treated the violator of a motor vehicle law like a hardened felon. Such action not only brings dishonor to the officer, but discredits the entire department and utterly destroys the temple of public confidence that the other members of the force have constructed. We all want visitors to come to Missouri and we all want to treat them hospitably and fairly."

Other officials who pledged their support included the following:

Chief Kavanaugh, Maplewood.—"You may rest assured that the officers of this department have now and always have had instructions to treat all tourists with the greatest of courtesy, and to cooperate with them and extend any favors within their power to them."

Chief Brown, Richmond Heights.—"We are both willing and glad to co-operate with the Automobile Club to make the visitor's stay and passage through and in our community pleasant.

Chief McDonnell, Webster Groves.—"To my opinion this is a wonderful idea. It brings the subject before the officers of our State and impresses upon us the importance of courtesy in this particular branch of our work. It not only brings about a better feeling between the public and the police officer, but is solely responsible for good or bad juries in criminal cases in our state."

Chief Siegfried, Kansas City.—"It is our desire that the officers of our department extend to the tourists, whether non-residents or home folks, all or even more than is due them in the way of courtesy and fair treatment."

High Value of Cars.

The average value of the 255,692 new automobiles sold in California in 1929 was $1282. The total value was more than $328,270,000.

tation than in the east this works something of a hardship on the tourist. Ordinarily we think there is as much difference in seeing a country from a paved road or a bad one as there would be in an ocean trip first class as compared with steerage, but what Wisconsin lacks in speedy highways it makes up for in romantic scenery and charming byways.

At Merrill, 40 miles above Stevens Point, we left the Federal highway and followed a short cut, a gravel road, to Rhinelander, a hub city of one of the most popular resort sections, from where roads reach out to Eagle River, Woodruff, Three Lakes, Minocqua and a vast area of lakes, streams and summer resorts. North and to the east is the Brule River which was the scene of the Summer White House in 1928.

A Refuge From the City.

If you have ever been to Wisconsin you may be one of the thousands who have formed the habit—Wisconsin is that way—of knowing where you are going, but if you are merely drifting, seeking refuge from the city's humdrum, the green forests of Northern Wisconsin, spotted with lakes, offer a bewitching vacation land.

From the playground in the north central part of the State a motor tour of varied interest may be planned by following the eastern lake shore through the Green Bay region to Milwaukee and Chicago or by the more adventurous route through Hiawatha Land, the northern peninsula of Michigan which adjoins Wisconsin. Automobile ferries to Chicago and various Michigan ports are available at several of the Wisconsin shore cities.

We trailed northeast from the lake district to the Menominee River, which, on U. S. 2, is the Michigan-Wisconsin line just west of Iron Mountain. A city beneath a city is Iron Mountain, with many miles of underground passages in the iron ore deposits. The Michigan roads are excellent and remain beautiful parkways, due to a law forbidding the disturbance of flowers and shrubs beside highways.

At Spaulding, 23 miles west of Escanaba, we came to the familiar route marking "U. S. 41," one of the great Federal highways, which traverses the mid-continent from Copper Harbor, the northernmost point in Michigan, to the southwestern shore of Florida, and we followed it into Escanaba on a fine concrete pavement. Escanaba is the northernmost port on Green Bay and faces a smaller reach of Green Bay called Little Bay de Noc. From this point we followed the shore lake road through scarce communities and wooded stretches, between the bay and the gentle meadow lands, to Menominee and Marinette, neighboring cities at the mouth of the Menominee River.

A Center of Water Travel.

Here we were on No. 41 again, which led us 60 miles south to Green Bay, for 300 years a center of water travel and one of the most important ports in Wisconsin.

Sturgeon Bay, Ephriam, Fish Creek—places that are well known as summer resorts, are on the peninsula—the thumb of Wisconsin's outspread hand, with a good road all the way.

Our route followed 41 along the Fox River to Appleton, down the western side of Lake Winnebago through Oshkosh to Fond du Lac. Here we had a choice of continuing our tour to Milwaukee and Chicago or taking the shortest route to St. Louis, U. S. 151 southwest from Fond du Lac to Wisconsin State Route 26 and on to Janesville, which is on the direct route between St. Louis and Wisconsin.

Still under the spell of the North Woods and "the pine-top fiddle soundin' to the bowin' of the breeze," we decided to avoid the larger cities and take our memories home—memories of a land that is rich in Indian lore and legend, where the footpaths of history have followed the waterways, and names of Nicolet, Marquette, Joliet and Hennepin are traced in its romantic development; of lakes known the world over as the home of the mighty muskelunge; of the thousands of miles of streams where the sporting brook trout flaunts his splendor—memories of the mystery of the wilderness; of a quiet road patterned in a lacework of shadows—adventures in enchantment beyond each bend in the road—Wisconsin—at the rainbow's end.

Post-Dispatch Highway Maps Made Available

THE Resort and Travel Bureau of the Post-Dispatch has for distribution an excellent 50-page auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, showing the condition and numbers of highways and mileage between towns. The price is 50 cents and 60 cents, if mailed.

St. Louis and vicinity maps shows all towns, roads, rivers, streams, lakes and other details within a radius of 50 miles of St. Louis. They sell for 20 cents, 24 cents if mailed. Individual State maps are 10 cents, and 12 cents mailed.

City guides giving the location of streets and street car and bus lines, churches, hospitals, theaters, office buildings and containing a map of the city, sell for 25 and 30 cents.

Maps of St. Louis and the suburbs, showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Clayton, Ferguson, Kirkwood, Webster Groves and University City, sell for 40 and 45 cents.

Sedan Bodies Now Placed on 134-Inch Graham "8" Chassis

Both five and seven passenger sedan models are now available on the 134-inch wheelbase Graham special eight chassis, it is announced by the Gross Motor Co., local Graham-Paige representatives. Features of the body design and construction of these cars offer unusual beauty, roominess and comfort, in addition to sturdiness and compactness.

In the body construction an anti-squeak preparation, "rubber dough," is applied between contacting surfaces at all points where body squeaks might develop, providing a rubber cushion between these points that will remain pliable and effective throughout the life of the car. Rubber weather strips are applied to the bottom edges of the doors to exclude drafts.

The front seat is anchored to the body pillars, thus affording additional strength and finer appearance of the interior. Adjustment can be easily made without the occupants leaving the seat, by means of the crank located beneath the front edge of the seat cushion, which permits the seat to be moved forward and backward to any desired position. Foot pedals and steering column are both adjustable to meet the requirements of the driver.

Highways Through Connecticut Are Being Beautified

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., June 28.—Scarred landscapes of Connecticut are being rejuvenated for the motorist.

With but little new road construction scheduled, the State Highway Department has embarked upon an extensive beautification program.

Spring planting includes 669 trees and the replacement of 694 trees.

Five stockyards are maintained for collecting and growing natural shrubs.

Bare slopes resulting from earth cuts in construction work will be covered with honeysuckle, rambler roses, and Virginia creeper.

Rock gardens will be dressed with flowering growths for the first time. Shoulders and banks are being seeded and new picnic spots have been cleared.

Fails in Speed Attempt.

Kaye Don, British race car driver, will not make further attempts to break the world's automobile speed record at Daytona Beach, Fla., in his Silver Bullet machine. Motor trouble, inclement weather and a rough beach have kept him from attaining a speed of even 2'0 miles. The present record established a year ago by Henry Segrave, also of England, is 231 miles an hour.

Work of Grading And Paving Belt Line Starts Soon

Route 77, When Completed, Will Extend From No. 61 to Chain of Rocks.

Grading and paving between Kirkwood and Pattonville on Missouri 77, a newly designated belt-line route around St. Louis, will shortly be under way, according to information furnished the Automobile Club of Missouri by Division Highway Engineer S. M. Rudder.

The portion of the belt route from Kirkwood north to the Olive Street road to be placed under construction is the old Denny road, and from Olive Street road north to Pattonville it follows a new location. The contractor already has started grading that portion between Manchester and Clayton roads and on the new location immediately south of Pattonville.

The portion between Manchester and Clayton roads is not impassable, according to Rudder, although warning signs have been erected at both ends asking motorists to avoid the route if possible during construction. The remainder of the Denny road from Clayton road to Olive Street road will be closed shortly, Rudder said.

When completed, route 77 will extend from Mehlville on No. 61, skirting the Lambert flying field and terminating at Chain of Rocks on the north.

Other State construction to commence soon in St. Louis will include widening Route 61 north from the west end of the present 40-foot pavement to a point immediately east of Pattonville. A detour around this construction will be necessary at least part of the time, according to Rudder. Work is expected to commence within a few days.

Vacation Period of Oakland Motor Co. To Be Concentrated

Summer vacations for all factory and general office employes of the Oakland Motor Car Co. at Pontiac, Mich., will be concentrated within the two-week period beginning Saturday, July 19, and ending Monday, Aug. 4, it is announced. In previous years the vacations have been taken on a "staggered" schedule.

A skeleton organization will remain in each department during the vacation period to handle urgent matters and to permit the resumption of production on Aug. 4 without delay.

A. F. H. Payne Made Regional Manager Of Shell Petroleum

The appointment of A. F. H. Payne, former assistant to the manager of distribution of the Shell Petroleum Corporation, as central regional manager, and with headquarters in St. Louis is announced.

Payne, who succeeds G. A. Burns, recently appointed northern regional manager for Shell at Chicago, has been connected with the company for more than 10 years. In 1919 he was assigned to the sales department and later made a sales representative. He was transferred to the Indiana sales division in 1923. After serving two years in that capacity he was made Indiana division manager.

On April 16, 1929, Payne was made assistant to the manager of distribution.

He will now have under his supervision the sales activities of Shell in the territory extending from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico and from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains, including considerable territory in the Rocky Mountain region.

Motorized Farms.

There were 5,677,500 motor vehicles in use on farms in the United States at the end of 1929. This is a 100 per cent increase over 1919, when there were 2,146,512 in use.

YOUTH AND WOMAN KILLED IN HOLIDAY AUTO ACCIDENTS
Fatally Injured When Driving With Members of Family on Outing.
From the Post-Dispatch
July 5, 1929

Holiday auto accidents annually take a heavy toll in death or serious injuries. For your July 4th trip, resolve to prevent accidents.

The greatest contribution you can make to accident prevention is to keep your brakes in good shape. It is unwise to depend on "the other fellow." His brakes may be good, but yours must be to meet an emergency with the knowledge that you have done everything in your power to avoid an accident.

Have your brakes checked today—it costs nothing and may save a serious accident.

The CHAUDET PROCESS
is the ONLY process that makes Brakes completely SAFE at ONE operation. Saves your Time ... and money ... and assures positive Brake Safety.

a vital factor of Oakland's
SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE

Along with the speed, power and fast acceleration of the Oakland Eight go easy steering, easy gear-shifting and quick, certain brake action. As a result, the Oakland is not only thrilling to drive but also exceptionally safe.

By a simple adjustment of the driver's seat, you fix your position so that brakes, steering wheel and gear-shift lever are most conveniently located for you. As you try the gears, you discover that only the slightest pressure is required to release the clutch and that gear-shifting is particularly easy on this account.

Oakland's steering gear acts on roller bearings. It is designed in such a manner that the front wheels of the car respond instantly to a turn of the steering wheel. Yet the steering wheel is unusually free from road shocks.

Finally, Oakland's brakes are capable of bringing the car from 35 miles per hour to a dead stop in less than four car lengths. Internal-expanding, these brakes are fully protected and are always effective, regardless of weather or road conditions.

The faster, more powerful the car, the greater the need for easy, effective control. That is why so much emphasis is laid on braking, steering and kindred qualities in the Oakland Eight—the car with Superior Performance.

American Austin Shown for First Time in St. Louis

Price of Two-Passenger Coupe Placed at $499 Delivered.

The bantam Austin made its bow in St. Louis yesterday at the showrooms of Central States Motors, 3145 Locust street, the distributer. Its reputation for driving convenience and economy, achieved abroad, where it has won more than 500 cups, medals and trophies, preceded its official "unveiling" in this country.

It is a distinctly American product, this cousin of the famous British small car, is financed by American capital and built by American workmen in the plant of the American Austin Car Co. at Butler, Pa.

The Austin is said literally to run on pennies, doing 40 miles to the gallon of gas and from 20,000 to 40,000 miles to the set of tires. Oil consumption is low.

But to the hundreds of persons who thronged the Central States Motors building yesterday, its appearance was the most noteworthy feature. Low hung, rakishly streamlined, just like its American "big brothers," the gracefully rounded body and modern fittings give the two-seater coupe an air of distinction.

Narrower and Shorter.

The swanky little newcomer is 16 inches narrower and 28 inches shorter than any car in standard production in the United States. It rests on a wheelbase of 75 inches, with a 40-inch tred and total width of but 33 inches. There dimensions permit unusual maneuverability in traffic. The ground clearance is 8⅜ inches, ample for most American roads. Total weight is only 1130 pounds.

With a list price of $445 at Butler, the Austin coupe will deliver in St. Louis at $499. This price, according to L. P. Hambuechen, president of Central States Motors, will include front and rear bumpers, spare tire, tube and tire cover and the usual accessories.

Besides the coupe, the first model to be placed in production, a commercial car is being built. A shipment of these units is due to arrive here this week.

That the Austin has already caught the fancy of people in St. Louis and in the neighboring territory is shown by the fact that Hambuechen has already taken orders for 54 cars at retail, and 60 carloads at wholesale (a freight car holds eight of the tiny machines). These orders were received even before photographs of the new car were available, Hambuechen said.

Not Experimental Model.

Its builders in America assert the Austin comes not as an experimental model, but as a tried and tested unit of transportation. They point out that the power plant is a mechanical duplicate of its English counterpart.

A. J. Brandt, president of the American Austin Co., declares that the Austin marks a new departure in automotive transportation in the United States. "It is an auxiliary, not a substitute for existing transportation," he says. "The bantam car is the first practical solution of the problem of highway congestion. It solves the problem of waste transportation, evident when a five-passenger car is used for two-passenger service.

"The Austin brings relief to the parking situation, so acute in most cities and towns. The family car can be used for family transportation, while the bantam car serves the daily requirements of individual motoring, whether back and forth between home and office, or in the usual run of business."

Brandt went on to say that "the Austin make it possible to unscramble the family problem of 'who is to use the car today.'" "It will come into extensive use as a second and third car," he added.

Dealers Attend Preview.

Hambuechen sent invitations to 650 automobile dealers in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, comprising his distributing territory, to attend a preview of the Austin last week. His showrooms were crowded during the week, and many dealers signed up.

For the opening-day reception yesterday, the building of Central States Motors was attractively decorated, flowers being arranged in profusion around the cars. The sales force of the company, which also distributes Franklin cars in this district, was enlarged for the opening. The cars will be on display all day today and each evening throughoutt he week, until 10 p. m.

Whippet Enters Fifth Year of Production

Four years ago this month, with the introduction of the Whippet, the Willys-Overland Co. made its contribution to the low-priced field. This car brought a new conception of performance, economy, style and value to buyers of cars in its price class. Most of the features first brought out in the Whippet are said to have been adopted by other car manufacturers.

It was the soundness and thoroughness of the Willys-Overland engineering and the wide public acceptance of the new car that caused an almost immediate trend toward Whippet design in other cars, but the credit for the universal change is given to the Toledo manufacturer, it is said.

24,000 Salesmen Attend Chevrolet Training Schools

What has been termed the greatest sales training school in the history of the automobile industry—a series of five meetings conducted over a period of 10 days in each of 12,000 Chevrolet retail stores in the United States, and attended by 24,000 salesmen—has just been completed by the Chevrolet Motor Co.

So successful were the meetings that Chevrolet central office officials are considering making the "school" an annual affair. In practically ever instance Chevrolet dealers reported their complete sales personnel in attendance at each meeting, and in addition the office and service staffs requested and were given permission to attend the sessions. In all, it is estimated that an average of 40,000 sales, office and service employes in Chevrolet retail stores attended each of the five meetings. Increased selling efficiency by their present staffs and the addition of many salesmen to their organizations are expected by many dealers as a result of the "school."

The thought behind the school was the belief that most automobile salesmen possess only the theory of selling and usually are forced to undergo long experience and overcome many difficulties before they are able to furnish prospective buyers with a fully satisfactory exposition of the car's features. The school would immediately put the salesmen in possession of the experiences and methods of the most successful men in the industry.

All phases of the meetings were worked out and the materials prepared by the central office of the Chevrolet Motor Co. Holding the school was optional with each dealer, but practically the entire Chevrolet dealer organization responded.

19 New Dealers Added by De Soto In Two Months

Within the last two months 19 new dealers have been added by De Soto in the St. Louis territory, according to W. E. Dunkin, district manager of the Se Soto Motor Corporation. Dealers were added in the following towns: Alton, Edwardsville, Olmstead, Quincy, Red Bud, Harrisburg, Okawville and New Athens, Ill., and Marble Hills, Monroe City, Bowling Green, Cuba, Potosi, Wentzville and Pond, Mo., three in metropolitan St. Louis and one in Vincennes, Ind.

In February and March, 18 new dealers took on the De Soto line. Dunkin reports the outlook for the remainder of the year is for increased sales.

Autos Bought on Time.

The number of persons buying cars on installment payments in the United States increased nearly 12 per cent last year. Four hundred and eleven automobile financing companies advanced funds and collected interest totaling $1,586,-$19,550 on 3,441,629 automobiles in 1929.

Buick in Third Place in Number Of Motor Cars Sold

POPULARITY of the Buick is attested by a compilation of sales figures for the first quarter of 1930 which show Buick in third place in the entire industry in volume of cars sold. This position is now more remarkable in view of the fact that many lower-priced cars trailed the Buick in rank. The cars holding the first and second places are both units in the lowest price field.

C. W. Churchill, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co., discussing this Buick sales record, predicted a constantly increasing volume of business in the automobile industry during the remainder of this year.

Optimistic Outlook For Motor Industry Seen by Frampton

Automobile sales are due to increase within a short time and the industry as a whole is returning to normal prosperity, in the opinion of R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., who has just returned from a visit to Detroit, Mich., Cleveland, O., and Chicago.

"Stocks of used cars are lower than in years and new cars are being produced only as fast as they are being sold," he declared. "More significant, the number of persons visiting St. Louis retail showrooms has increased in the past few days. Car owners are using their machines more than ever, as is shown by the great number of requests for touring information received by the various agencies."

In Cleveland, Frampton said, thousands of obsolete cars are to be junked during the next six months, which will help sales in that district.

"The automobile industry is perhaps in the best condition of any of the major industries and may be expected to lead the way back to prosperity," he added. "Values were never greater than now."

Coyote Hunter Chases Prey in Automobile

Paul Wright, wealthy rancher and champion coyote hunter of Oklahoma, has more than 400 pelts to his credit and he attributes much of his success as a coyote hunter to the performance of his De Soto coupe.

Wright owns two prize-winning greyhounds, with which he captures the coyotes. He carries the dogs across the prairies in his coupe and when a coyote is sighted, turns them loose, following the chase across prairies, ditches, canyons and rocks in his car until the coyote is captured.

School Patrols To be Expanded By Motor Club

Have Cut Down Accidents in St. Louis, Director of Safety Says.

Preparations are being made by the Automobile Club of Missouri to expand the school boy patrol movement, inaugurated some time ago, which has aided materially in reducing traffic accidents near the schools.

St. Louis showed a considerable decrease in the number of fatalities among school children due to automobile accidents last year, according to P. F. Drury, safety director of the club. Drury declared he has yet to receive a report of an accident in which a child was hurt at street intersections patrolled by uniformed groups.

"We plan to organize patrols in every city in Missouri," Drury said. "Where school authorities feel these groups are needed, we will furnish the equipment."

Patrol members are given Sam Brown belts and badges by the Automobile Club. The boys are selected by the school principals and trained to protect the younger pupils at street crossings.

Approximately 150,000 pupils in the schools of Boonville, Columbia, Jefferson City, Hannibal, Cape Girardeau, Joplin, Eldon and Seymour are now protected by the patrols, Drury said.

Scenic Motor Trip Leads to Taneycomo In Heart of Ozarks golf course at the Shepherd of the Hills Estate, where a number of cabins and cottages form a little colony all by itself.

Three Other Golf Courses.

There are three other golf courses around the lake, one at Branson, one near Hollister and the third at Walnutshade, to the north of the lake.

Fishing is good in the White River and in Taneycomo. We were told that plenty of crappie, large and small mouth bass and goggle-eyes are there for the catching. A fish hatchery has been established on the lake.

And there is an institution known as the School of the Ozarks which merits attention. Here children may work their way through the eighth grade and high school course at healthful outdoor occupations.

There are two caves near Branson within a short drive. There is horseback riding, hiking, bathing and boating. From Branson regular power boat excursions are run every day to the dam at the other end of the lake, to Rockaway Beach or to places closer by. A swimming pool has been built by the company which operates the launches.

Or, if you like to drive, follow No. 65 or No. 86 south from Branson and you will experience more thrills, what with hairpin curves and steep hills. The Ozarks of Arkansas are in sight and you may even want to go as far as Eureka Springs, some 70 miles distant.

Returning to St. Louis you can either traverse the same route or motor into Springfield, an attractive city, and follow U. S. 66 to Lebanon, as far as it now goes. From Lebanon the old Ozark Trail, now adequately marked by the Automobile Club of Missouri, passes through Richland, Crocker and Dixon and on to Vienna and down to St. James, where it rejoins U. S. 66.

To get to Hazelgreen, a resort center near Waynesville, on No. 66, one drives south from Richland on a county road.

Tire Sales Increase

A steady increase in the sale of tires since Jan. 1 over 1929 is reported by the tire department of Stix, Baer & Fuller Co., which handles Kelly-Springfield tires and tubes exclusively. The department offers free mounting, deferred payments and a guarantee with the tires sold.

Motor vehicle accidents in the United States last year resulted in an economic loss of more than $850,000,000.

Price Reduction On Roosevelts Ranges to $180

At From $950 to $985, F. O. B. Factory, it Is Lowest-Priced 'Straight Eight.'

Manufacturing economies resulting from a four-year program of concentrating on the straight-eight type of motor car have made possible reductions ranging up to $150 in the list prices of the Marmon-Roosevelt eight, it is announced by G. M. Williams, president of the Marmon Motor Car Co.

With the new prices in effect immediately, the Marmon-Roosevelt is now the lowest priced straight-eight ever offered on the market, the coupe having a factory list of $950, and the sedan $985. The entire line is now the lowest priced of any ever produced by Marmon.

The reductions mean a saving of $180 in the price of the convertible coupe and $150 in the price of the four-passenger Victoria coupe, both body styles now listing at $995 at the factory. The sedan is $90 cheaper than formerly and the two-passenger standard coupe has been reduced $45.

Originally introduced early in 1929 as the world's first low-priced straight-eight, the Marmon-Roosevelt has proved a popular model. An improved model, announced earlier this year, is the one on which current prices have been reduced.

Shortly after its introduction, the Marmon-built Roosevelt established three records. A sedan was driven continuously for 440 hours on the Indianapolis speedway under A. A. A. supervision to set a new non-stop mark. Shortly afterward another car was driven to every state capital in less than 30 days for a total distance of 18,244 miles. The third record came in the annual Pike's Peak hill climb race for cars in the Roosevelt price class.

Purchasers of Marmon-Roosevelt cars at the reduced prices will receive the one-year guarantee on materials and workmanship. The guarantee extends to original purchasers of all Marmon cars the same protection as the standard 90-day warranty, which is general practice throughout the industry, except that the period of time is one year or 12,000 miles, whichever occurs first.

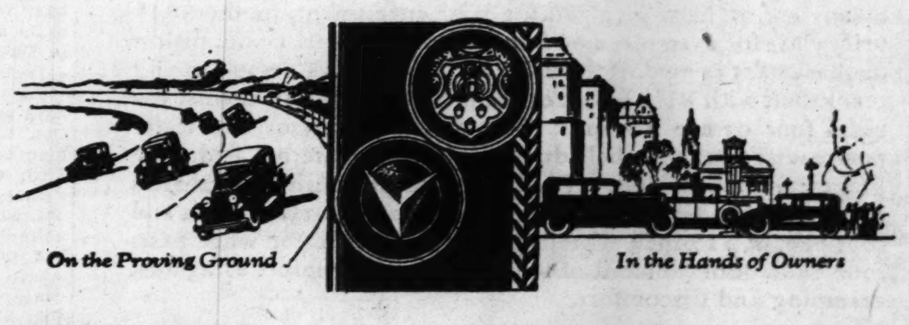
Dependability
CHECKED BY TEST -- PROVED BY OWNER SATISFACTION



DEPENDABILITY . . . just a good old-fashioned quality . . . but the best guarantee of satisfaction you can find in a motor car.

You will find it in both the Oldsmobile Six and Viking Eight.

You will find it because Olds Motor Works insists upon the greatest care in selection of materials, the most progressive thought and, in matters of design, the highest standards of precision manufacture.

And, in addition to these vital factors is another, equally important . . . the continuous hard tests imposed upon Oldsmobile and Viking to insure dependability of the highest character.

These tests employ not only the great modern facilities at Olds Motor Works but also the vast resources of the General Motors Research Laboratories and the General Motors Proving Ground. Month after month, mile after mile, the laboratory and road tests go on—the best possible assurance of highest quality in Oldsmobile and Viking.

For proof of results, you need only ask your friends who drive these cars what their experience has shown. They will tell you that Oldsmobile and Viking offer everything in performance, comfort, and convenience that the most particular person could desire. They will tell you what all owners know—that both Oldsmobile and Viking provide the kind of thorough dependability that builds loyalty, confidence, and lasting satisfaction.

Lackland Service Co. Of Overland Is Made A Chevrolet Dealer

The Lackland Service Co. of 9405 Lackland road, Overland, has been appointed a direct Chevrolet dealer for Overland and vicinity. Leslie N. Hall is president of the company, Harry S. Gleick vice president and Helen A. Hall secretary-treasurer.

In 1922 Hall started a small garage and filling station at their present location. Late in 1923 a company was formed and in 1925 it became an official A. A. A. service station.

A year ago the company built a $25,000 building, with a 40x50 showroom and 50x70 service department, with space for used cars, paint shop and battery service.

The service department has been fully equipped to make repairs on Chevrolet cars, it is announced.

New Ford Truck Models Introduced

New Ford model AA trucks and model A light delivery cars are announced by the Ford Motor Co., and are on display at Ford in St. Louis.

Changes in the trucks are principally in the front end, which has been redesigned, and in the cab. Lines of the front resemble closely those of the improved passenger cars introduced in December. The radiator is higher, fenders are wide and flowing, and a black cowl strip adds a note of distinction.

Open or enclosed cabs may be had and the cabs will fit either the model AA or the model A chassis.

The enclosed cab is all steel and cobines utility with good appearance. It is low in appearance, yet with ample head room. The roof is covered with double texture rubber top material. Cushions are trimmed in dark cobra grain artificial leather in plain panel style.

'Silent Second' Transmission Is Aid to Touring

The new Reo passenger car models, equipped with the Reo silent-second transmision, are particularly adaptable for summer touring requirements, according to H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Steiner-Fahrenkrog Automobile Co., local Reo distributer.

"Reo's new silent-second transmission, which is as silent in second gear as the ordinary high, and which simplifies driving in heavy traffic and on hills because of its easy shifting qualities, eliminates from summer driving several of its most important annoyances," Fahrenkrog declares.

"One of the greatest sources of delay and annoyance in connection with the summer vacation trip is the lost time incidental to hill and mountain driving. The old type transmission which took the car up a steep incline at a snail's pace is just as much out of date as the two-wheel brake. Driving in city traffic also has been simplified by the new transmission, first by making the use of second gear as acceptable as high because of the noise elimination, and second, because of the added pickup and speed with second gear now possible."

The new transmission, with three speeds forward and one reverse, includes a second gear as silent as the ordinary high. It permits easy shifting, without clashing or grinding, from second into high at any speed and from high into second at 40 miles an hour.

Advent of Austin Closely Watched By the Industry

Real Test of Bantam Car Will Come With Retail Sales Campaign.

By MARC BRAUN.

DETROIT, Mich., June 28.—One of the most important events of the year is taking place today—the placing on the market of the British-designed but American-made Austin bantam car. It is an event which may have far-reaching consequences and may affect the American automobile industry in several ways.

While all American manufacturers are not interested in the bringing out of this low-priced model, makers of low and medium priced cars will watch very closelyq the reception given to this newcomer. When during the winter the announcement was made by officials of the American Austin Car Co. that more than 100,000 orders for the bantam car had been booked before the manufacturing of the car had begun, it created much comment. However, it is by no means uncommon for manufacturers to book orders for a new car or model from the display of photographs and blue prints. The real sales test begins only when the car is in actual production, and the dealers begin to sell the car. That is why from now on development in the sale of this machine will have the attention of most sales and engineering organizations concentrated upon it.

As an official of a manufacturing concern here remarked, the Austin's appearance, meaning the body design, will be more of a deciding factor with the public than its low price. Should the car meet with the success its sponsors expect, it may lead to other foreign manufacturers starting similar plants in this country, and to a number of American concerns bringing out cars along the same lines. Some of the British and Continental trade papers have expressed the opinion that if this first invader meets with success others will follow.

Might Compete in Low-Price Field.

As one of the English journals states, no European motor car manufacturer would have much success in trying to compete with American car makers in either the medium priced or high priced car field, but only, perhaps, in the very lowest price field. There are plenty of concerns in England with strong financial resources, ready to come over and give the low priced American cars a race, says one writer. With the possible exception of one or two French concerns there are no other European cars whose design would appeal to the average American buyer.

Reports from Toronto, Canada, are to the effect that the Canadian Austin Motor Car Co. is being organized in that city to make the Austin bantam in Canada. For the time being the parent company of England will send the parts and accessories to assemble the car, but later manufacturing will be started in a plant now being equipped in Toronto.

Results of June production and sales will be forthcoming in a few days and from the latest information will very likely show the month to have been as good as May, especially from the sales standpoint. Some of the car makers will announce larger outputs and others will show a decrease, but sales for the industry as a whole, will, as in May, show that dealers' stocks are constantly getting lower, which, has been and will continue to be, the general aim of car makers.

This is the vacation period in the industry, and as some workers explain, it is the "end of the year," meaning that when they return to work they will start on the new models for 1931. Although some new models will probably continue to be announced, the big novelties are being closely guarded and will not be made known until about show time. Some startling new car designs will be disclosed for the first time at the New York show. And before this exhibit opens, there will be the Paris and London international shows, which this year will again witness some entirely new cars.

Employment Only Fair.

The employment situation continues to be only fair in Michigan. The most recent report of the United States Department of Labor shows that while in some automotive plants a small increase is noticeable, in many others the number of employed has been reduced and part-time operations prevail. Employment is expected to be increased in the fall, according to some of the plant works managers, but not to any great extent. In most cases the plants, when hiring additional men, give preference to former employes.

Across the river, in Canada, the various Canadian-American plants are now also extending vacations to their men. The Ford, Chrysler and Studebaker factories are being operated with a smaller force, it is said, but there is no actual shutdown.

From Willoughby, O., comes the report that the Ohio Rubber Co. has received a $4,000,000 order from Ford for running board mats.

One of the busiest plants in Michigan has been the Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Corporation, which is making all the wire wheel equipment for the Chevrolet and about half of the wheels for the Ford passenger cars. It is said that the daily output of wheels has been averaging nearly 35,000.

Army of Auto Operators.

There are upwards of $25,000 licensed automobile operators and chauffers in New York City.

At St. Louis Airfields

Four St. Louis pilots, Bobby Jewel, George Haynes, Alvin Niemeyer and Richard McGuire, were forced to jump from windows to save themselves when fire destroyed the Universal Airlines hangar at the Chicago Municipal Airport early Wednesday.

Although 14 planes were destroyed, schedules were maintained through a speedy transfer of equipment from other points. A temporary headquarters was erected and opened Friday and will be used pending construction of a new hangar. An investigation disclosed the blaze started while gasoline was being drained from a ship, but the direct cause has not been learned. When discovered, the fire had gained such headway that night personnel was forced to turn its attention to arousing the men sleeping in the pilots' quarters. The damage to the hangar and equipment was estimated at $500,000.

Woman Glider Pilot.

Mrs. Emma Baker, St. Louis, is the first Missouri woman to qualify for a glider pilot's license. Mrs. Baker is a member of the St. Louis Glider Association and received her training at Kuchins' Gliderport, near Creve Coeur Lake. Four glider clubs have been organized here by glider enthusiats, who devote Saturday afternoons and Sundays to the sport.

Electrical Training Plane.

Visitors to Parks Airport will be permitted to operate an electrically controlled training model plane. The plane, designed for instruction purposes, is capable of maneuvers simulating actual flight. It is the first device of the sort exhibited in the United States, according to Parks Air College officers.

Laura Ingalls Buys Plane.

Miss Laura Ingalls, holder of the loop record for women, has purchased a Moth biplane and is planing to break several other records.

Buys Ford Club Plane.

The de luxe Ford club plane featured at the New York Aircraft Show has been purchased by the Continental Oil Co., Ponca City, Ok. The ship was refueled at Lambert-St. Louis Field last week on the way from Detroit, Mich., to Ponca City.

Flies to Conference.

Robert Dron, an electrical contractor of Madison, Ill., missed train connections at Washington, Ia., last Monday and wired the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. for a plane to take him to Farmington, Mo., when he was scheduled to attend an important business conference the same night. Pilot Brewster made the trip to Iowa and landed Dron at Farmington in time for the conference.

Today's Airport Events

Curtiss-Steinberg Field.

Dedication ceremony and flying exhibition, starting at 2 p. m.

Parks Airport.

2 to 5 p. m., races over 25-mile course by pilots of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service; parachute drop by Sergeant C. R. Boles of the air unit; glider demonstration.

Lamber-St. Louis Field.

Due to Curtiss-Steinberg dedication, there will be no flying program at Lambert-St. Louis Field today. Sight-seeing flights will be conducted by commercial operators as usual.

Limited Commercial Pilots.

Gerald May, Lexington, Neb.; Judd Yonkers, Shippensville, Pa., and C. J. Fryer, St. Louis, completed the limited commercial pilot's course at the Universal Flying School during the week. Harold Buckley, St. Louis, completed the course for a private pilot's license.

Publicity Director at Parks.

George E. Bounds, formerly with B. Nugent & Bros. Dry Goods Co., has been appointed director of publicity and advertising for Parks Air College. Bounds is a director of the Advertising Club of St. Louis and organized the Junior Aviation Club here.

Curtiss-Robertson Sales.

The Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. last week delivered a Robin plane to a purchaser in Baltimore, Md., and completed a Moth equipped with a Cirrus engine for a pilot entered in the cross-country race for planes with Cirrus engines, scheduled to start within several weeks.

National Air Races.

Walter Brookins, who participated in the first heavier-than-air flying exhibition here, held at Kinloch Park in 1910, is scheduled to take part in the national air races at Chicago in August. "Bud" Mars, now a grandfather, who also flew here in the early days, is on the air-race program with Brookins.

Inspects Parks Air College.

J. A. Benoit, formerly connected with Parks Air College, now assistant to the general manager of the Detroit Aircraft Corporation, inspected the air college and the Ryan Aircraft Co. last week. Benoit suggested the adoption of certain economies until general business becomes more active.

Woman Caught in Storm.

Miss Frnaces Harrell, member of the Curtiss Exhibition Co.'s troupe of stunt flyers, had a difficult time finding Curtiss-Steinberg Airport during the thunderstorm last Wednesday afternoon. On the previous day she landed at Indianapolis, Ind., during a windstorm. Miss Harrell has a prominent place on the flying program at Curtiss-Steinberg Field today.

Autographed Photo Collection.

Ralph Rugh, photographer at Lambert-St. Louis Field, has an interesting collection of autographed photographs of aviation notables. The group includes Col. Lindbergh's wife and mother.

Horses Damage Plane.

The principal excitement of the week at Lambert-St. Louis Field was caused by a runaway team of horses harnessed to a road grader. The animals, frightened by the exhaust of an engine, sideswiped Mrs. Ruth Stewart's monoplane, damaging the wing.

Cleveland Pigeons Released.

More than 1000 carrier pigeons belonging to Cleveland, O., fanciers, were released at Lambert Field early Saturday morning for a race to their home roosts. The faster birds were expected to make the 500-mile flight in eight hours.

Phil Ball to Chicago.

Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, accompanied by his pilot, Frank Dunn, flew to Chicago on business last Friday, and expects to fly to Detroit, Mich., Tuesday to attend a meeting of directors of the Detroit Aircraft Corporation.

Joseph Imeson Gets Job.

Joseph Imeson, graduate of the Von Hoffmann Flying School, obtained a position last week piloting a privately owned ship. Six new students for the mechanics' course enrolled at the Von Hoffmann School during the week.

Visitors at the Fields.

Eighteen visiting pilots registered at Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week. Visitors to Parks Airport included Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, piloting a Monocoupe.

Workmen Dressed in Orange.

Workmen employed on the landing area at Lambert-St. Louis Field have been outfitted in orange colored overalls by Field Manager Parks to make them more readily visible to pilots coming in for landings.

South American Business.

The New York, Rio & Buenos Aires Airline has averaged more than 1000 passengers a month since Jan. 1. The company has 30 large planes in regular service.

Parks College Graduates.

Russell C. Campbell, Yankton, S. D., completed the transport pilot's course at Parks Air College during the week. Richard Crane, Adams, Wis., was graduated from the limited commercial flying course.

Color of Exhaust Smoke.

There is a clue to what is wrong with the car in the color of the smoke that issues from the exhaust pipe. If it is black, the meaning is too much gasoline. Blue or white smoke indicates an excess of oil in the engine. If the tint of the exhaust emission is gray, it is likely produced by a combination of too much oil and too much gasoline.

What's New in Radio Industry

New Brunswick Sets Shown to St. Louis Dealers—General Electric Receivers to Be Pre-selector Superheterodynes—Heilmann Clarion Representative—New Fada Sets Arrive.

pecial Detector System in Fada Sets Shown Here.

All models of the new Fada re- eiver line are now being shown n St. Louis, H. J. Fuchs, secretary f the Fuchs Appliance Co., Fada istributer, has taken charge of he firm's radio division.

The new Fada chassis has nine ubes, including two of the 45 type s push-pull audio. It also has a pecial detector system which is apable af handling as high as 100 olts from the R. F. stages and, so, virtually impossible to overload. 27 type heater tube is used as a wo element detector, its function eing confirmed to detecting, while nother 27 type tube does the am- lifying which is usually also re- uired of a detector tube. By oupling this dual detection system the audio system through re- istance coupling, the new Fada ets gain distinct advantages in reater azility to handle volume ithout distortion and in minimiz- g audio hum.

An adjustable automatic volume ontrol is another feature.

Cross talk from powerful local tations is prevented by a pre-se- ector tuner. A special noise filter uppresses noise frequencies of 000 cycles and upward, and is articularly valuable in places here there is excessive back- round interference. A "Flasho- raph" tuning aid announces the ct point where a station may be uned in best by lighting up the tation's call leters in a window on e dial. A local-distance switch is lso provided. What's New in Radio Industry

New Brunswick Sets Shown to St. Louis Dealers—General Electric Receivers to Be Pre-selector Superheterodynes—Heilmann Clarion Representative — New Fada Sets Arrive.

Special Detector System in Fada Sets Shown Here.

All models of the new Fada receiver line are now being shown in St. Louis. H. J. Fuchs, secretary of the Fuchs Appliance Co., Fada distributer, has taken charge of the firm's radio division.

The new Fada chassis has nine tubes, including two of the 45 type in push-pull audio. It also has a special detector system which is capable af handling as high as 100 volts from the R. A 27 type heater tube is used as a two element detector, its function being confirmed to detecting, while another 27 type tube does the amplifying which is usually also required of a detector tube. By coupling this dual detection system to the audio system through resistance coupling, the new Fada sets gain distinct advantages in greater azility to handle volume without distortion and in minimizing audio hum.

An adjustable automatic volume control is another feature.

Cross talk from powerful local stations is prevented by a pre-selector tuner. A special noise filter suppresses noise frequencies of 4000 cycles and upward, and is particularly valuable in places where there is excessive background interference. A "Flashograph" tuning aid announces the exact point where a station may be tuned in best by lighting up the station's call leters in a window on the dial. A local-distance switch is also provided. Uniform sensitivity from 550 to 1500 kilocycles is insured by use of two primary coils magnetically related to the secondary instead of one primary coil. Dynamic speakers built by Fada are used in all models.

All Brunswick Controls in Single Unit-Selector Knob.

A panel control, by which the treble or bass may be emphasized as preferred by the listener, is a feature of the new Brunswick receivers that were shown to groups of dealers all the past week by the Beck & Corbitt Co., distributer, at a series of daily meetings at the Coronado Hotel. Three receiver models and a radio-phonograph combination, which has an automatic record changer with a capacity of 20 records, make up the line. The cabinets are of exceptionally pleasing design.

Provision is made on the standard receivcer chassis for connection of a resister and switch to permit use of the sets amplifier and speaker for reproduction of records. This installation is a simple matter for a service man.

Brunswick receivers are made complete in the company's plants at Dubuque, Ia., and Muskegon, Mich.

New General Electric Sets of Superheterodyne Type.

Some 150 dealers attended a meeting and dinner at Hotel Statler on Tuesday, at which the new General Electric receivers were shown. These sets, the first bearing the General Electric name, will not be on the market for several weeks.

The receivers are of the superheterodyne type, having nine tubes, of which four are screen grid valves. The superheterodyne circuit used is unusual, in that it uses a preselector to shut out cross talk before the signals are detected and amplified. Extraordinary selectivity, as well as distance range, is claimed for these General Electrics.

In addition to the four screen grid tubes, they use two 27 type tubes, two 45 type tubes in push-pull audio, and an 80 rectifier tube. A tone control and local-distance switch are on the panel. There are three models—lowboy, highboy and radio-phonograph combination.

E. H. Oas, manager of the General Electric Supply Co., acted as toastmaster at the dinner. Speakers included L. C. Arnold, sales manager of the firm, and C. A. Lindevall, district supervisor, and H. McKnew, service director, both of the radio division of the General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Heilmann Factory Representative for Clarion Sets.

Otto E. Heilmann has been appointed factory representative for the Transformer Corporation of America, of Chicago which is introducing the new Clarion receiver. The set has three screen grid tubes, power detector and 45-type tubes in push-pull audio. The company for years has made speakers, transformers, chokes, condensers and other parts for other radio manufacturers.

Great Advances In Broadcasting Are Heralded

the NBC or Columbia networks.

Possibly the Warners are concentrating on synchronization—the newly developing system of broadcasting whereby any number of stations, properly handled technically, can be placed on a single wave length to cover the country. This method of chain broadcasting is unquestionably coming, and it would not be unlike the ambitious pioneers of the talking pictures to step into radio to blaze the way in this field also.

Meanwhile, Electrical Research Products, Inc., otherwise known as "Erpe," is reported to be eager to forsake the talking picture field; that is, its parent company, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., is said to be anxious to dispose of "Erpe," just as it disposed of its broadcasting holdings to the R. C. A. about three years ago, leading to the creation of the National Broadcasting Co.

Radio and the talking pictures are largely by-products of the telephone and other electrical laboratories. But the A. T. & T., it is said, wants tto get out of side-line business because it divers attention from its main business, which is conducting the telephone communications of the larger share of the country.

"Erpe" may be sold, possibly to one of the large motion picture or-organizations. Or it may, like the Graybar Co., also formerly a subsidiary of A. T. & T.'s Western Electric, be turned over to its employes as a separate and independently owned and operated entity. Meanwhile, "Erpe" continues to be the source of the sound equipment used by most picture producers and in a majority of theaters of the country.

KMOX Notes

Philip Neeter.

PHILIP NEETER, first viola of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will play during the Community Forum Hour at 3:30 this afternoon. There will also be a debate on where to spend one's vacation. Mrs. W. J. Porter, who has been abroad 18 times, will hold that a vacation abroad is more desirable than one spent at home. Keith McCanse, an authority on the Ozarks, will contend that the Ozarks are the finest place for a vacation. * * * Neeter will play "Arioso" (Bach); "Canzonetta" (Alard), "Elegie" (Ernst) and "Feuilles de Printemps" (Gervasio.. He will also play an obligato for Miss Emma Hart, who will sing "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix," from Samson and Delilah; "Ava Maria" (Gounod) and Lullaby (Brahms). * * * KMOX will introduce a new children's feature this week. At 5:15 p. m. Bunny, Bobbie and Uncle Dell will broadcast. Uncle Dell is taking the children on a trip to foreign countries. They travel in a marvelous new airplane. * * * The Choral Singers, a mixed chorus of 28 voices, will broadcast again Wednesday at 9:30 p. m. They will sing "Unfold, ye Portals" from The Redemption and "Send Out Thy Light" (Gounod); the 150th Psalm (Randeggar); "All Through the April Evening" (Roberton); "Awake With the Lark" (Bereef); "Paean to Summer" (Von Suppe); "A Rondel" (MacFarlane); "Invictus" (Huhn), and "Recessional" (DeKoven). * * * The KMOX Players will put on a 15 minute detective sketch every morning at 11:45. * * * "The Dwight Richardson Mystery" is this week's Who Done It? Dwight Richardson, wealthy business man, is mysteriously slain in his apartment by a dagger thrust. There is a trapdoor, cut in the panelled ceiling by Elsie's young man, who is a chemist and very much in love with her. There are crooked business dealings and it is possible that the trapdoor figures in the murder. * * * Willie and Lillie, after a week's absence, are back on the air at their usual time, 10:10 to 10:20 p. m. * * * The Skouras Hour, featuring Ed Lowry and his Ambassadonians, has been moved to 6 p. m. Tuesday evening. The rendezvous in the Mayfair Hotel is open to visitors who wish to see Lowry's performance.

Canada Expected Soon to Demand Broadcast Waves

Dissatisfaction Over Division With U. S. Stations Indicated in Parliament.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON. — More light is thrown on the Canadian attitude toward the preponderance of American speech and music on broadcasting channels in the statement by the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in reply recently to questions put to him in the House of Commons at Ottawa regarding Canada's broadcasting rights.

From this statement, the conclusion may fairly be drawn that Canada is only awaiting action by Parliament, in collaboration with the provinces, to set the Dominion's radio house in order before demanding a larger share of the 96 wave lengths available for broadcasting. The whole radio question, including the Canadian Royal Commission's report favoring a Government-owned radio system with a super-power station in each province, was recently referred to a special committee at the instance of Premier King.

The statement of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries stressed Canada's soveerign rights in radio, again revealing the dissatisfaction that prevails because Canada has "a temporary and inadequate assignment" of only six exclusive and 12 shared channels.

Here and There on the Air

WOR, Newark, N. J., to Seek 50,000-Watt Power—Phil Cook in Five-Nights-a-Week Series—KFKB Wins Temporary Victory Over Radio Commission—Columbia System Gets Control of WBT, Charlotte, N. C.—Sodero's Opera Acclaimed in Italy—Address by Prince of Wales to Be Broadcast July 7—Speech by President on Chains Tomorrow Night.

By J. L. S.

The Federal Radio Commission has lost again before the United States Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, which has granted KFKB, Milford, Kan., the right to continue to operate until the court can find time to decide its appeal from the board's refusal to renew its license. KFKB was ruled off the air by the commission following a hearing on charges that its owner, Dr. John R. Brinkley, was using it to solicit medical business and was prescribing for listeners. Dr. Brinkley has been doing quite a business in gland transplantation. The American Medical Association complained that his broadcasting was a menace to the public health.

The Columbia System has added WBT, the 5000-watt station at Charlotte, N. C., to the list of broadcasters which it controls financially. WBT has been broadcasing NBC network programs, but for the time being is to put the best features of both the NBC and CBS nets on the air. Eventually, it is taken for granted, the station will carry only CBS features. This makes nine stations in which the Columbia System has a strong financial interest, among them being KMOX, St. Louis; WBBM, Chicago; WABC, New York, and WCCO, Minneapolis.

It is reported that WOR, Newark, N. J., is to apply for a 50,000-watt construction permit. WOR began as one of the great Eastern independent stations, then for a while was principal key station for the Columbia chain, then resumed its independent status and of late has been handling some of the important NBC chain programs and tying up with WLW Cincinnati, and WMAQ, Chicago, in the so-called "Quality Group." Under the new ruling of the Federal Radio Commission restricting 50,000-watt stations to four in each zone, there is only one 50,000-watt vacancy in the First Zone, in which WOR is located. WEAF and WGY use 50,000 watts, while WTIC, Hartford, Conn., uses 50,000 watts half time on a channel shared with WBAL, a 10,000-watter at Baltimore, Md.

Frances Williams, stage star, is scheduled for the Camel Pleasure Hour over KWK at 7:30 Wednesday night.

A new Quaker series, featuring Phil Cook, will be broadcast over an NBC chain, including KWK, from 5:30 to 5:45 five evenings a week, beginning July 1. The programs will be broadcast nightly, except Saturdays and Sundays. Cook will continue his early morning broadcasts. In his night-time program, he will double in two roles—one that of a city youth who goes to the country to run a hotel, the other that of a country youth. He also will comment humorously on the news of the day.

At 9:45 p. m. tomorrow, President Hoover will make his fourth radio address within a month. He will speak from the White House to the conference of governors at Salt Lake City. All three chains are to carry his speech.

The speech to be made by the Prince of Wales at a dinner in London on July 7 is to be broadcast over both NBC networks. His address will be the feature of the annual banquet of the National Union of Students. The program is to begin at 2:25 p. m. and continue 15 minutes.

Jane Schneider, 4480 Maryland avenue, a member of the Fontbonne High School orchestra, St. Louis, has been chosen as a member of the National High School orchestra and Band Camp at Interlochen, Mich. This orchestra and band is to play over some 50 stations during the Majestic Hour programs Sunday nights during July and August. The orchestra of 250 young musicians and the band of 150 pieces will be led by some of this country's best-known conductors. The camp is sponsored by the Music Supervisors' National Conference, the National Federation of Music Clubs and the National Bureau for the Advancement of Music.

Music by Reginald de Koven, composer of "Robin Hood," is to make up the program for the Atwater Kent concert over KSD next Sunday night.

Cesare Sodero's grand opera, "Ombre Russe," which had its premiere in a broadcast over KSD some months ago, scored a triumph at its first Italian presentation, which took place in the La Fenice Theater, Venice, June 19. There were 30 curtain calls and wild acclaim for the composer, who was leading an orchestra in a broadcast over an NBC chain.

A new "Savino Tone Pictures" series will be broadcast over the Columbia chain at 7:30 Tuesday nights, beginning this week. Domenico Savino, its director, is internationally known as a composer and musical authority. He has been chief composer for the Paramount studios.

Ted Husing will use a portable short wave transmitter in reporting the National Open Golf tournament at Minneapolis. He will follow the leading contenders during the last two hours of the final 18 holes and will describe the play stroke by stroke. His broadcast is slated for 4 to 6 p. m., July 12.

* * *

The call letters of WGHP, Detroit, will be changed Tuesday to WXYZ.

"The Couple Next Door," a new domestic life series, will be broadcast daily, except Sunday, from 4:45 to 5 p. m. over the Columbia chain. KMOX will not handle these programs.

Show business thrives on hyperbole, but there is no exaggeration in the report that Amos 'n' Andy, who in real life are Freeman F. Gosden and Charles J. Correll, get $100,000 a year for their 15-minute act which the NBC stages twice a night, except on Sunday. They also earn large amounts by vaudeville appearances, and are expected to clean up a million or so out of their forthcoming talking picture. Nor is it mere "talk" that Will Rogers is getting $72,000 for the series of 14 talks that he is making over the Columbia chain in the Sunday night Squibb programs. This makes the gum-chewing cowboy's radio rate of pay about $350 a minute.

The "ground" system for the new 5000-watt transmitter for WSB, Atlanta, Ga., consists of 80,000 feet of copper wire buried 18 inches under the surface of the earth.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

BOY SCOUTS TO TAKE SHORT ROVING TOURS

Bus Trips to Nearby Places to Supplement Longer Expeditions.

Short Roving Tours will be taken by the Boy Scouts of St. Louis.

Five new Midget Roving Tours," from two to five days in length, have been added to the Roving Camp schedule by the local scout council, as supplements to the bus trips to Washington and Yellowstone Park, conducted by the scouts each year. Like the long trips, these midget tours will be taken in the Roving Camp busses owned by the council.

The series will be begun a week from tomorrow with a two-day trip to Onondaga Cave, the largest cave in Missouri, near Leesburg. In addition to exploring the cave, which is more than three miles long, there will be swimming and fishing in the Meramec River. The campers will return to St. Louis Tuesday evening.

The second tour, to the Big Springs State Park, near Van Buren, will start Wednesday morning, and continue until Thursday evening. On this trip the campers will visit Pilot Knob, Elephant Rock, Lake Killarney and Arcadia, camp being made Wednesday evening at the park. Big Springs Park, with its 300,000,000-gallon spring, has long been a focal point for scout trips, being visited every year by the Irondale Rangers on their annual ride, and by other hiking groups from Irondale.

Illinois will be visited on the third tour, which will last from Friday to Monday. On this trip an entire day will be spent in Chicago, while the return visit will be made to Starved Rock State Park, Bloomington and Springfield. Stops will be made at the latter city to go through the State Capitol, Lincoln's Tomb, and other historical sites.

The fourth tour will again be to Onondaga, on Tuesday and Wednesday, while the fifth and last will also be the longest. Starting Thursday morning the campers will journey through the Kentucky hill country before returning to St. Louis the following Monday. The climax of the trip will be a visit to Mammoth Cave, where several hours will be spent in exploration.

In all cases the tours will be conducted in the same manner as a regular Roving Tour. Charles H. Mills, activities director of the council, who heads the regular tours, will be in charge, assisted by Field Executives Carl H. Laemmli and Max Nusser. Sleeping will be done on cots in tents, and the regular Roving Chef will prepare the meals.

The cost of the trips will range from $4 to $10, the latter covering the Mammoth Cave tour.

Troop Notes

North District.

Troop 103 of Elmbank Church has been reorganized under leadership of Scoutmaster Dan Miller and Assistant Scoutmaster Simpson. A system of patrol projects in chemistry, aviation and signaling has been put into practice. The troop meets at the church every Friday evening.

A scouting quiz was given by Assistant Scoutmaster Ham to Troop 206 of Ames School at a recent meeting. Deputy Commissioner Simons of the North District spoke on discipline. Inspection and a flag ceremony were held and a game was played. Edward Roberts has been enrolled to the troop.

A hike to Ferguson was taken two weeks ago today by Troop 3 of Grace Holy Cross Church. One scout passed tests in tracking and thrift. Scoutmaster Simons gave a talk.

South District.

Joseph Beebe has resigned as soutmaster of Troop 80 of McKinley School, as he is returning to his former home in Kansas. A farewell party in his honor was given by the Scouts last Monday evening. Troop Committeemen Phaff, Weber and Call also being guesst. The troop is temporarily in charge of the assistant scoutmaster.

Troop 108 of St. Pius' Church went on an overnight hike to Portage des Sioux, the former home of Committeeman Strattmann, last week-end. The troop recently received a streamer for winning third place in the South District camparall last month.

Plans for a merit badge exhibit to be conducted by Troop 194 were made at a meeting last week. Every boy in the troop has been assigned a part in the exposition. Deputy Commissioner A. C. Lindsley visited the troop at the meeting two weeks ago and demonstrated the tying of knots by short cut methods.

A parents' night entertainment and scouting demonstration as held by Troop 126 of Holy Ghost Evangelical Church in celebration of the troop's first birthday last Wednesday. The beaver patrol, under Patrol Leader Hugh Smith, demonstrated first aid; the eagle patrol, under Patrol Leader Charles Jacoby, demonstrated signaling; and the Wolf patrol, under Patrol Leader Bob Jacoby demonstrated knot tying. Scout William Doelling pereformed a rapid kindling of fire by flint and steel. The program for the evening was arranged by Scoutmaster L. V. Sippy and Assistant Scoutmaster R. Flint Smith, assisted by members of the Troop Committee. Jack May is Scribe of Troop 126.

Camp Irondale Notes.

One hundred and fifty scouts are the Pioneeering Section of Camp Irondale. This section, which inaugurated the summer season for local scouts at the camp, opened June 18 and will close Tuesday. The first contest, in nature of matching, was held Friday, between troops organized for the section. The next evening all scouts were initiated into the Order of Eperienced Campers.

The Ranger Camp defeated Cabin Camp in a water carnival last Sunday, in the first intercamp contest of the summer. The carnival consisted of swimming, rowing and other aquatic contests, all of which were hard fought. The carnival was staged for the entertainment of visitors to the acmp.

Morton Pareira, a member of the camp staff, has been appointed camp reporter for the summer, to furnish news of camp happenings to the scouts in the city.

An overnight hike to Red Rock is being planned by Irondale campers.

Suburban District.

Twelve scouts of Webster Groves 3, with their new scoutmaster, Walter A. Boettger, held an overnight camp at Meramec State Park near Sullivan last Saturday and Sunday. Most of the time was spent in fishing, swimming, cave exploring, and scout activities such as camp cooking, first aid and stunts around a council fire. Several parents assisted in transporting the scouts back to town. The troop will continue to hold meetings every Friday night throughout the summer at troop heaquarters, Hagerty Memorial Church at Webster Groves. Scout Allen Bickley is now scribe.

West District.

Herman Olian, a Boston attorney who was a member of Troop 20 of the Y. M. H. A., 12 years ago, visited the troop last week and gave a talk on the troop's activities in those days. He told of the sort of meetings conducted, the number of scouts, their scoutmasters and the contests in which they participated and compared the then youthful trooop with the veteran organization of today. After his talk, Senior Patrol Leader Melvin Hertzman outlined plans for the troop's summer program. Regular meetings will be held during this period in Forest Park instead of at troop headquarters. Individual and interpatrol contests will be held.

Troop 70 of the Achad Ha'am School has a hike scheduled for today, to take the place of one for last Sunday. The troop is devoting much time to test passing, one of the purposes of today's hike being to enable the scouts to pass outdoor tests. Assistant Scoutmastef Bauman of Troop 90 was a visitor at a recent meeting.

A trip to Keester Springs, in the Ozarks, was made recently by scouts of Troop 46, of Immanuel Baptist Church. J. E. Hubbs provided one of the council busses for the trip. Snake hunting, fishing and cave exploring occupied most of the time, and several natural history specimens were brought back by the scouts. Two Tenderfoot scouts have been enrolled.

What a low price for a Chrysler

Here is a motor car of true Chrysler quality—with 62-horsepower high-compression Chrysler six-cylinder engine mounted on rubber; Iso-therm pistons; low-swung perfectly-balanced chassis; self-adjusting spring shackles; hydraulic shock absorbers; quiet all-metal bodies of dreadnought strength; and fine broadcloth upholstery.

And with the typical Chrysler power, speed, alertness in traffic, handling ease, stamina and comfort that these features make possible are combined the safety of Chrysler weatherproof internal hydraulic brakes and the distinction of Chrysler smartness and beauty.

All at a price which, for the first time, places a Chrysler within the reach of thousands who never before felt Chrysler ownership within their means.

Arrange with us for a ride in the new Chrysler Six that we may demonstrate today's leading value in the six-cylinder field.

Tariff Bill Immense "Racket," Flexibility Bends Like Elbow, Swarthmore Economist Declares

Widget, Gadget and Whatzit Kings, and Their Senators Play Ring-Around-the-Rosie, Leaving the Consumer a Subject Too Painful to Discuss, Dr. Clair Wilcox Tells the League for Industrial Democracy.

FOREST PARK, Pa., June 28.

DENOUNCING the tariff bill as an immense but respectable "racket," Dr. Clair Wilcox, associate professor of economics at Swarthmore College, told the summer conference of the League for Industrial Democracy at Camp Tamiment here that the flexible clause in the bill is a "fraud."

"The flexibility of the tariff is like the flexibility of the elbow: it bends only one way." Dr. Wilcox declared "in plain words, tariff flexibility is a fraud. It's the old army game." Dr. Wilcox is the man who organized and drafted the protest of 1000 leading American economists against the tariff bill when it was pending in Congress.

Investigations of rates as provided in the flexible tariff clause are time-consuming, said Dr. Wilcox. Pointing out that in eight years the Tariff Commission has made only 80 investigations, Dr. Wilcox said investigation of the 2000 items in the present bill would take 800 years. It took two years to inquire into sugar rates, and six years to investigate linseed oil rates, he said. In the 36 changes of the last eight years, the tariff has been boosted 31 times and lowered but five, he added.

Dr. Wilcox described the tariff as a racket which penalizes 34,000,000 people who cannot conceivably gain from the high duties to subsidize 8,000,000 more or less who may gain. One result of the new bill will be the increase of $10 yearly to every family in the price of sugar, he said. The economic prostration of Cuba was predicted. Dr. Wilcox's address follows:

Congress has passed and President Hoover has signed the Grundy Tariff of Abominations.

As a result of this measure, we will have to pay higher prices for nearly everything we buy. The higher rates will prevent foreign goods from entering the country. The reduced supply of goods will sell for a higher price. Where competition prevails, the higher price will encourage new and inefficient concerns with high operating costs to undertake additional production. Because their costs of production are high, these concerns will not make big profits. But they will consistently oppose any future reduction of duties, because foreign competition would drive them out of business. Meantime, the higher prices will give the old and successful concerns increased profit which they do not earn. And where an industry is monopolized, the higher prices will merely increase monopoly profits.

Favors for Minority.

Very few of our people can hope to gain anything from the tariff boost. No tariff can protect the coal miner, the railroad worker, the telephone and telegraph worker, the bus, truck and trolley worker, the building and engineering trades. All those who work in retail stores, wholesale houses, garages and hotels get nothing from the tariff but higher prices for the goods they buy. Bankers, teachers, doctors, lawyers, ministers, actors, artists, barbers, nurses, waiters, newspaper men and Government employes are all in the same position. There are roughly 42,000,000 persons in the United States who are listed as gainfully employed. Fully 34,000,000 of them are in fields which cannot conceivably gain from restrictive tariffs. These people are taxed by the Government in order to subsidize the 8,000,000 or less whom the tariff favors.

The vast majority of farmers will lose. Their major crops are export crops, sold in the world market: Wheat, cotton, pork, lard. They have no important competition in the home market. The imports which will be excluded by duties on such goods are purely imaginary. These duties are nothing more than gold bricks. On the less important commodities where the tariff is effective, it benefits only 12 per cent of our farmers. these people may get some $90,000,000 a year in increased income. But to give it to them, it will cost the consumer some $130,000,000 a year in the higher prices he will have to pay for their goods.

All the farmers will lose through the increased duties on manufactured goods because the things they buy will cost them more. The producers of crops, for export, moreover, will find it increasingly difficult to sell abroad because of the barriers placed in the way of foreigners who wish to sell manufactured goods to us.

All export trade will suffer in this way. Countries cannot buy from us unless they are permitted to sell to us. The increased restrictions on imports will make it more difficult for our producers to export. This is as true of the manufacturers of agricultural machinery, automobiles, typewriters and the like as it is of the farmers. When the conference committee reduced the Senate duties on French laces, Detroit rejoiced, because it knew that more American lace manufacture would have meant less American automobile manufacture for foreign trade. Our export trade has a rough road ahead. Already other countries are beginning to pay us back in kind by levying retaliatory duties against our goods. When the President signed the Grundy tariff he fired the first gun in a tariff war which seriously threatens the peace of the world.

Why Did Bill Pass?

No one can say that the Grundy tariff is a popular measure. Every important leader in the automobile industry has denounced it. Exporting and importing firms and associations have protested it. Bankers have decried it. Farm groups have fought it. Associations of retailers demanded its veto. The press was overwhelmingly against it. Washington has been flooded with protests from foreign Governments and business groups. Some 1200 American economists sent a letter to President Hoover which roundly denounced it. Even its leading proponents have publicly crossed their fingers as they voted for it.

If all this is true, then, why did Congress pass the bill? Why did the President sign it? The answer is easy.

It's a racket!

This is the way it works:

Mr. Lawyer of Zenith runs for Congress. The principal industry of Zenith is the manufacture of widgets. The local widget king contributes several thousand dollars to Mr. Lawyer's campaign fund. Mr. Lawyer is elected, and re-elected for several terms. He is made a member of the Ways and Means Committee of House of Representatives. The Ways and Means Committee writes the tariff bills. Each Republican member is made the head of a subcommittee to work on specific schedules. Since Mr. Lawyer is interested in widgets, he is given the widget schedules. His subcommittee goes to work. It boosts the rates on widgets and it boosts them plenty. Then the subcommittees report back to the main committee. Here Mr. Lawyer discovers that

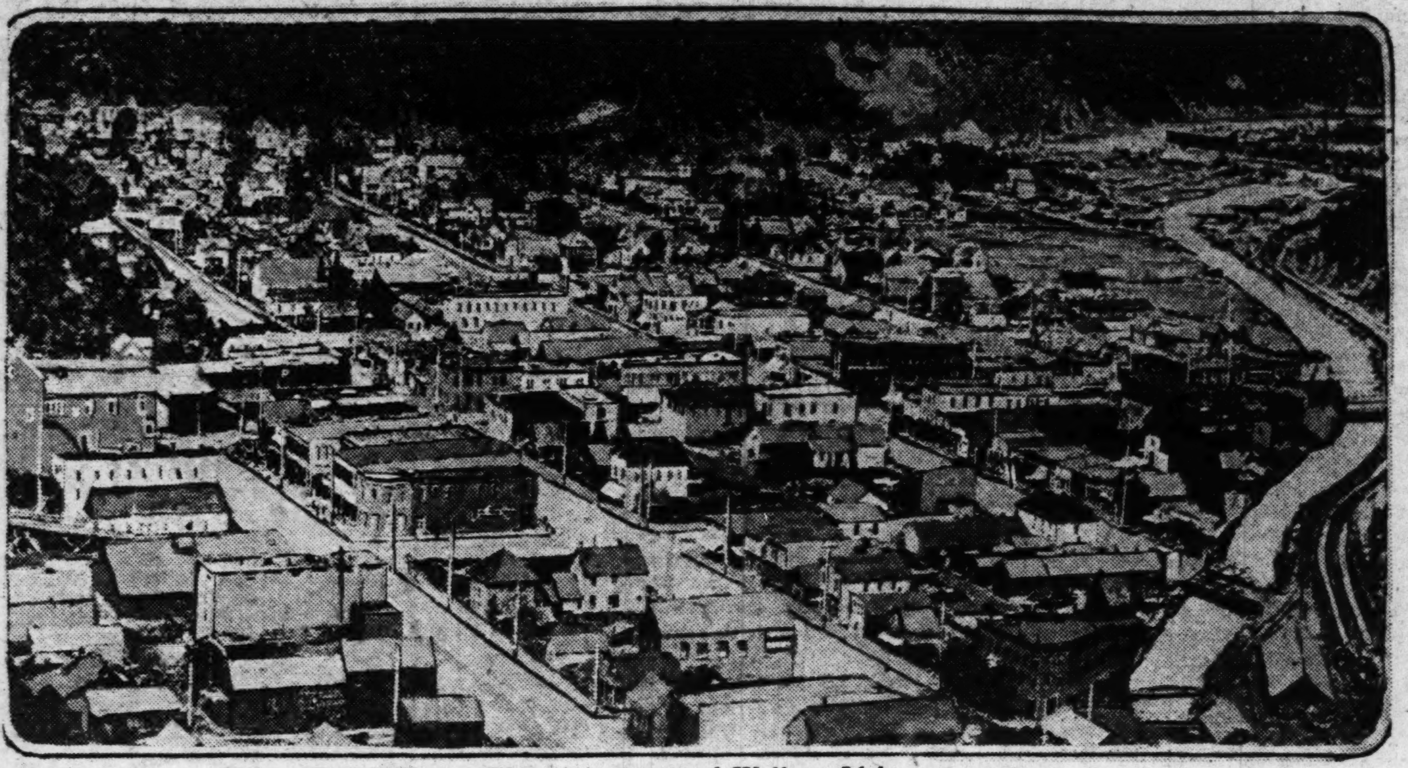
Tragic Plight Imposed by Prohibition On Citizens of Two Idaho Mining Towns



The mining town of Wallace, Idaho.

By John Knox Coe.
City Editor, The Press, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

COEUR D'ALENE, IDAHO, June 28.

IN Federal Court at Coeur d'Alene, the morning of June 21, following a week of wrangling over law points, of accusations, of bitter invective and touching appeal, of assertions and denials, a jury of 12 men decided that 32 persons of Wallace, Shoshone County, Idaho, were guilty of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

What were the conditions leading up to the climax? How did the plan originate and what were the results? Among the defendants in the court that morning was Herman H. Rossi, Mayor of Wallace famed as the center of some of the world's greatest lead-silver mines. Another was W. H. Herrick, former Mayor, defeated last year by Rossi, Chief of Police W. J. Baily and Sheriff R. E. Weniger of Shoshone County also were among those affected by the decision. Federal Judge John H. McNary, Portland, Ore., presided at the trial.

The verdict of the jury was the end, for the present at least, of a legal fight by Federal prohibition officers to enforce the national prohibition act in Shoshone County and an equal determination on the part of a large number of Shoshone County residents to conduct the affairs of their county as they saw fit.

Another Similar Case.

Preceding the so-called Wallace conspiracy trial by six months was another case of similar nature. This was known as the Mullan conspiracy trial and arose from the same conditions and local sentiment as at Wallace.

Wallace, a mining center of 4000 persons, is the county seat of Shoshone County. Mullan is also a purely mining town of 300 persons, seven or eight miles east. The motive and intention were the same and the result was identical. At the Mullan trial 30 were found guilty, including Mayor Arthur Harwood, Councilmen John Wheatley, George Huston, Charles Ristau, and Henry Foss, Chief of Police F. O. Welch, and Night Policeman Harcourt Marphy, all of whom with the exception of Ristau and Foss are now in McNeil Island Federal prison. The two are serving shorter sentences in the county jail at Coeur d'Alene. The end of the trial and sentences came early in January, 1930.

According to testimony at the Mullan trial, Judge J. Stanly Webster, Spokane, Wash., presiding, the scheme originated when it was found revenues at Mullan were inadequate for the town's needs. Mullan is situated in a narrow gulch. Close to and actually a part of the town are the rich mining properties and reduction works of the Great Morning Mine which handles more than 100 tons of ore a day. Hundreds of men are employed in these operations. Extra police protection was needed. Bridges were a necessity and better roads imperative. Larger and better schools called for a continually increasing outlay.

Town Deeply in Debt.

Mullan was deeply in debt. Many thousands of dollars worth of unpaid warrants were floating. There was no money in sight with which to pay them. It was then that Mayor Harwood, proprietor of business enterprises, decided to enforce an ordinance whereby places incorrectly designated as soft-drink establishments were to be licensed. The revenue was to be collected by the Chief of Police and his assistant and turned into the treasury. Houses of ill fame were included in the license plan, which was subsequently abandoned as an actual license but for which the police made more or less regular collections. These were referred to among those interested as donations.

Those who paid, it was shown at the trial, were unmolested by officials. Liquor was sold over the bar or from the hip. Others manufactured home brew beer without being called to account. Citizens of the village for the most part admired the sagacity of the officials in raising revenue for city purposes despite the fact that the largest taxable properties, owned by mining interests, had been gerrymandered out of the corporation limits to escape municipal taxation.

J. C. Needham was appointed Chief of Police by Mayor Harwood to see that collections were promptly made. After it appeared former officials had not carried out the interest of the ordinance, this man collected systematically for more than a year. He then resigned or was removed, according to which testimony one believes. At once he started out to "get" those with whom he had formerly worked.

Witness for Government.

When Federal officers arrived to ferret out the wet spots in the community, it was he who led the way. He who told of the inner workings of the plan, from the "main stem" as he called it to the smaller operators in the outer part of the town. He was a leading witness for the Government at the trial.

Forty-four citizens of Mullan, the Mayor, four Councilmen, two policemen, business men, bootleggers, prostitutes, and bottle men were rounded up after months of preparation by prohibition agents, under-cover workers and Government special agents.

At Wallace, the county seat, was R. E. Weninger, Democratic Sheriff of a strong Republican county. He had been elected by the wet element. He felt, he said, that he owed it to his constituents to give them the kind of an administration they wanted. Federal prohibition agents said that when they went to him and asked co-operation he told them he was running the county and needed no assistance from Government dry officials.

Raids Were Tipped Off.

At the trial it was asserted by the Government that when Federal officers were headed for Mullan on raids Mullan residents were tipped off from the Sheriff's office. The former Chief of Police at Mullan confirmed the allegations.

Finally, in 1928, when it is declared by prohibition agents that Weniger became especially abusive toward them, Carl Jackson, prohibition administrator for Montana and Idaho at the time, was sent for. Weniger is said to have made Jackson virtually the same statements regarding the lack of need of Federal aid. Jackson left Weniger's office after a stormy interview, declaring he would "get" Weniger.

An investigation was started in which Jackson worked with Sam C. Webb and Julius Johnson, prohibition agents. Under-cover men were sent in to feel out the situation, make purchases of liquor and observe conditions.

It was found that the ramifications of the affair, while emanating from the Sheriff's office, extended not only to Mullan but through the county seat town of Wallace as well.

At Wallace the same reason is given as at Mullan for the introduction of the system of collections. School houses were needed, more bridges, better highways and better police protection. There was insufficient public money to provide what was needed.

Herrick was elected Mayor and took office May 9, 1927. May 13 he instituted a system of collections giving Chief of Police Baily, according to testimony at the trial, a list of places from which to collect money, or leaving to Baily the selection of the right names. These included, it was said, places at which liquor was sold, usually openly over the bar.

To account properly for the money so it could be placed in the city treasury the Chief of Police prepared Police Court complaints charging those who paid with having violated some traffic ordinance. The City Clerk, L. L. Leighty, also Police Magistrate, admitted on the stand that none of the defendants named in the complaints had ever appeared before him for trial or had been sentenced.

After two months Mayor Herrick changed his plan. The collections were then paid directly to Leighty. Individuals who had been actually arrested for minor offenses had the amounts so collected credited on their complaints, in larger amounts, of course, than would have been ordinarily assessed.

Collection System Dropped.

After this plan had been in force until about May, 1928, the system of collection was dropped, according to evidence at the trial, after attorneys had advised Herrick of the illegality of the subterfuge.

Rossi ran against Herrick in the 1929 campaign declaring conditions were morally bad in the city and promising reform. Rossi was elected. He immediately devised another plan. The places were to pay the collections just the same but were to receive receipts purporting to be for rentals for space in the city park. City Treasurer C. A. Keating, a Wallace banker, admitted on the stand he had nothing to do with renting any part of the park and that the park was never mentioned when payments were being made and receipts given.

Liquor was not mentioned in the receipts but was sold openly. The system of collections continued until sometime in the fall of the same year, when Federal agents and other officers uncovered the evidence which led eventually to Federal prison or county jails. During both trials one thing stood out with great prominence. In no single instance was any charge or insinuation made by any witness or prosecutor that any one of the defendants had profited a penny's worth.

Reason for Conspiracy.

It was argued in extenuation for receiving money from liquor places, gambling dens and houses of ill fame and allowing them to run that Shoshone County was almost entirely a mining district, that men who worked in the mines wanted and must have recreation.

As one attorney expressed it at the Wallace trial. "Miners will not be satisfied with soda pop." They spend their working hours deep underground, in damp, unsanitary and fume-infested corridors. Their work is severe. When they reach the surface they

Fight Impends On Bill to Strengthen Rights of Labor And Curb Powers of Courts

Opposing Reports Ready for Senate on Measure Which Would Limit Strike Injunctions, Prohibit "Yellow Dog" Contracts, and Prevent Judges From Being Accuser and Arbiter in Contempt Cases.

By Paul Y. Anderson.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 28.

THE Senate anti-injunction bill, described by its sponsors as "the most scientifically-drafted measure ever introduced in Congress," is dead for this session, but efforts are being made to obtain a unanimous consent agreement to vote upon it early in the next session, which begins in December. Whenever it does reach the stage of being debated, the country will see some fireworks.

Actually, the scope of the bill is much greater than its name would indicate. In addition to curbing the use of Federal injunctions in labor disputes, it would outlaw the notorious "yellow dog contract," which figured so decisively in the rejection of Judge John J. Parker for the United States Supreme Court; declare a fixed policy toward the right of labor to organize and to strike; provide for jury trials in cases of criminal contempt, and end the present contempt procedure in which a Federal Judge may act as complainant, prosecutor, jury and Judge.

The effect of the bill would be to establish a new relationship between employers and employed in the United States. Underlying its terms is an obvious purpose to compel employers to resort to methods of negotiation, conciliation and arbitration in settling differences with their employes, instead of attempting to force them into submission by means of court orders and injunctions.

Although it was written by Senators Norris (Rep.), Nebraska; Walsh (Dem.), Montana, and Blaine (Rep.), Wisconsin, actually it embodies the ideas and conclusions of half a dozen of the nation's most eminent authorities on labor legislation and judicial procedure. Certainly the drafting of no measure in recent years has been attended by such a painstaking effort to secure the most expert advice.

Originally the full Judiciary Committee, of which Norris is chairman, held hearings at which the representatives of organized labor and employers' associations were allowed to present their respective views at length. Of these, the National Manufacturers' Association, represented by the veteran lobbyist, James Emery, was opposed to any legislation that would alter the present situation. Then a subcommittee, consisting of Norris, Walsh and Blaine was delegated to draw up a bill.

Experts Consulted.

In a determination to get the best advice obtainable, they successively called in the following recognized authorities: Prof. Felix Frankfurter and Prof. Francis B. Sayre of the Harvard Law School; Herman Oliphant of the Institute of Law of Johns Hopkins University; Edwin E. Witte, head of the celebrated legislative reference library of Wisconsin—often consulted by legislators in foreign countries—and Donald E. Richberg, noted labor lawyer of Chicago.

Thus informed and advised, the subcommittee drafted a bill, after which it recalled all the foregoing experts, submitted the draft to them, and on the basis of their collective judgment, revised and expanded it. As finally presented to the full committee, and as it stands now, the bill contains the following notable features:

1. A declaration of policy, in which Congress would assert the right of labor and employers to organize, to be represented by agents of their own choosing, and to authorize those agents to negotiate wages and working conditions.

2. A clause prohibiting the issuance of injunctions by Federal courts in labor disputes unless it is shown that the injury resulting from failure to issue them would outweigh that resulting from their issuance.

To Outlaw "Promises."

3. A provision to prohibit the issuance of injunctions by Federal courts, based on "yellow dog contracts" — a form of agreement which workers in some industries are required to sign before being employed, whereby they promise not to join labor unions, or to engage in any attempt to change their wages or working conditions, or to do any one of a number of things of which their employers disapprove.

4. A provision that Federal injunctions designed to protect property and preserve the peace shall not issue until after local peace officers have appeared and testified that they are unable to maintain order and protect property by the ordinary means.

5. A provision that injunctions shall be issued by Federal courts in labor disputes only after open hearings and the taking of testimony from both sides of the dispute.

6. A clause forbidding the issuance of Federal injunctions restraining workers from quitting their jobs, or joining labor unions, or receiving strike benefits, or making public the facts about their disputes.

7. A clause that would prohibit a Federal Judge from presiding in a trial for a contempt alleged to have been committed against his own court, unless it was committed in his presence or so near that it interfered with the procedure of the court.

8. A provision for jury trials in cases of criminal contempt, whether arising from labor disputes or otherwise.

After several sessions of heated debate behind closed doors, the Judiciary Committee decided, by a vote of 10 to 7, to report the bill to the Senate unfavorably, and each side has presented a report embodying its arguments.

Those who voted unfavorably on the measure were Senators Steiwer (Rep.), Oregon; Deneen (Rep.), Illinois; Gillett (Rep.), Massachusetts; Robinson (Rep.), Indiana; Waterman (Rep.), Colorado; Hastings (Rep.), Delaware; Hebert (Rep.), Rhode Island; Overman (Dem.), North Carolina; King (Dem.), Utah, and Stephens (Dem.), Mississippi.

In addition to Norris, Walsh and Blaine, those who voted for a favorable report were Senators Borah (Rep.), Idaho; Caraway (Dem.), Arkansas; Ashurst (Dem.), Arizona, and Dill (Dem.), Washington.

Blow Hot, Blow Cold.

The two reports present an interesting contrast in argument and viewpoint, and in one respect that of the majority affords an unusual spectacle, and one that has occasioned much amused comment at the Capitol. It will be recalled that during the Senate debate on the confirmation of Judge Parker for the Supreme Court, many Senators defended his action in upholding injunctions based on "yellow dog contracts," on the ground that he had merely followed precedents established in similar cases. They argued at great length and with much solemnity that the proper remedy against such contracts was Fear at the Naval Parley.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

LET us reduce the naval conference to simple terms. It was conducted and finally concluded under the stress of sentiment, fear. Truly a pitiful and ignoble exhibition of the best that international life can offer us 1930 years after Christ. Ourselves, having really nobody to be afraid of, had to simulate fear and so become one of the timorous huddle. England feared a combined France and Italy; France feared Italy with parity; Italy feared France without parity; Japan feared us at a less ratio than 70, and we pretended to fear England without parity and Japan with a ratio more than 60. And there you have the story; a sordid, selfish weighing and balancing of ratios; statesmen too weak to dare break loose from old nationalistic conceptions of naval power, and Admirals who could think only in terms of guns and tons.

Like Poe's raven, fear sat on a bust of Mars in the council chamber and croaked its dismal notes throughout the long days. This throng of haggling delegates represented Governments alone; they did not represent the common people who were expected to furnish the cannon fodder in war. The masses of the nations cared nothing for ratios; they did not feel fear; they wished merely to go on living their lives in the homes they had won by toil. To them other nations were vague and indistinct bodies toward whom they cherished no active emotion. They could understand that they must fight if their country were invaded, for an invader was a threat to their homes, but they did not want to leave these homes to go away to other lands and fight people living lives of toil like themselves.

Would that a voice had been present at the conference to speak for the common people, a voice that would have banished the ill-omened bird of fear from its perch and replaced it with a symbol of international peace, brotherhood and good will.

An Air-Minded Sheriff.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SHERIFF WAYNE HORNING of Shawnee County, Kan., has been provided with an airplane for the pursuit of law breakers. It is an example which might be followed with profit by practically every county in the country. One of the most successful aids to criminal operations is the speedy getaway provided by the automobile, especially in the less densely populated areas, where the criminal has the entire countryside in which to elude pursuit.

A group of robbers, experience has shown, can drive into a town, commit a robbery, and be gone before the citizens or law enforcement officers are aware that a crime has occurred. A hasty chase in automobiles follows, usually proving futile because of the time handicap given the pursued and because of the devious highways which must be covered. An airplane, with its greater speed and ability to cover an immense territory, would offset both handicaps, and even though it might not be able to swoop down on the robbers and arrest them, it could be used as a directing vehicle. To cope with modern criminals, the law must be more, not merely equally, modern.

Morrow for President.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

PERMIT me to congratulate the people of the United States on the glorious victory of Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey.

The people are tired of silent and spineless Presidents. They want a President who has the courage and manhood to come out straight and give his opinion on any important question. They want a President who will not be dictated to by any board, moral or immoral. They want a President to have the courage to dictate to them.

Mr. Morrow has shown that he possesses that courage.

Therefore, Mr. Morrow is the man for our next President.

Sheep and Shepherds.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MORE and more the cry goes forth that the churches are being deserted. The sheep are straying and the shepherds seem unable to hold them. If the shepherds will go forth they will find millions and millions of sheep bleating to get into the fold.

It is not the rich, fat sheep that need looking after. They are smug in green fields and are not worried about, or looking forward to the Elysian Fields. While the shepherds sit aloof on the mountain tops the sheep bleat in the valley for guidance.

The shepherds, in a great many instances, are so assiduously following other pursuits that the work for which they are ordained is completely ignored. The sheep lose confidence in them. As the Good Book tells them, they must go forth and seek the sheep that has strayed. It is not the sheep but the shepherds who must answer.

EMMETT BALDWIN.

CULTURE CAPTURES CONGRESS.

The adoption by the House and Senate of the bill to purchase the Vollbehr collection of incunabula for $1,500,000, which now goes to the President for approval, will cause almost universal gratification throughout the country. It signalizes a new and inspiring policy of Congress with regard to the Congressional Library. The cultural spirit is combined with the utilitarian.

When the bill was first introduced there was a general feeling of opposition among members of Congress. To what use, was the question. Why spend so huge a sum on a lot of old books, the contents of which contribute little of value to modern life?

This question was answered thoroughly in the hearings on the bill before committees of both Houses. These hearings were a liberal education on the value of rare old books as examples of the beginnings of the art of printing and binding books. Their contents embody the thought, sentiment, knowledge, manners, customs and aspirations of the men of their time. The times this collection represents, the last half of the fifteenth century, are especially interesting because the foundations of modern civilization were then being laid. Then began the ferment in the minds of men which led to the Renaissance, the Reformation and the explorations which enlarged the known world. It brought America into the world picture.

It was doubtless the testimony of Dr. Herbert Putnam, eminent librarian, which did more than that of other experts and connoisseurs to convince Congress of the value of the collection and the great service to the country of its purchase by the Government. Dr. Putnam unequivocally approved the purchase as a fine investment. He said the Congressional Library, while equal numerically to the libraries of Great Britain and France, lacked quality, lacked books significant bibliographically. There was nothing in it to attract connoisseurship, nothing of a cultural aspect to win the respect of scholars and connoisseurs, those who loved books for books' sake and the printing art. This collection would attract exhibits of rare books and gifts of a similar nature. It would win for the Government the respect of the world.

Then there is the Gutenberg Bible on vellum, one of only three copies in existence, and the best. Its value as a rarity, as the only available copy, could not be measured in dollars. It is beyond the price, which is variously estimated at from $600,000 to $1,000,000. Its acquisition would not put our library on a par with the British Museum and the Paris library, which possess the other two vellum copies of the Gutenberg Bible and have been collecting rare books for years, but the whole collection would put us on their plane.

The widespread interest aroused by the discussion of the bill is significant of the new spirit and aspirations of America. Not only the connoisseurs and the intelligentsia, but as Dr. Putnam said, "the men in the street," were interested. The press was almost unanimous in urging the purchase. Congress was flooded with letters and telegrams. In Europe the action of Congress was watched with widespread interest.

Congress rose to the opportunity. We believe that President Hoover will be actuated by the same spirit and by his approval assure for the Congressional Library a collection of rare books which will be the nucleus and inspiration for future acquisitions by gift and purchase. It will be a sign to the world of America's cultural progress.

SCANDAL AT THE COURT OF BEAUTY.

Ever since envious Eris flung down the golden apple of discord, to be the prize of the fairest at a party to which she wasn't invited, beauty contests have had a bad name. In the first one Paris, the judge, judged the bribes rather than the beauties, accepted lovely Helen as his fee, and the Trojan War was on.

The heritage of scandal and strife has come down in undeviating line since that mythological moment, and the bequest now has reached Miami, Fla. Miss America, 1930 model, has been dethroned because of the shocking disclosure that she has been married; a marriage license, for some esoteric reason, being the foul punch of the beauty contest game. Miss Runner-up also was disqualified because, while entered as Miss California, she was found guilty of being a denizen of Oklahoma.

Worse and more disclosures of corruption followed. The smoky city of Shamokin, Pa., was found to have supplied not only Miss Pennsylvania for the joust of pulchritude but also entrants for five other states. This must be particularly distressing to Gov. Huey Long of Louisiana, who is having troubles a-plenty as it is. Gov. Long recently went on record acclaiming his State's official beverage, pot likker, as a sure-fire beauty recipe. "It's what has made our girls so pretty," he gallantly rhapsodized. Yet when the test came Louisiana's entrant proved to be a girl from up Nawth, who presumably never in all her life sopped a hunk of cawn braid in this succulent Dixie delicacy.

Miss Florida, by an afterthought of the judges, is awarded the crown of beauty, the silver loving cup and $2500 cash—if she can get them away from Miss Texas, the present possessor. To shameless Shamokin should go the apple of discord, and we hope it stays there.

COLOR IN THE HOME.

A wave of color has engulfed the American household, changing once drab domestic monotones to a kaleidoscopic splash. The kitchen stove, which once wore only the shiny and conventional black, now may be a pastoral in Robin Hood green. Pots and pans of mandarin scarlet prepare comestibles for a dinner service of canary yellow. The bathroom, once a chaste white, has a color motif consistent from tub to towels. Summer furniture is gay as the striped awnings outside the windows. Lamps shed a rainbow radiance through painted parchment and glass. Even humbly utilitarian alarm clocks, iceboxes and typewriters ape the peacock's tail.

The spectrum's spectacular invasion of the home has been explained many times, always on esthetic grounds. Colors register the freedom of the modern spirit; they express individuality; they give forth an air of spaciousness; they lend a feeling of coolness.

Now from England comes a new and better and strictly utilitarian reason for color—the flies don't like it. Science has perfected the window screen, the fly swatter and the insect spray, so swarms of flies no longer share our homes, but the occasional solitary adventurer into the sitting room or bedroom is the more annoying on that account. Flies, the British experimenters learned, loathe colors, and especially colored light, as they abhor a cold snap. Red and yellow, in particular, send them buzzing away in profane indignation. So, for the sake of contented housewives and for sounder early morning sleep in futurist beds, let us have more and louder colors in the home.

ONE HUMAN TERROR VANQUISHED.

The terror of leprosy, which hung over tropic and semi-tropic lands for thousands of years, is rapidly vanishing. The horror of Molokai, the leper colony of the Hawaiian Islands, which gripped the imagination and sympathy of the world, is passing. Father Damien gave his life to comfort the wretched, helpless lepers of Molokai with hope of relief in another world, but he could offer no hope for this world. In the Scriptures leprosy is pictured as the symbol of human despair. The victims were isolated from their kind and compelled to cover their faces and cry "unclean."

Now there is hope for all lepers, when the remedy is applied in time, before the last stages of the disease. Mrs. Dorothy Paul Wade, wife of Dr. H. Windsor Wade, the leprologist of the leper colony on the island of Culion of the Philippines, in her final appeal for contributions to the Leonard Wood Memorial Fund, announces that within seven years over 2000 lepers have been sent home from the Culion colony cured. To the Culion colony are sent only advanced contagious cases, so that cures there are convincing evidence of the efficacy of the preparation of chaulmoogra oil, now used as a remedy.

Mrs. Wade has spent three years in America while her husband worked in the laboratory at Culion, collecting money for the fund, founded by Gen. Leonard Wood shortly before his death, for the anti-leprosy campaign in the Philippines. She has raised all but $320,000 of the $2,000,000 required. Part of this sum, with a gift from Mr. Eversley Childs, has been used to build the largest and most completely equipped lepersarium in the world at Cebu. The lepersarium, which was opened last April, accommodates 750 lepers and is supplied with thoroughly equipped research laboratories.

In addition there are clinics and small hospitals in the principal towns of the Philippines where lepers in the early stages are treated. Many are treated in their homes.

There are few if any parallels in the world of the successful campaign waged against leprosy in the Philippines since the American occupation. Its benefits in the relief of human suffering cannot be measured. The Leonard Wood Fund will mark the climax of its successful effort to find and apply a cure for the dread disease. If America had done nothing more for the Philippines than organize this and other campaigns against the diseases that afflicted the people of the islands, our contribution to their welfare and happiness is beyond computation.

FORWARD, PENNSYLVANIA.

Pennsylvania is improving. Expenditures in the May primary election, according to the final figures, were $1,500,000. This is about half of the amount that was spent in the famous "golden primary" of 1926, which was, it will be recalled, at once the Yorktown and Waterloo of William S. Vare. The Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger concludes that Pennsylvania is 50 per cent better than four years ago.

That paper, however, observes that substantially as much was expended for the successful Davis ticket this year as was spent for the Vare ticket in 1926, and it is confessedly curious as to whether the Senate will assume that all this money was spent in nominating Mr. Davis, as it did in the Vare case. The bromidic response is, we suppose, that the Senate will cross that bridge when it gets to it. And when it does arrive there the whole country will be curious to see what the Senate does—whether it will cross that bridge or get around it by a detour. Meantime, the progress of Pennsylvania toward purity in politics, though labored and slow, may be approvingly recorded.

PRESIDENTS-ELECT GO VISITING.

Mr. Hoover, it seems, started a pleasant tradition when he visited Latin-America in the period between his election and his inauguration. Presidents-elect in countries to the south are giving their approval of Mr. Hoover's journey by following his example. Mr. Hoover, the other day, received the third return call from his jaunt to the tropics, when Julio Prestes, President-elect of Brazil, visited Washington. Ortiz Rubio of Mexico and Olaya Herrera of Colombia previously had been guests at the White House, and later made more or less extended tours of the country.

It was an excellent move for good will in the Western Hemisphere when a President-elect of the United States visited his country's nearest neighbors. It is an even better sign that these visits are now being returned, and that a precedent for such interchange of amenities seems to have been set. Injection of the personal element into international relations should facilitate the work of the diplomatic channels which hitherto have been the only means of contact.

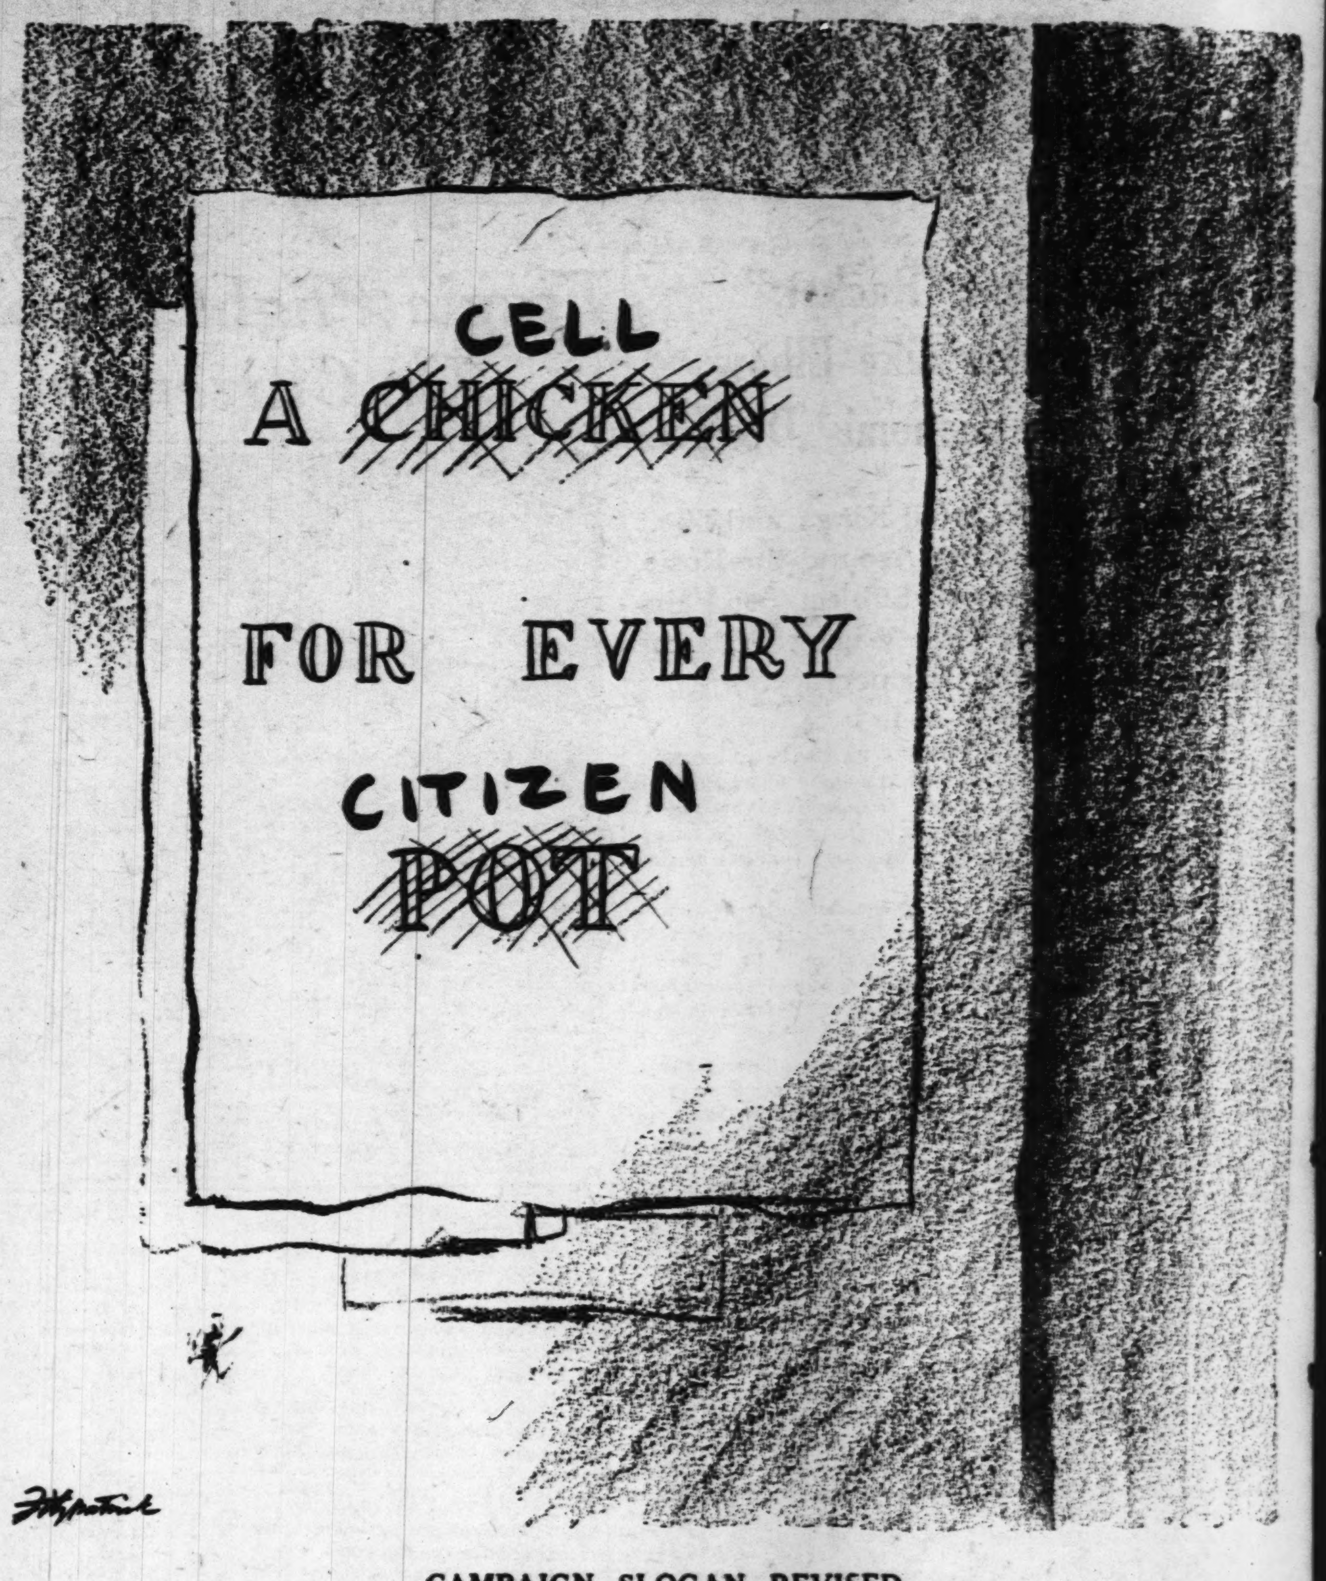
THE HAPPIEST WARRIOR OF THEM ALL.

It was truly a pleasure to meet again the beaming warrior, Roy Asa Haynes, whom the pen of former Senator Reed has brought back into living print. Mr. Haynes will, or should, be remembered as the Ohio editor who was first to undertake the labor of national enforcement as Federal Prohibition Commissioner, being appointed by President Harding at the instance of the late Wayne Wheeler. And he was the only one of that long, unhappy line that really and truly succeeded. His book, "Prohibition Inside Out," was a dazzling rhapsody of conquest. Perhaps it lacked the laconic perfection of Caesar's veni, vidi, vici, but as the story of a man who looked upon his work and saw that it was great it was a dandy. The drouth was then in full flower, so the author assured us; there was no oasis on the horizon; the bootlegger was an illusion; the scofflaw had not even been invented; the country had gloriously acquiesced in the new order, and so far from finding the office a trying post, Mr. Haynes had experienced no difficulty at all. We have no idea how posterity will rate Mr. Haynes among the literati of his time, but he should be credited with demonstrating that fiction is a good deal stranger than truth.



CAMPAIGN SLOGAN REVISED.

Fallacies of Our Economic Policy

Dealing with problem of nation's surplus, Owen D. Young views it collectively, whereas legislators consider it piecemeal; all excess goods and crops can be exported, he says; plans to cut production mean idle factories and jobless men; yet high tariff sets at naught all efforts to cultivate foreign trade as our logical outlet.

From the New York World.

AFTER all the miasma exhaled in Washington during the 14 months the tariff was under discussion, the address of Owen D. Young in San Francisco comes like a breath of ozone from the ocean. Mr. Young carefully avoided any criticism of Congress and its works, but, in his thoughtful analysis of the world problems of today and in his outline of a policy adapted to world needs and to our own requirements as well, he could not avoid leaving in the minds of all who heard or read his speech a picture of the pitiful contrast between the broad and enlightened views of a thinker and a leader and the actual performance of the nation's law makers and administrators.

Mr. Young chose as his theme the problem of the American surplus. We have been dealing with this problem piecemeal. We have treated the agricultural surplus, for example, as if it were a thing apart, whereas it is only one phase of a broader question. Along with it we have surpluses of raw materials, of manufactured goods, of services and of earnings over expenditures. What shall we do with them? Mr. Young makes the point that all these surpluses are exportable. A portion of them can be employed more usefully outside the United States than at home. From the point of view of broad principle and general policy, their disposal constitutes a single problem.

All these surpluses are a result of our growth. Within the last decade, the output per man in our mines and factories has increased more than 50 per cent and we are not yet at the end of this development. We have, in fact, been moving forward so speedily in an industrial way that our thinking has not kept pace with our material progress. Our political leaders are attempting to apply the ideas of yesterday to the problems of today, and instead of reaching a solution, they have succeeded only in creating confusion.

Let us consider the case of our surplus earnings, or liquid funds available for investment. There are many who cherish the idea that these should be used only at home, and that to invest in foreign fields carries a menace to American industry and labor. But since we are already producing more than we can consume at home, it is obvious that the multiplication of plants and equipment beyond any immediate needs would be wasteful and would intensify the existing problems. The critics of our foreign lending also lose sight of the fact that the borrowers are not taking away gold or other currency but goods—goods by the shipload, the products of American labor, for which the workers have been paid good wages.

During the last seven years we have been lending to foreign countries at an average rate of more than $1,000,000,000 a year, and the total of such loans, excluding the war-time advances of the American Government to the Allies, has reached the impressive figure of $16,000,000,000. These loans created a new outlet for American goods. Without them our surpluses would have been greater and the problem of unemployment would have been more acute.

Nevertheless, some of the spokesmen for farmers and for organized labor have bitterly criticised these loans, on the assumption that if this capital had been kept at home there would have been more demand for farm products and more jobs for American workers. This failure to note that it is the products of labor and the farm which are really borrowed, and not money, only goes to show how our thinking has failed to keep pace with our economic evolution.

There is another school of political leaders who cherish the idea that the proper way to deal with the problem of surpluses is to restrict output to domestic requirements, to lay prohibitive duties on competing foreign products and thus to secure for producers a complete monopoly of the home market. The surpluses can be reduced, of course, and if our restrictive trade policy closes the export outlet, they will be reduced eventually to nothing. But, as Mr. Young has pointed out, the reduction of the surplus means that some of our mines and farms and factories will lie idle and, worse than that, the men who have been working in them will remain idle. In getting rid of a surplus of goods we shall create a surplus of labor in its place, "the most dangerous surplus which can exist in any country."

In brief, the only way out which is consistent with the maintenance of economic progress is to keep on producing and to find more markets by cultivating the friendship and good will of potential buyers. The solution of the problem does not lie in an insulated and self-sufficient America, but in the development of an America of broader interests. There is nothing in this that smacks of charity or philanthropy. It is the policy indicated by an enlightened self-interest.

Is the nation moving along the lines so clearly indicated by Mr. Young? Is it making friends and developing relationships which will be mutually advantageous to both sides? For an answer we need only turn to the protests of 35 nations against our new tariff.

A COMPLIMENT FOR AMERICAN GIRLS.

The Hon. Lady Fortescue in London Graphic.

WHAT struck me very forcibly about the American women was their tremendous self-respect. Practically every woman I saw — of any class — was beautifully or neatly turned out. The rich were chic and soignee, smartly coiffed, carefully manicured, exquisitely dressed from head to heel, every detail of toilet or dress attended to, a joy to the eye.

Even the little shopgirls have the same impression. Their neat legs were encased in sleek unwrinkled stockings, and their feet shod in irreproachable shoes. Their hair was glossy, their hands beautifully tended, they wore slick, smart clothes and for the street naughty little hats put on at exactly the right angle. One seldom sees a sloppy, shoddy woman in New York.

Fight Impends in Bill to Strengthen Rights of Labor

not to reject a Judge who had upheld them, but to enact legislation outlawing them.

Among those joining most vociferously in this argument were Steiwer, Gillett, Waterman, Hastings, Hebert and Stephens. Yet when the bill proposing to outlaw "yellow dog contracts" was presented in committee, every one of those Senators voted against a favorable report. Their action constituted one of the quickest and most complete changes of front ever seen in the Senate.

Party Pledges.

The minority report, in emphasizing that both political parties are committeed to the principle of curbing the abuse of injunctions in labor disputes, quoted the following from the Republican platform adopted at Kansas City in 1928:

> The party favors freedom in wage contracts, the right of collective bargaining by free and responsible agents of their own choosing, which develops and maintains that purposeful co-operation which gains its chief incentive through voluntary agreement. We believe that injunctions in labor disputes have in some instances been abused, and have given rise to a serious question for legislation.

Likewise, it recalled the following from the Democratic platform adopted at Houston:

> We recognize that legislative and other investigations have shown the existence of grave abuses in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes. No injunctions should be granted in labor disputes except upon proof of threatened irreparable injury, and after notice and hearing, and the injunction should be confined to those acts which do threaten irreparable injury. The expressed purpose of representatives of capital, labor and the bar to devise a plan for the elimination of the present evils with respect to injunctions must be supported, and legislation designed to accomplish these ends formulated and passed.

Thereupon the minority report succinctly continues: "If we concede, as we must, that labor has the right to combine for the lawful purpose of securing employment, and has likewise the right to combine for the purpose of securing increased wage, or better conditions, then it follows, as the late Chief Justice Taft has so well stated, that the strike becomes a lawful instrument in the economic struggle between employer and employe. It would be hypocrisy, however, to concede these rights to labor, and then to prohibit any effective exercise of them by labor."

Turning to the "yellow-dog contract," the report goes on:

No Surrender of Rights.

"In all of them the employe waives his right of free association and genuine representation in connection with his wages, hours of labor and other conditions of employment. In other words, he surrenders his actual liberty of contract, and to a great extent enters into involuntary servitude. It is no defense to say he is not compelled to sign the contract. He is helpless in dealing with his employer. He is dependent upon his daily wage, and so is his family. Therefore he must accept whatever conditions are laid down.

"It has become necessary for Congress to take some action in regard to these contracts, because many of the injunctions issued by Federal courts have been based wholly or in part on the assumption that they are valid. At first blush it would seem unnecessary to pass any legislation upon the subject, because it is difficult to see how any court could sustain such a contract, even though there were no statute condemning it."

Pointing out that many injunctions issued by Federal courts forbid the doing of things that are not prohibited by statute, and hence amount to "Judge-made law," the report cites the following famous aphorism from Blackstone:

"In all tyrannical government, the right of making and enforcing laws is vested in one and the same man, or one and the same body of men; and wherever those two powers are united together, there can be no public liberty."

Tyrannical Procedure.

"It is amazing," the report continues, "that in the last 40 years there has developed in American courts the practice of writing a special law to fit the individual case, by judges in issuing labor injunctions; and that thereupon the judge who himself wrote the 'law,' had undertaken to prescribe the penalty for its violation, and to punish the violator without permitting him to enjoy a trial by jury, or even to insist upon a trial before another judge.

"It is difficult to see how any civilized people could indefinitely submit to such tyrannical procedure. It is not difficult to understand how such cruel laws, made not by any legislative body, but by a judge on the bench, should bring our Federal Courts into disrepute. Neither is it difficult to see how such injunctions, violating the conscience of civilization, should frighten the persons against whom they are issued into desperation."

On the subject of juryless trials in cases of criminal contempt, the language of the minority is equally vigorous, as follows:

"The ordinary criminal laws provide that any person charged with a crime shall have the right to a jury trial. The person tried for contempt of court is tried for a criminal act. It is true this act has not been made criminal by a statute, but by the order of a judge. The judgment, however, can confine the defendant to a jail, and the length of the term is at the discretion of the judge who made the order.

"What difference is it to the defendant whether the 'law' has been made by the judge or by a legislature? His suffering is just as great in one case as in the other. Why should he be deprived of a jury trial when the law is made by one man instead of by the regular legislative authority? And what defense can be made of a law that provides that the defendant shall have no opportunity either for an impartial jury or an impartial judge?

"If an attack is made upon the conduct or character of a judge by a newspaper, for instance, is it proper that the same judge should sit in judgment upon the accused? Suppose the judge were assaulted on the streets by a common thug? Our procedure would not permit him to sit in the trial of the person accused of the assault.

"It is interesting to note that, severe as was the ancient law, it was the prevailing practice in the English courts for centuries that trials for criminal contempt were by jury. It is only in the American courts in the last century that such trials by the judge alone have developed. All sense of justice and all fair judicial procedure revolts at such a condition."

Defending "Yellow Dogs."

The unfavorable report on the bill made by the majority of the committee is very much shorter, and couche din more strictly legal terms. On the subject of "yellow dog contracts" it declares:

"However distasteful such contracts may be to us, yet the fact remains that in three cases the United States Supreme Court has held that there is no legislative power to inhibit or outlaw them."

It is interesting to note that precisely the same point was raised during the Parker debate, and it was advanced as a reason for refusing to place on the Supreme bench a man who held that view. On the other hand, some of the Senators who supported the majority report containing the foregoing quotation, contended then that the proper remedy was not to change the court but to pass a law—such as they now oppose!

"The contract when made becomes a property right," their report states. "To provide by law that the courts shall not protect this right is unquestionably a deprivation of property without due process of law."

Against the provision in the bill declaring the right to strike, the report complains that it would destroy all remedies against "illegal strikes," as, for example, strikes to compel political action by the Government, or to overturn a valid arbitration award, or to aid a secondary boycott. It adds:

"Strikes, which are powerful movements, should be protected against legal hindrance when they are engaged in as an instrument to protect the rights of workers. The purpose of all legislation should be to strengthen right doing and suppress wrongdoing. Strikes in violation of collective agreements, or to injure individuals or the public, or to accomplish ends in violation of law should not be encouraged by legislation."

More Delay, Is Prediction.

Arguing against the provision for jury trials in contempt cases, the report states:

"It is probable that many violations of court orders, not merely in labor disputes, but in monopoly and restraint of trade cases, in 'padlock' or nuisance cases under the Volstead act, and in many other instances could not be summarily punished, but would be subject to the delays, expense and burden of jury trials. Such a rapidaci change in the machinery of enforcement of many important Federal statutes utterly unconnected with labor disputes would seem to have no place in this bill."

However, there is one provision in the bill which met with the approval of the majority. It was that clause which would prohibit a Judge from sitting in a case of contempt alleged to have been committed against his own court.

In conclusion, the majority, while acknowledging that both political parties have recognized in their platforms the existence of abuses, is of the opinion, after studying all the evidence, that "the necessity for legislation is not urgent."

Whether the bill's supporters will succeed in obtaining unanimous consent to take it up early in the next session is conjectural. Certain associations of employers are bitterly opposed to any action, and probably they have enough friends in the Senate to block any such agreement. Then the real fight to take up the measure will start. If that obstacle is overcome, the next will be to secure its passage by the Senate. There would remain the House and the President.

Scientific or not, the bill is a long way from becoming a law.

Calls Tariff Bill Immense "Racket"

the Pennsylvania member has boosted the rates on pig iron; that the Wyoming member has boosted the rates on wool; that every member has raised the rates in which he is interested. Mr. Lawyer is grieved to discover this. The widget plant in Zenith won't want to pay more for its iron. The people of Zenith won't relish paying more for their clothes. Mr. Lawyer is pained, moreover, to discover that his worthy colleagues have no enthusiasm for the increased rates on widgets. What is to be done?

Trading of Votes.

Conversations are undertaken. The wool representative, it is discovered, will vote for the widget rate if Lawyer will vote for the higher rate on wool. The bargain is made. The pig iron representative will vote for prohibitive widget duties if Lawyer will come along on the pig iron rate. Another deal is accomplished. And so the logs are rolled about until a majority of the committee can agree on a bill which it can report to the House. Here it is discovered that the interests of the great gadget industry have been neglected, that the whatzit growers of Gopher Prairie have been overlooked. More conversations are held. More deals are made. Enough votes are mustered to shoot the bill through the House under rules which stringently limit debate.

Now it goes to the Senate, where debate is free. A howl goes up at the mountainous duties which it would impose. It is roundly denounced and as fulsomely praised. Here Senator Standpat of Zenith takes the interests of the widget industry in hand, arranges deals with the pig iron men, the wool men, the gadget men and the whatzit men, as each hog crowds the other to get his feet into the trough. The House bill gave the widget people an ad valorem duty of 55 per cent. The Senate bill grants them a duty of 45 per cent. The bills go to conference and emerge at last from conference committee carrying a 50 per cent duty on widgets.

The widget king is pleased. The duty means higher widget prices. This means higher profits. From the higher profits he contributes several thousand to the party fund to re-elect Lawyer and Standpat to get him higher widget duties, to get him higher prices, to enable him to contribute to campaign funds to re-elect Lawyer and Standpat to get him higher duties to give him bigger profits—and so on.

Where do you and I get in on this ring-around-the-rosie? That is a painful subject. Why bring that up now?

This is the way every tariff bill is written. It is the way the Grundy bill was written. Favor was shamelessly swapped for favor. Licenses to rob the consumer were brazenly handed out in payment for campaign contributions.

Increasing Sugar Bill.

Five Democratic Senators deserted their party to vote for the Grundy bill. They were paid for their votes with special favors given to the districts they represent. Fletcher and Trammell of Florida got raises on fruits and vegetables. Kendrick of Wyoming got a boost in the duty on wool. If this duty fosters sheep-raising, it will increase the supply of mutton and thousands of farmers will find that they will have to sell their mutton for lower prices. The duty will increase the difficulties of the textile industry by increasing the cost on one of its raw materials. It will saddle a heavy burden on everyone who wears woolen clothes, merely for the benefit of a few poorly located sheep ranchers. Ransdell and Broussard of Louisiana were rewarded with a higher duty on sugar. Now the average family of five will pay an extra $10 a year for sugar. Why? So that the farmers in Michigan and Utah may raise beets instead of potatoes. The duty will bring economic prostration to Cuba, one of our best customers. It will shift sugar production from areas where it is carried on cheaply to places where it can be continued only at great cost. Where five farmers will gain by the tariff on sugar, 995 others will lose in the higher prices they will have to pay. Even under the old sugar rate, the consumer was paying $165,000,000 a year in higher prices for the purpose of giving a subsidy to sugar growers which amounted to less than $20,000,000.

The increased sugar duty was first defeated in the Senate by a vote of 48 to 38. It passed finally by a vote of 47 to 39. Ten Senators who had opposed the duty on the first vote were swung in line on the second. Dill and Jones of Washington sought a duty on lumber. Pine and Thomas of Oklahoma were out for a duty on oil. Ashurst and Hayden of Arizona were after duties on hides, and so on. Such trading is the very essense of tariff legislation and will continue to be so as long as we continue to interfere with our trade.

This is the tariff racket. This is the way it works. Why do the people stand for it? The plain fact is that they are ignorant, apathetic, inert. They have been hypnotised by the steady flow of high tariff propaganda. Repetition is reputation. If a thing is repeated often enough, people will finally come to believe it. So we have been told, again and again, that high tariffs make for prosperity. "If this bill is passed," cried Senator Watson the other day, "this country will be on the upgrade financially and economically and commercially within 30 days, and within a year we shall again resume our position as the first and foremost of all the peoples of history in all the essential elements of individual and national greatness." "With its enactment," proclaimed Representative Crowther, "the country again will blossom out in the full sunshine of prosperity."

We have had tariffs, the argument runs. We have been prosperous. Therefore the tariffs have caused the prosperity. The sun rises because the cock crows. America has been prosperous, it is true, but not because it has raised barriers to international trade. We have great resources in coal, gas and water-power, minerals and fertile soil. Low birth rates and laws restricting immigration have made labor scarce and wages high, giving to consumers the purchasing power which has stimulated our industry. Our mechanical equipment is the best in the world. We have surpassed all other peoples in substituting power resources for human labor in industry. Free public education has given us a skilled working force. American factory management in recent years has increased amazingly in its efficiency. Deliberate invention, industrial research, improvement in budgeting, accounting and statistical control, in short, science in management has increased factory output and reduced unit costs. More than any other nation we have built out industry on the principle of standardization. We have been able to standardize materials and methods only because we have been able to standardize the finished product. We have been able to produce uniform products in large quantities only because we have been able to sell them in a wide market. This market, 3,000,000 square miles in area, is the greatest free trade market in the world. In it we carry on more than nine-tenths of our trade. Our Federal Constitution has wisely provided that this great market must remain a free market. In so far as our industrial supremacy is to be attributed to our trade policy, it must be credited to our wise policy of freedom in domestic exchange, not to the impertinent restrictions which have placed upon our trade with other nations.

Perhaps it would be impertinent to inquire why depression overtook us under the high rates of the Fordney-McCumber act. But the protectionists would have their answer ready. If business is bad under a high tariff, the depression is due to other causes entirely beyond the control of the party. If business is good, however, the tariff caused it. You can prove anything you set out to prove if you can keep your face straight. The truth of the matter is that tariffs are of little importance as causes either of general prosperity or of general business depression. Cyclical fluctuations of business activity are matters of price levels, money and credit, purchasing power, overcapitalization and innumerable other factors. To explain them simply in terms of tariffs is to confess to a superstitious belief in magic. The prosperity propaganda of the high tariff crowd is intended not to enlighten, but to deceive. It is likely that business will revive in the course of the next year. Such a revival, when it comes, will come in spite of the tariff, not because of it. But the protectionists will inevitably claim the credit.

The President himself, in his apology for signing the Grundy bill, revealed that he was not above the practice of a little political legerdemain. The bill, he admitted, contains "inequalities and inequitable compromises. There are some duties which will prove too high." But, he continues, the flexible provision which it contains "should render it possible to secure prompt and scientific adjustment of serious inequities and inequalities." This he offers as his alibi. But it will not hold.

The President, under the law, cannot touch a single rate until the Tariff Commission has made an investigation. These investigations are time-consuming. The sugar investigation took two years. The linseed oil investgiation took six. The tariff law covers some 2000 items. In eight years the Tariff Commission has made only 80 investigations. There have been only 36 changes in rates. At such a speed it would take the President 800 years to overhaul the rates of the Grundy bill. A geologist might regard this as relative flexibility. But it offers consumers now living scant prospect of substantial relief. In the meantime, American business must continue to bear the burden which the law imposes on it.

The President's power is limited to accepting or rejecting the changes which the Commission recommends. The present commission is highly protectionist. It may recommend increases rather than decreases in duties. In the 36 changes of the last eight years the tariff has been boosted 31 times and lowered but five times; in the cases of mill-feeds, crosylic acid, phenol, paint brush handles and Bob-white quail. The flexibility of the tariff is like the flexibility of the elbow. It bends only one way.

In plain words, tariff flexibility is a fraud. It's the old army game. It worked in 1922. Will it work again in 1930?

The tariff racket is a respectable racket. But is none the less a racket. Through a shameless swapping of votes, Congress has built up for us an elaborate system of finanical privileges by means of which a few men profit at the expense of their fellows. Burdensome trade restrictions have been foisted upon us by those who have sought for special favors at the hands of the Government. American citizens have been deceived by the plea that tariffs have made for prosperity. And now they are told that the President will rescue them through his use of the flexible clause, a device whose greatest merit is that it makes tariffs higher than they seem. Is there no limit to their gullibility? Will they continue ever complacent in the face of exploitation? Or may we yet come to our senses some day before we place a complete embargo on our trade?

RECREATION EXPENDITURES

St. Louis Association Makes Survey of 945 Cities.

Expenditures for recreation in St. Louis totaled $387,748.05 in 1929, according to a recent survey of 945 cities made by the Park and Playground Association of St. Louis. The total for all cities included was $33,539,805.79. Bonds for recreation purposes were issued in 37 cities, totaling $4,501,127.26. Among these was East St. Louis, with an issue of $68,000.

Expenditures in St. Louis were divided as follows: Municipal athletic league activities, including swimming, boating, tennis and golf, $195,460.42; municipal playgrounds, $100,680.94; school playgrounds, $91,606.69.

MRS. FRANCES W. BAKER DIES

The funeral of Mrs. Frances Wilson Baker, who died Friday at her home, 4912 McPherson avenue, will be held at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning from her residence. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Mrs. Baker, widow of Isaac Gilbert Baker, St. Louis merchant, had been in ill health since last November.

Mrs. Baker was born in Lexington, Mo., coming to St. Louis at the time of her marriage in 1862. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Benton H. Pollock, a sister, Miss Katherine S. Wilson, two granddaughters and four great-grandchildren.

Boy Scouts and Educators See Byrd South Pole Film

Special Showing at Missouri Theater for Youths and Washington U. and St. Louis U. Faculties.

Boy Scouts of St. Louis and vicinity who witnessed a special showing yesterday of the film, "With Byrd at the South Pole," borrowed phrases from Floyd Gibbons' synchronized description to communicate their impressions. "Oh, boy! Did'ja see that guy fall off the barrier?" "Hey, did'ja notice the penguin with the bow tie?" "Oh, boy! Wasn't that tough when they had to shoot the dog?"

Boy Scouts, scout leaders and faculty members of St. Louis and Washington universities were at the Missouri Theater for this presentation of the pictorial record of the expedition as guests of the Post-Dispatch, which was one of its principal sponsors. The film was of particular interest to the Scouts because one member of their organization, Paul Siple, represented them on the expedition.

The special feature was not needed, however, to bolster interest in the film. It might well qualify for designation as the greatest newsreel ever taken, but it succeeds in being much more than that. The 30 miles of film exposed during the 16 months of the expedition have been condensed into a picture which not only records its history adequately, but contains in good measure the elements of sound drama, conflict, pathos, comedy and a thrilling climax.

Comment by Floyd Gibbons.

The picture is silent it is significant of the scope of the expedition that talking moving pictures were still regarded lightly when it began in August, 1928—but music and sound effects have been synchronized with it, and Floyd Gibbons, writer and rapid-fire radio announcer, describes the stirring flight over the South Pole, which was the ultimate goal of the expedition.

"They're off, to win or lose everything," Gibbons shouts, as the airplane, with Byrd in command, takes off from Little America. "They are skimming along low, to avoid the winds, passing over the barren slopes frozen with wind-swept ice and the crevasses which seem like giant washboards.

"Now they are at the Queen Maud range, and the heavily weighted plane must climb above 10,000 feet to cross beyond, Balchen, at the stick, signals they can't make it unless the load is lightened, and Byrd directs him to try another point. They can't make it and something must go overboard. Gasoline is needed so food, a month's supply of it, is dropped down to the Antarctic wastes.

The Greatest News Story.

"Oh, boy! he made it. That grand and glorious feeling—like when a reckless driver misses you. Byrd is relieved but his face is still serious. He holds the glasses to his eyes, scanning the stark expanse of frozen silence which is the plateau below. He is at his instruments, studying, calculating. Oh, boy! they're at the South Pole. They drop the flag and then Byrd hands the radio operator the greatest news story ever written. Oh, boy! the news."

The penciled note is shown on the screen: "Our calculations indicate that we have reached the vicinity of the South Pole." Gibbons takes up the narrative again:

"Now they are on the last lap. They have flown six miles beyond the pole and are returning. There is just enough gas left to get back to the emergency depot, and they are passing out of this wilderness of desolation."

As the plane again neared Little America, the applause of the Boy Scouts drowned out Gibbons and all that came through the uproar was this: "Oh, boy! Wow! What a celebration. Oh, for a chance to slap one of those plucky devils on the back!"

The film ends shortly after the flight is completed. The hasty preparations to break camp and board ship for the return home are shown. Winter is closing in again, the ice is forming, and speed is the expedition's only hope of avoiding another winter in the Antarctic. And that, as Gibbons remarked, "would not be so hot."

Plenty to Laugh At.

Not all of the picture is as tense as the story of the flight. The audience found plenty to laugh at in the adventures of Byrd's terrier, Igloo, and in the pranks of members of the expedition during the long winter night of six months when they were snowbound in their camp. Seals sliding down icy slopes on their bellies and the penguins gathering to discuss the arrival of this "Byrd," who was not even a penguin by marriage, as a subtitle reported, provided other bits of merriment.

A pin might have been heard falling as the picture recorded the death of Spy, leader of the huskies, who was left behind because of illness when Dr. Lawrence Gould, second in command to Byrd, set out to establish an emergency landing depot. Spy ran away from Little America and hours later limped to the head of the dog train to resume his position, but he couldn't stand the pace. Neither could he be left to starve. The camera showed him being dragged away from the sleds by one of the expedition who carried a pistol and the next shot showed the two sets of footprints, those of the dog and the man going, only those of the man returning.

An appeal to members of the Humane Society for funds brought in $300 last week, Robert Sellar, executive secretary of the organization announced. The organization has $2500 in outstanding bills and $600 in unpaid salaries, Sellar said in his appeal. Contributions should be mailed to the headquarters of the society, 1210 Macklind avenue.

What Prohibition Did in Two Idaho Mining Towns

want relaxation. They seek the kind they want and will have.'

The result of the two towns was similar. They allowed the houses of ill fame to run by paying certain amounts. Liquor was sold without molestation from city or county officials. Gambling establishments also sold liquor, usually openly over the bar. "Why not let this element," they said, "which could not be reached in the usual channels of taxation, pay their just share of the burden of government?"

The underworld was ready and willing.

341 Taken to Trial.

Agents Webb and Johnson report that beginning with the May, 1929, term of United States District Court, including the Mullan and Wallace conspiracy trials of December, 1929, and June, 1930, respectively, there have been up for trial 341 defendants, of whom at least 95 per cent were from Shoshone County.

The records show that more than 300 were found guilty and fined from $10 to $1000 or sentenced to one day in a county jail or two years in McNeil Island Federal prison.

No accurate figures are available as to the amount of money collected at Mullan and Wallace. At the Wallace trial one witness attempted to estimate the total. He thought perhaps $6000 to $8000 a year would be about right.

At Mullan it was considerably less, perhaps $4000 or $5000 a year. Just how long the collections were being made is not a matter of record. It is safe to say, however, that the total of collections does not equal the total of fines assessed against those convicted of the violations.

One Mayor in Prison.

Mayor Harwood is at McNeil Island serving 18 months. Mayor Rossi says he was doing what he did for the benefit of his town; he profited not a cent. He is out on appeal under a $3000 bond.

Former Mayor Herrick will not appeal and he and his former Chief of Police are on the way to McNeil Island to begin serving 15 months each.

Sheriff Weniger, with his Chief Deputy, Charles Bloom, is out on bail after conviction at the Mullan trial. If he loses he must serve two years and Bloom 15 months. Weniger received a concurrent 15-month sentence at the Wallace trial also.

Whether or not the convictions will result in better conditions as regards liquor sales in Shoshone County remains to be seen. Recently a still with large amounts of whisky, mash and equipment was raided within seven miles of Wallace.

Does prohibition prohibit? This is the question being asked in serious earnestness by those who have watched the progress of the two conspiracy trials in Northern Idaho.

COAL FIRM BUYS TRACT AT DUNCAN AND VANDEVENTER

Record Price for District Is Reported to Have Been Paid by the Inland Valley Co.

OTHER DEALS IN AREA ARE PENDING

Missouri State Life Said to Be Dickering for Former Bank Buildings on Broadway.

By Berry Moore

The Inland Valley Coal Co. of St. Louis yesterday purchased a tract with a frontage of 316 feet on the west side of Vandeventer avenue, 45 feet south of Duncan avenue. It comprises 44,000 square feet. The rear of the tract is served by a Wabash Railway switch, which the purchase included. A record price it is understood to have been established in this sale, which was made on a square foot basis. Negotiations were handled by the Real Estate Department of the First National Co. The ground, which belonged to the Vandeventer Realty Co., a holding corporation, was the last available on the west side of Vandeventer in this block.

The coal company will improve the tract with the latest automatic equipment for the storage of coal, designed to facilitate the loading of trucks. Work is scheduled to begin at once.

The Maguire Coal Co. occupies an adjoining lot at the southwest corner of Vandeventer and Duncan avenues. The Glosemeyer Flour Co. and the Dunker Oil Co. own adjoining ground on Vandeventer south of the Inland's purchase.

A large tract in the block on the east side of Vandeventer, south of Duncan, is owned by the estate of August Busch, founder of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. Numerous offers have been reported for this ground, which also has rail connections. The Independent Plumbing and Supply Co., recently completed a building on the south side of Market street, each of Vandeventer.

Other Deals Pending.

Negotiations are pending for other tracts in this section served by the Wabash. In several instances extensive plants are planned, it is said.

Several offers were reported last week for property in the downtown district east of Twelfth boulevard, pointing to a revival of real estate activity in this part of the city in the fall. An offer was submitted for 80 by 109 feet on the north side of Chestnut street, in the 900 block, west of and adjoining the Ferro Garage, an eight-story fireproof structure recently completed at a cost of $1,000,000. The plot is owned by Charles H. Lucas, who said that negotiations were pending for it. Plans of the prospective purchasers were not disclosed.

It is recalled that this entire block was sought by the Singer-Klein Real Estate Co. for the garage, which occupies the quarter block at the northwest corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets. Negotiations collapsed, however, owing to the divergence of ideas as to values of the property on Pine street, especially the corners.

Negotiations are still pending for the southwest corner of Third and Olive streets, owned by the Thomas Wright Investment Co., which is wanted, with the adjoining ground on Third street, for a large commercial building. Real estate agents report many offers for property in this section in connection with the opening of the upper deck of the Eads Bridge as a free highway, together with the widening of Third street, as is now proposed.

Trade Being Considered.

Several new propositions were reported involving the National Bank of Commerce and Federal Commerce Trust Buildings, 12 and 16 stories in height, respectively, covering the entire half block on the east side of Broadway between Olive and Pine streets. One of these contemplates exchanging the Broadway buildings for the City Club Building at the southeast corner of Eleventh and Locust streets, and the Missouri State Life Building, at the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Locust streets. It is thought that negotiations have not gone beyond the conversational point. Plans in this connection are said to include construction of a 40-story tower to replace the former Post-Dispatch building, situated between and forming a part of the National Bank of Commerce and Federal Trust buildings. The entire ground floors of these buildings would be available as a counting room for the insurance company, while the upper stories of the tower structure could be occupied as the general offices of the company.

The Missouri State Life soon will have outgrown its building at Fifteenth and Locust streets, erected several years ago for its home offices, necessitating additional stories, should it continue to occupy it, notwithstanding the fact that it is a comparatively new structure.

The Missouri State Life became the owner of the City Club building in March, 1929, through foreclosure proceedings, as the holder of a deed of trust for $1,100,000, including accumulated interest. New leases were made in the building, with rentals that placed the property on a highly remunerative basis.

The National Bank of Commerce and Federal Commerce Trust Co. were vacated when the National Bank of Commerce and the Federal Trust Co. were merged with the Mercantile Trust Co. The Federal Commerce Trust Building, which stands at Broadway and Pine street, was formerly occupied by the Federal Reserve Bank.

BUILDING OF THIRD RESIDENCE IN LAKE FOREST IS STARTED

Ground was broken Thursday for foundations of the third residence in Lake Forest, at Clayton and Hanley roads. Shaw & Francis are agents for the property.

The house will be a 10-room residence in the modern English style, designed for Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Brueggeman by Saum Architects. In order to take advantage of the contours of the site, the house will be irregular in shape, with the large living room occupying one entire wing.

Construction of the fourth residence in Lake Forest will start immediately. It will be built for Ogden D. Williamson. This home will contain 14 rooms, three baths and a two-car garage. This home was designed by Robert Francis Denny, associated with George R. Bartling, Inc.

HALL IN STUDIO BUILDING LEASED TO DANCING SCHOOLS

Space on the second floor of the Studio Building at the northwest corner of Heman and Enright, has been leased to the music school and dancing academy operated by Carrie Pitcher Johnson and school of dramatic expression operated by Alice Jones Wientge. This hall will also be used for public assembly and business meetings. Negotiations are pending with several other artists for space in that building.

This firm also reports leasing a five-room apartment and studio in the building at 6323 Delmar to the school of music conducted by Miss Viola Kleinwort.

It reports a demand increasing daily for space on West Delmar and in Delmar Garden loop, for business and professional people.

REALTY BUSINESS CONTINUES GAIN

An increase of real estate market activity for May over April is reported by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The figure 73 indicating real estate market activity for April showed an increase of 2.7 over the figure for March, and the figure 73.5, indicating May activity, shows an increase of 0.5, making a total increase of more than three points during the last two months.

The index is based on official reports of the total number of deeds recorded in 64 typical cities throughout the country. Real estate activity for 1926 is taken as the base year in computing the monthly figure.

$60,000,000 IN BUILDING PROJECTS NOW SCHEDULED

Real estate men are enthusiastic over the fact that major building projects in St. Louis, under way and on the calendar, in value, approximate $60,000,000. In this connection, Elmcre Cave, a prominent member of the Real Estate Exchange, is urging a speeding up of private and municipal projects as a means of taking the slack out of labor in the construction field. In addition there are many minor projects not included in these figures.

Projects in course of construction include, notably the first unit of the Herbert Hadley Vocational School on Grand boulevard, north of Belle; West Belle School for Negroes on Enright, west of Vandeventer; miscellaneous school contracts; the Southwestern Bell Telephone Building at Olive and Beaumont; International Shoe warehouse, Fifteenth street and Lucas avenue; the 28-story Park Plaza apartments, at Kingshighway and Maryland; the new 18-story addition to the Melbourne Hotel and Grand and Lindell; the Globe-Democrat Building at High street and Franklin avenue, and additions to the Barnes Hospital

The proposed buildings regarded as virtually assured include, among others, the new Federal Building for Twelfth and Market streets, buildings to be erected by the Illinois Traction Co. at High street and Lucas avenue; Mercantile Mart to be erected at Twelfth and Spruce streets by the Terminal Railroad Association, and the building to be erected for the St. Louis Star at High and Gay streets.

City projects under way include the Lindell and Union boulevard viaduct and River des Peres sewer from Union boulevard to city limits. This is only one section of the River des Peres sewer now under construction.

Bills authorizing the sale of benefit assessment bonds, according to Cave, should release about $22,000,000 for the widening of streets and for the Memorial Plaza projects. Projects in this category that should proceed at once, Cave states, include the widening of Twelfth street, Gravois avenue, Seventh street from Market to Spruce, and the opening of Enright between Taylor and Kingshighway.

Drescher Opens Own Office.

Henry C. Drescher, formerly associated with George W. Diehl, Kingshighway and Gravois avenue, has opened a real estate office at 457 North Kingshighway boulevard in the Watterman Building.

Increase in the Capital For Real Estate Loans

National Association Collects Data From 428 Cities of United States and Canada.

An improvement in the supply of capital available for real estate loans in comparison with the supply available six months ago is reported by the National Association fo Real Estate Boards following the completion of its fifteenth semiannual survey based on reports of 428 local real estate boards in the principal cities of the United States and Canada.

This improvement, the National Association points out, indicates that the fundamental problem for increased construction is now presenting itself as a less difficult one, probably due to the fact that capital is less disproportionately diverted directly or indirectly into speculative fields and will tend to be placed increasingly at the disposal of the home builder.

Comparing the situation today and six months ago, when the first results of the stock market debacle were being felt, the report shows that today 30 per cent of the cities report an equilibrium between supply and demand in real estate mortgage loans and capital, 48 per cent report that desirable loans are seeking capital and 22 per cent report that in the mortgage money market capital is seeking loans.

The report six months earlier showed that in 53 per cent of the cities' real estate loans were seeking capital; 19 per cent reported a surplus of capital seeking investment, and 28 per cent reported equilibrium between supply and demand.

The single family dwelling and the apartment house have at present a healthy, normal ratio of supply and demand throughout the country as a whole, according to the survey. The greatest shortage of single family dwellings is reported in Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

In the ratio of supply and demand in apartments the greatest shortage is reported from Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado.

The shortage figure is larger than the oversupply figure for both single dwellings and apartments in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. This is likewise the case in the reports from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, Oregon, Washington and California.

In both apartment houses and single family dwellings the largest shortage figures are reported by district and county boards. Cities of less than 25,000 population have a larger percentage of reports showing a shortage in these tabulations than they have indicating overbuilt conditions and a greater percentage of cities of 25,000 to 100,000 population show a shortage in single family residences than an overbuilt condition.

OLIVE ST. REALTY CO. MOVES ITS OFFICES

New Quarters at 6921 Natural Bridge Road Near Scene of Activities.

The Olive Street Terrace Realty Co., one of the oldest subdivision companies in St. Louis, has removed its general offices from the Boatmen's Bank Building to new quarters at 6921 Natural Bridge road.

For some time this company, which has operated in St. Louis for 24 years, has devoted its efforts to the northwest section in the vicinity of the northwestern industrial district, the site of the proposed General Electric Co. plant. Wheaton C. Ferris is president of the company.

Offices have been established in a part of the 20-room structure which, for the last two years, has been used by members of this organization and their families as a country club. They provide increased facilities and more office room.

Agents for Clydehurst.

Studt-Wilson Co. of Clayton, which handled the recent sale of Algonquinwood lots, has been made special agents for Clydehurst.

A small, secluded subdivision on the north side of Big Bend road between Tuxedo avenue and Newport avenue in Webster Groves. All improvements are in, and schools and transportation are convenient.

New House in Holly Hills.

The Naert Realty Co., 3222 Meramec street, has completed a seven-room house in the English style of architecture at 3972 Federer avenue that is exciting more than ordinary interest. One enters the house through a hall with white oak stairs ornamented with iron stair rail. At the top of the stairs is the picture, "The Old Mill," in German antique art glass with concealed reinforciing. This house in Holly Hills will be on display today.

WEINBERG CONCERN REPORTS SEVEN SALES, TWO LEASES

The Weinberg & Weinberg Realty Co. reports the sale of the following properties:

2644-44½ Cherokee street, two stores and flat above, for Heyman Kessler to Olga Emert.

Three residences, 4377, 4379 and 4381 Delmar boulevard, for Morris J. Yawitz and H. F. Axelbaum to the Ada Building & Investment Co.

4071 McPherson avenue, a 10-room residence; 4069 McPherson, a seven-room residence, and 4067 McPherson, a seven-room residence, for John C. Fitzpatrick, Jessie B. Bresnahan and John J. Fitzpatrick to the Ada Building & Investment Co.

The northeast corner of Newstead avenue and Delmar boulevard and the northeast corner of Sarah street and McPherson avenue were leased to the Texas Oil Co. for oil stations.

Sales by Larner-Diener.

The Larner-Diener Co., International Life Building, reports the following sales for May: Southwest corner of North Market and Garrison avenues, two stores and 18 flats, for A. Auler; 5381 Pershing avenue, six-family apartment, for B. Braun; northwest corner of Winona and Lawn, eight-family flat, for a client, and 4601 Delor avenue, five-room bungalow, for a client.

BUS COMPANY LEASES CORNER FOR TERMINAL

Store at Eighteenth and Olive to Be Passenger Depot.

The corner store of the new building at the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Olive streets, has been leased for a long term to the Great Lakes to the Gulf Bus Co., which will occupy it as a passenger terminal depot. The lease was negotiated by Cornet & Zeibig, who have the management of the building. The rental was not disclosed, but it is understood that it establishes a record for corner stores in this section.

The building, recently completed, occupies the ground under a long lease from Washington University, owner of the fee.

GARMENT FACTORY GETS SPACE IN MALLINCKRODT BUILDING

The Isaac T. Cook Co. announces the following leases:

The Columbia Sales Co. has leased the premises at 109-11 Elm street for a sales and display room.

The entire seventh floor of the Mallinckrodt Building at 907-09 Washington avenue has been leased to Bradshaw, Spilker & Dorfmont, for the manufacture of womens' apparel.

New Building-Loan Company.

The Continental Savings, Building and Loan Association organized by the Maurer-Ghio-Beffa Realty Co., is a subsidiary organization for the purpose of making long-term first mortgages. The funds that are secured from the payment of certificates of stock, either on the installment plan, or paid in full certificates are invested in gilt-edge first mortgages. This newly formed corporation, which, has its offices at 3540 Olive street, has just acquired a 50-year charter from the State and has an authorized capital of $1,000,000. The officers are: Martin A. Beffa, president; William G. Ghio, first vice president, Patrick Balducci, second vice president; Joseph W. Maurer, secretary and treasurer. The directors: Edward R. Ruthsatz, Carl A. Koerner, William H. Morgens, F. W. Imholz, Dr. P. H. Howard, George T. Helme, Clarence H. Schuettenberg. Carl von Schrader, formerly with the Eggers Realty Co., is now connected with the sales department of the Maurer-Ghio-Beffa Realty Co., Inc.

THIS BEAUTIFUL HOME—3972 FEDERER PL.

IN HOLLY HILLS, THE BEAUTY SPOT OF SOUTH ST. LOUIS

To see this attractive 7-room English type home, drive south on Grand Boulevard to Carondelet Park, then west to Coronada Avenue and right one block into beautiful Holly Hills.

The home in a setting of shrubs and trees on a lot 53x150 reached through a side drive to a 2-car garage with a two-way entrance.

As we enter the house, we are amazed at the beautiful hall with its clear white oak stairs, ornamented with iron stair rail touched to blend with the buff craftex walls and its full-sized mirror doors. At the top of the stairs is the artist's beautiful painting, "The Old Mill," in German Antique Art Glass with concealed reinforcing.

To our right we step into the sunken living room. Having two beautiful art glass windows, with German Antique Art Glass in the front windows. The fireplace has an artist's hand painting above. To the rear of the room we step into the sun parlor. All inside wood finish is Red Gumwood, and the ornamental molding around the ceiling is of hand painted roses.

To our left is the dining room, which again has been touched by the hand of an artist and made to harmonize with the living room. Stepping from the dining room we go into the kitchen, the last word of modern craftsmanship. Vitrolite walls and sills and built-in features, with specially designed Battleship Linoleum to harmonize. To the right of the kitchen we find an emergency bath with Vitrolite walls and aluminum and metal fixtures.

Entering the second floor we find the "Black and Gold" bathroom, which must be seen to be appreciated, as words cannot present the picture.

To our left we have a master bedroom with plenty of closet space. Having cedar closet with full-size mirror door and plenty of floor sockets. To the rear of this bedroom, we step onto a large porch.

To our right we have two bedrooms having ample closet space and full-size mirror doors.

Entering the basement there remains but one detail to this perfect home—the heating plant. The Capital Red Top Boiler, manufactured by United States Radiator Corporation, with its baked enamel jacket vitreous enamel doors, insulated entirely with inch thick rock wool, insuring economical operation.

The Capital Red Top Boiler is equipped with model "R" Nokol Automatic Oil Burner. The simplicity, reliability and efficiency of this burner insures dependable warmth during the winter months without attention on the part of the owner.

WE MOVE

We have moved to our new offices, 6921 Natural Bridge Road.

The rapid development of the northwest section in the vicinity of the northwestern industrial district and the site of the proposed General Electric Company plant has caused us to decide that our future operations would be confined to this district, at least for several years to come.

With enlarged offices and increased facilities, we are now prepared to give our growing clientele even better service than we have given them during the past quarter of a century in the real estate business in St. Louis.

You are cordially invited to call and see our new home.

COMPARISON
You are not a paid "valuation expert," and you don't have to be. You can compare one valuation with another; you can compare "all new, modern plumbing" with all old-style plumbing; new tiled bath walls with plain plastered walls; hot-water heat and oil burner with all other kinds of heat. This 7-room home has a new interior that's positively modern, clean, light and beautiful. Compare it with any home; 2-car garage; vacant. Open. 6069 Cates av.

CARDS OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Morris J. Zimmerman wish to thank their many friends and relatives and Rev. Theodore Oberhellmac for their sympathy and floral offerings in the loss of their beloved daughter, Hortense.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our relatives and friends for the many kindnesses shown my beloved wife and our dear mother during her recent illness and death. Especially do we thank the priests and organist of St. Matthews Church and Mato Hermann & Son Funeral Directors, for efficient services rendered.
CHRISTIAN HERMANN SR. AND FAMILY.

We hereby thank our relatives and friends for their kind sympathy, and the pallbearers for their services, at the funeral of our beloved husband and father, Nicholas Becker. We especially thank Mr. G. A. Hoehn for his kind words of consolation.
THE BEREAVED FAMILY. (c)

We desire to express our sincere thanks to our friends and relatives, employes of Water and Street departments, chauffeurs of Municipal Garage, and Rev. Father Adrian for their words of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings in our late bereavement, also the doctors and nurses for their kind attention.
MRS. MARY FISHELL AND FAMILY.

We acknowledge with grateful appreciation the kind expression of your sympathy, tendered at the death of beloved wife and mother, Bridget Haberstroh; also the beautiful floral offerings; with special thanks to the pallbearers, Father Keaney and his assistants of the Visitation Church, members of Truck Co. No. 15, Engine Co. No. 43 and Officer No. 9, and Harrigan-Sheahan, undertakers.
MR. HABERSTROH & SON. (c)

Mrs. Bertha Thomure and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for their sympathy and floral offerings in the loss of their beloved husband, father and brother, Adolph Thomure. We especially thank the Rev. H. E. Ziemer and Brother Wintthaus and the members of the Benton Council, No. 183, Royal Arcanum. (c)

WE desire to thank our relatives and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown us during our last sad bereavement in the loss of my dear son and brother; we especially thank the American Legion of Festus, Mo., Krieghauser Undertaking Co. and the many friends for their beautiful floral offerings.
The bereaved,

THE BEREAVED WIFE, MOTHER, FATHER, BROTHER AND SISTER. (c)

IN MEMORIAM

ALBERS—In loving memory of our dear parents, August Albers and Catherine Albers, who passed away 2 years ago, June 26, 1928 and Nov. 15, 1928.
Never shall you be forgotten.
Never from our memory fade;
Loving hearts will always linger,
Round the graves where you are laid.
Sadly missed by their children, grandchildren brothers and sister.

ANDERSON—In loving memory of Hedwig Anderson, who departed this life one year ago today. Sadly missed by HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

BROECKER—In loving remembrance of our dear son and brother, William Broecker, who departed this life June 29, 1925. Sadly missed by MOTHER AND SISTER. (c)

CHRISTMANN—In memory of Margaret Christmann, who died two years ago, July 1, 1928:
I kissed your cold lips when they took you away;
I knew then we were parted.
And ever since that sad day I've been broken-hearted.
DAUGHTER JOSIE. (c)

FLEITER—In memory of George Fleiter, who died eight years ago, June 25:
Nothing can ever take away the love a heart holds dear.
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.

HAWKINS—In loving memory of my dear husband, Francis P. Hawkins, who departed this life July 1, 1929, and my dear son, Francis Hawkins Jr., who departed this life July 3, 1917.
Oh, Francis if you only knew how I miss you and Francis, I so lonely, wish that you were here.
Sadly missed by wife and mother.

HUDGENS, FRED—In memory of my dear husband and father, who departed this life one year ago today, June 29, 1929.
You suffered hours, yes, hours of pain,
To wait for cure but all in vain,
Till God alone knew what was best—
Called you home to give you rest.

Days of sadness still come o'er us;
Secret tears often flow,
But memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you left us one year ago.
Sadly missed by,
WIFE AND CHILDREN.
And all who loved him.

MUELLER, REGINA W.—
One year has passed since that sad day,
The one we loved was called away;
God took her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she liveth still.
PARENTS AND SISTER. (c)

O'TOOLE, VERONICA—In loving memory of our darling daughter, Veronica O'Toole, who passed away June 29, 1929.
Remembrance is a golden chain,
Death tries to break but all in vain,
To have, to love and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER. (c)

SUESS—In loving memory of Henry Suess, who departed this life June 29, 1929:
There is someone who misses you sadly
And finds the time long since you went.
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear.
'Tis sad, but true, we wonder why
The best are always the first to die.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

WOLF—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Rudolph Wolf, who departed July 4, 1927:
Three years have gone since that sad day,
The one we loved was called away;
God took him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts he liveth still.
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

YUNGERMANN—In loving memory of our dear son, Harold, who passed away June 30, 1929:
We mourn for him in silence,
No eyes can see us weep;
But many a silent tear is shed
While others are asleep.
We have lost our soul's companion,
A life linked with our own:
And day by day we miss him more,
As we walk through life alone.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER AND SISTERS.

WOMAN KILLS MAN, HER SON AND SELF

Terre Haute Housekeeper Apparently Angered by Threats to Discharge Her.

By the Associated Press.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 28.—The bodies of Wesley Oakley, 55 years old; Mrs. Clara Raney, 28, and Mrs. Raney's 5-year-old son were found today in Oakley's apartment. Indications were the woman had shot and killed Oakley and her son and then herself. Mrs. Raney had been employed as housekeeper in Oakley's apartment.

Oakley's body was found by his 15-year-old daughter, Alice. Police broke open the door of Mrs. Raney's room and found her body and that of her son.

No motive for Mrs. Raney's act could be established. The revolver which she apparently used was at her side.

Alice and her brother, Walter, 13, and a sister, Daisy, 10, said they did not hear the shots fired. They slept on a lower floor.

Oakley's wife is confined in a state hospital.

After questioning Oakley's children, police said they thought Mrs. Raney was apparently angered by threats of Oakley to discharge her as his housekeeper.

KINGSFORD-SMITH WILL FLY BIGGEST U. S. PLANE

32-Passenger Transport to Take Him and Comrades to Washington.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Squadron Leader Charles Kingsford-Smith and his ocean flyers will go to Washington to meet President Hoover Monday in the biggest plane in America.

They originally planned to fly to the Capital in the Southern Cross, tri-motored ship in which Kingsford-Smith has crossed both Atlantic and Pacific and almost ringed the world, but it was decided to leave the old ship in the hands of mechanics preparing it for the flight to Oakland, Cal., which probably will begin Wednesday and which will be non-stop unless the flyers decide to stop at Chicago.

Anthony H. G. Fokker, designer of the Southern Cross, placed at Kingsford-Smith's disposal the 32-passenger plane of the same make, the largest air transport in the country. It was not announced whether the ocean flyer would pilot the air giant himself, but it was thought he would take the controls for at least a part of the trip.

Kingsford-Smith returned today by air from Schenectady, where he talked by short wave radio with his mother and other relatives and friends 10,000 miles away in Australia. He told his mother that he was through flying over oceans, but that he intended to fly home from London in order to get back more quickly to her and to his fiancee, with whom he talked by telephone from this city last night.

There were reports today that Kingsford-Smith's crew, Evert Van Dyk, J. Patrick Saul and John Stannage, were planning to fly back across the Atlantic, but the flyers themselves denied this. All will go to England by steamer, leaving behind them their famous plane, which will be sold after it reaches Oakland, completing its two-year journey around the world

KING BAGGOT SUED BY WIFE

LO SANGELES, Cal., June 28.—King Baggot, veteran of the movies, was sued for divorce today by Ruth Baggot. She charged desertion and nonsupport since Oct. 30, 1926.

Mrs. Baggot asked for custody of their 16-year-old son, Robert, and indicated a property settlement was effected before the film actor left her four years ago. They had been married 18 years.

MERGER INITIATIVE PETITIONS TO BE FILED THURSDAY

7000 More Signatures Than Needed to Place Amendment on Ballot Are Obtained.

Initiative petitions with approximately 7000 signatures more than the minimum required to have placed on the ballot at the November elections an amendment which will enable St. Louis and St. Louis County to merge, will be filed with the Secretary of State Thursday.

A delegation representing the City and County Metropolitan Development Committee and Chambers of Commerce of the city and county, will go to Jefferson City to be present when the petitions are filed.

Signatures of 60,562 voters were attached to the petitions. The vote will not be on any specific merger plan, but on an amendment which will enable the merger to proceed under any plan which may be approved.

PRAISES BALCHEN'S WORK WITH BYRD

Dr. Gould Says Swedish Flyer Was the "Allround Man" of the Expedition.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., June 28.—The "all around man" of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's South Pole expedition, in the estimation of Dr. Laurence Gould, Associate Professor of Geology at the University of Michigan, and second in command of the expedition, was Bernt Balchen, slow-spoken, quiet Swedish aviator who piloted Byrd on his flight over the pole.

"If I were to go on a two-man expedition into the polar regions—or any other place—I would want Bernt Balchen as a companion above any man I have known," Gould said today. "He can do more things—and do them well—than any man I know. He was with me on one flight to the Rockefeller mountains, when we were marooned in a heavy wind. He was such an able person that I did not worry at all."

The polar winds, Prof. Gould said, were extraordinary. At one time, when he and Balchen were attempting to save the marooned plane, a gust of wind swept the two men while they were clinging to struts of the plane.

"The gale blew me into a horizontal position, and held me there for several seconds," Gould said.

One of the sensations of 74-degrees-below-zero weather is hearing one's breath freeze, Gould related.

"Hearing one's breath freeze is a pleasant sound," he said. "It sounds, as nearly as I can describe it, somewhat like the rustling of silk." Gould said the mean annual temperature of the polar region during the stay of the expedition was around 74 degrees below zero.

The high point of the trip for the University of Michigan man was the discovery, in a cache of stones on Mount Betty, of the records of Roald Amundsen, placed there when the explorer was returning from an exploration of the South Polar regions.

Prof. Gould, before leaving for New York to complete records of the expedition, will be married to Miss Margaret Rice. They plan a quiet, home wedding within a week. Miss Rice first met Prof. Gould when she, as a freshman at the university, took a course in geology under his teaching.

Byrd Attends Luncheon Given for His Camera Men.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd returned today from Boston and was honor guests with others of his expedition at a luncheon, given by Paramount-Publix Corporation to the two cameramen who made the pictorial record of the Antarctic adventure. The Photographers were Willard van der Veer and Joseph T. Rucker. The Admiral gave warm praise to them, pointing out that much of their work was done in temperatures of from 50 to 60 degrees below zero. He said the final record was a true picture of the expedition's work. He had feared the picture would be overdramatized, but was glad to find that, if anything, it was underdramatized.

SCOUT WITH BYRD EXPEDITION WELCOMED TO HIS HOME TOWN

Paul A. Siple, Erie, Pa., Honored With Parade and Civic Banquet.

By the Associated Press.

ERIE, Pa., June 28.—Paul A. Siple, Eagle scout, returned today to tell the home folks of his experiences with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd on his expedition in the Antarctic.

Siple, who was chosen from among 280,000 members of the Boy Scouts of America, to accompany Byrd, is now a man, having attained his majority during his absence. Siple was 19 when he left Erie.

"I am more than glad to be back home," Siple told a crowd that gathered at the railroad station to greet him. He had no time for more words, but was whisked away to his home, and talked of his experiences tonight at a civic banquet. James E. West, chief scout executive in the United States, also spoke.

A parade in honor of Siple was held, followed by a Boy Scout jamboree.

PLAN TO RESTORE FUND FOR HOOVER CRIME COMMISSION

Tilson Points Out House May Still Put $250,000 Instead of $50,000 in Deficiency Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—President Hoover's decision to use private funds for the Law Enforcement Commission's investigation was attacked as illegal in the House today while a plan was being formulated to restore a $250,000 item to the deficiency bill Monday for the continuation of the work.

Representative La Guardia (Rep.), New York, charged that the law prohibited acceptance of private funds for the operation of a Government agency. La Guardia's point of order caused the item for expenses of the commission to be stricken in house.

Almost at the same time, Representative Mead (Dem.), New York, introduced a resolution to require the President or Chairman George W. Wickersham of the commission to report to the clerk of the House the amounts and names of contributors.

In the meantime, the House and Senate conferrees, considering the second deficiency bill, calling for an outlay of $80,000,000 to cover contingencies in Government departments, deferred action until Monday. The measure includes the $50,000 placed in the bill by the Senate for a study of prohibition, instead of the general survey of law enforcement which the President wishes.

House Can Restore Fund.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the Republican leader, announced to the House that before considering the conference report it would be possible for it to appropriate the $250,000 recommended by Mr. Hoover, but that the fund could not be raised by the conferees above the $50,000 allowed by the Senate.

While the administration leaders were reluctant to discuss their plans it was learned efforts also were to be made by dry leaders to broaden the scope of inquiry to all law enforcement instead of only prohibition. In questioning the right of the President to have the investigation made with private funds, LaGuardia said that if the President made the statement that he would take that course, "then he knows more about engineering than he knows about the law of the land, and I would most respectfully suggest to President Hoover that before he makes any statement or any plans about using or asking for private funds to finance a public commission, he familiarize himself with the revised stautes of the United States."

"But these commissioners are not officers of the Government," interjected Representative Ramyeyer (Rep.) Iowa.

Applies to President.

"But the President of the United States is, and if those commissioners operate under appropriation of Congress, whether it is $1 or $50,000, they cannot spend in excess of their appropriation," replied La Guardia.

Representative Celler (Dem.), New York, charged in a statement that President Hoover's purpose to procure private funds for the commission was "ill advised, if not illegal," and added it was "but one step to the election of a super-government composed of a coterie of rich men who would be willing to set up funds at the President's disposal to do the very thing that Congress refuses to do."

THOMAS F. RYAN ESTATE ESTIMATED AT $125,000,000

It Will Be the Second Largest Ever Taxed in New York, It Is Reported.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The New York Times says the estate left by the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, financier, is estimated at a gross value of about $125,000,000. The estimate is based on completion of Federal and State inheritance tax reports for filing.

The estate of Mr. Ryan, who died Nov. 23, 1928, will be the second largest to be taxed in New York, and probably in the country, the Times says. It was exceeded only, the paper says, by the $178,893,655 net estate of the late Payne Whitney. The inheritance tax to New York State on the estimated value of the Ryan estate would be about $10,000,000.

The financier's representatives are said to have valued his stock holdings at $115,000,000, tobacco shares exceeding those of railroads and utility companies.

BASS PROTECTION BILL PASSED

U. S. Measure Prohibits Shipments Forbidden by State Law.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Congressional action on a Senate bill to strengthen existing laws regulating interstate traffic in black bass was concluded today with the adoption by the House of a conference report. The bill now goes to the President.

It would make it a Federal offense to deliver or knowingly receive black bass for transportation contrary to a state law prohibiting their removal from the state, or knowingly to purchase or receive the illegally transported fish.

STALIN VICTORIOUS BEFORE CONGRESS OF COMMUNISTS

Soviet Leader Is Cheered by 2000 Delegates of All Union Party After Seven-Hour Speech.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, June 28. — Joseph Stalin today won a complete victory in the Sixteenth Congress of the All Union Communist Party, which opened yesterday.

At the end of an exhausting seven-hour speech, during which the Communist chieftain declared the party never had been so strongly united around its Central Committee as at present, the 2000 delegates stood to give their leader a vociferous ovation.

"There is no fully formed united opposition in this hall which would dare openly to align itself against the policies of the party," Stalin shouted.

His words were taken as a warning to Bukharin, Rykoff, Tomsky, other Right Wingers and the Trotzky followers, who might attempt to challenge the Central Committee and its chief.

Stalin looked surprisingly well and vigorous despite his recent illness and the enormous burden of work he has been carrying. He spoke with his old-time energy, enthusiasm and agressiveness.

The convention was held in the luxurious National Opera House whose glittering golden velvet boxes were occupied in other days by Russia's aristocracy, all now either dead or refugees in foreign lands.

"The present economic crisis throughout the world," Stalin said, "intensifies the struggle between France and Italy for Northern Africa and for control of the Mediterranean Sea. Increased hostility between the United States and Japan over the Pacific is unavoidable. The political system built by the Versailles treaty continues to press down upon Europe and the whole capitalistic world.

"Capitalistic countries stand behind the Chinese generals who are waging civil war because this war is needed by capitalistic countries in order to enslave China completely.

"The national movement for freedom in India and Indo-China is being replaced by a national war against imperialism. The situation there now is most favorable for communistic parties.

"Preparations for war against the Soviet Union by the capitalistic powers are becoming more intense, but our defenses have grown in proportion to our economic growth and we are prepared."

The remainder of the speech discussed internal problems and gains. He said Russia was changing rapidly from an agrarian to an industrial nation.

SUSPECT SHOOTS SHERIFF AND HIGHWAY PATROLMAN

Man Resisting Arrest at Robinson, Ill., Knocked Unconscious Before Being Taken Into Custody.

ROBINSON, Ill., June 29—After being shot twice by a man whom he was attempting to arrest, Sheriff C. H. Wallace of Crawford County, knocked the man unconscious tonight and took him into custody. A State Highway Patrolman, who accompanied the sheriff, also was wounded.

The prisoner, J. E. Firestone, of Los Angeles, Cal., is in jail, with a fractured skull. Two of his teeth also were knocked out by a blow from the sheriff's blackjack.

On information that Firestone had a stolen Ford coupe at the home of Harry Dee, here, Sheriff Wallace and Fred Schroeder, highway patrolman, went to Dee's house. Sheriff Wallace put his hand on Firestone's shoulder to arrest him, and the man jerked out a revolver and fired at the sheriff's stomach.

He then aimed a second shot at Wallace's head. Schroeder seized the weapon, and with his hand across the muzzle, jerked the pistol down just as Firestone pulled the trigger. The bullet went through the patrolman's hand, shattering a bone, and struck the sheriff in the left leg, causing a slight injury.

Wallace then struck the suspect with a blackjack, knocking out two teeth and fracturing Firestone's skull. A bullet was removed at the Robinson hospital from the sheriff's left side. The sheriff was able to return to his home. Schroeder, however, remained at the hospital and physicians feared he might lose his right hand.

Firestone had a Ford sedan which Sheriff Wallace confiscated.

WATCHMAN HURT IN HOLDUP

Henry Bruemmer Attacked by Two Negroes in Brick Yard.

Henry Bruemmer, a watchman for the Hydraulic Press Brick Co., was struck on the head with a pistol by one of two armed Negroes who halted him as he was making his rounds of the brick yard at Kingshighway boulevard and McRee avenue last night. He suffered lacerations of the scalp.

After taking 15 cents from Bruemmer, the Negroes searched the office of the brick company, but obtained nothing.

EXTORTIONISTS ELUDE POSSE AT CAPE GIRARDEAU

Plot to Secure $7500 From Three Prominent Citizens Following Threatening Letters Fails.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Ju 28.—Extortionists, who attempt to obtain $7500 from three prom nent Cape Girardeau citizen eluded a posse of policemen, deputy sheriffs, constables and citize early today, escaping in an automobile under fire of sub-machin guns and sawed-off shotguns.

Last Tuesday George Meyer, former County Collector, and Harr Himmelberger, lumber deale r ceived anonymous letters demanding $2500 from each under threat of death. Both were directed t signify their intention of paying th money through brief statement published in the local newspape The name of the third man threatened was not made public.

Following publication of their intention to pay, Meyers and Himmelberger each received a seco letter of directions as follows: Eac was to drive his car in the direction of St. Louis, Meyer to depa at 11 o'clock last night and Himmelberger 15 minuets later. Th right headlight on Meyer's car wa to be marked with red, and a headlight on Himmelberger's car to painted yellow.

The extortionists directed Meye and Himmelberger to drive unt they saw a green electric light a a box beside the highway. Meye was to place a package of curren in the box and continue on to S Louis. Himmelberger, after depositing his $2500, was directed return home.

The machines, with Deputies the wheels and other officers hidden inside, set out at the appointed hour. At a point three mi north of the Castor River the driver of the first car saw the gree light and stopped, depositing dummy package in a box near th light. He then continued north fo several hundred yards and the officers took up positions along th highway.

The second machine arrived the light, the driver leaving a package in the box, and turning, drov for a short distance as directed. Officers from both machines the closed in on the point where th box and light had been and discovered that both had been remove An automobile was driven from th woods and the driver put on spe and escaped in the direction Cape Girardeau under fire from th posse.

Several hours later three arm men in an automobile were arre ed near Marble Hill. 'Blossom Time' at Opera

Musical Romance of Franz Schubert's Life Comes to the Forest Park Theater With a Special Cast Headed By John Charles Gilbert — Piece is One of the Greatest Hits in History of the Show Business.

FRANZ SCHUBERT, is the hero of "Blossom Time," which will be presented at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park tomorrow night. Municipal Opera has assembled a cast of singing artists especially for this production. In that cast appear six members of the Franz Schubert Centennial "Blossom Time" company, while surrounding them is a group of New York favorites among whom are artists of international reputation. Tonight "The New Moon" sails across the stage of the theater in Forest Park for the last time this season, with its cargo of girls and tunes.

Two years ago the world celebrated the centenary of the death of Peter Franz Schubert, who in life had poverty for his bed-fellow, who in death left "a quantity of old music" which the appraisers valued at $1.75, but which, after 102 years, the world esteems as a priceless heritage of melody.

Throughout the world every singer sang Schubert songs. Every symphony orchestra played his symphonies. Every recitalist programmed some piece of his piano music.

That Peter Franz Schubert is the hero of "Blossom Time." And one of the important tributes in the course of that centennial celebration was provided by a special company at a special production of that world famous operetta. The "Blossom Time" which Municipal Opera will present is a Centennial production—magnified and glorified. It is produced by Milton I. Shubert, new general productions manager for Municipal Opera, but who, two years ago, was chosen because of his feeling for music and romance to create the special centennial production.

It has in its cast John Charles Gilbert and Genevieve Naegele, respectively the Schubert and the Mitzi of the Centennial cast, together with Nell Jewell, who plays Bellabruna, and with three other members of the centennial company in minor roles. It has in addition such strengthening figures in its ensemble as Leonard Ceeley, the English tenor, who sings Baron Schober, and Hal Forde, the London comedian, who is cast as the Viennese court jeweler, Kranz.

No other opera, not even "The Merry Widow," has so great a record of popularity as "Blossom Time." Its success is not only international. It has been heard to the ends of the earth. That is because of the music. Music by Sigmund Romberg, indeed, but fundamentally the music of Franz Schubert. For so deeply saturated in Schubertiana was Romberg that a study of his score reveals in one phrase of eight bars as many as 34 suggestions of Schubert's lovely melodies.

* * * *

SCHUBERT. Viennese of the Viennese, who introduced into the music of Europe the fascinating rhythms and colors of Hungarian music, was naturally enough a musical patron saint of Romberg, himself a Hungarian by birth and who grew up and was educated in Vienna in the great tradition of operetta there.

"Blossom Time" was first produced in Vienna in 1914, with an original book by N. M. Willner and H. Reichert and with music from Schubert by H. Berte. It was launched with success just before the war and continued to run both in Vienna and Berlin, as well as in Budapest and throughout the Balkans during that entire struggle. Later it was presented in London to run three years. For American presentation the late Dorothy Donnelly adapted the book and lyrics, and Romberg composed his own brilliant score. It ran for four years in New York, often in the course of that time being presented by two companies offering the same work at the same time on Broadway. It has been continuously presented in the United States for nine years. Meantime there have been three revivals in London, and annually it has been presented in both Vienna and Berlin. St. Louis has seen and heard it seven different times—the Centennial presentation being the best remembered one because of its beauty.

"Blossom Time" is a fascinating interweaving of fact and fiction. Through it move Franz Schubert and a group of friends of whom there is historical record—Baron von Schober, Von Schwind, the poet, Vogl, the opera tenor who won a first hearing for the real Schubert's songs, La Bellabruna, prima donna of the Viennese opera, Count Sharntoff, and others. Mingling with these actual figures from history are other—Kranz, the flirtatious court jeweler, with his ample wife and his three lovely daughters, Mitzi, Kitzl, and Fritzi. Mitzi with her loveliness and beauty has captured the heart of the composer. He is represented as a shy genius, who, to paraphrase the epigram on Goldsmith "sings like an angel, but talks like poor Poll." While he is seeking courage to tell his love he discovers that Mitzi is being wooed by his best friend Baron von Schober. In the end Schubert stands silent while the other wins the

Franz Schubert The Man and the Hero of an Opera

How the Real and Fictional Characters Were Reconciled For 'Blossom Time.'

By JOHN CHARLES GILBERT.

Mr. Gilbert, who plays the role of the great composer Franz Schubert in Municipal Opera's brilliant revival of "Blossom Time" next week, herein tells of Schubert the man and Schubert, the operetta's hero, and how an artist must reconcile the two in his stage portrait.

TO one who has been familiar from childhood with the exquisite music of Franz Schubert the role of the composer in the charming but fictional romance of "Blossom Time" presents enormous difficulties in interpretation. For Schubert, the composer, lived as a man and an artist, a vivid sort of life. He emerges from the biographies as a virile, strong character. And yet he had, unquestionably, another side; the delicate, fragile side, so often expressed in his melodies. And particularly in the melodies which are the basis of Sigmund Romberg's score for "Blossom Time." There were no historic Mitzi, Fritzi and Kitzi, though many of the other characters in "Blossom Time" are real: And there was no romance between Schubert and the daughter of the Viennese court jeweler. Yet without question the fictional story of "Blossom Time"—the charming romance which is the basis of the operetta is an artistic interpretation of the spirit of the Schubert music which is the basis of its score. So that when you play the role of Schubert, it becomes necessary to weld the two, the Schubert of fiction and the Schubert of historic fact into a whole—and yet a whole that is in keeping with the Schubert melodies.

It chances that John Charles Gilbert is but my stage name. The real name is Russian. For generations in Russia my ancestors were musicians. My father is a teacher of piano in Chicago. Naturally I began my music studies under him. And dad is a great lover of Schubert. I suppose I wasn't more than 8 years old when I was playing a simplified version of the "Moment Musicale" as part of my work under him. Other Schubert things followed. It may show what a Schubert devotee he is when I say that there was a period in Chicago a couple of years ago when every one of his students was at work on a bit of Schubertiana. Or it may only serve to tell you that I was playing in "Blossom Time" in Chicago that week and my father was just a little proud of his boy.

I WAS born in Minneapolis. Then my family decided to return to Russia. At 6 I came back with them to Chicago where my father settled. I began to sing in a choir in the Orthodox Russian Church.

With Byrd at South Pole

Pictures of Great Adventure Make One of the Most Entertaining Films of the Year—Tragedy, Humor and Fine Photography Combined in This Permanent Record of What Befell Antarctic Expedition.

By FERD GOTTLIEB.

ACRES and acres of ice and snow, more than the camera's eye ever before looked upon, are on view this week at the Missouri Theater, and that alone should be sufficient to put over any motion picture in these sweltering days of the current St. Louis heat wave. But this movie has much more to offer than frapped scenery, attractive as such frigid vistas will be just now to a heat-wilted citizenry. For it is the long-awaited official film of the Byrd antarctic expedition, and a most thrilling and absorbing picture it proves to be.

For nearly two years the public has been reading about the Byrd party's activities. By proxy it has shared the hardships and triumphs of Byrd's intrepid band through the moving accounts transmitted over the radio by that first-class writing man, Russell Owen. Now the camera's record supplements the written word in a connected visual account of what these explorers did while resident on the "immense ice-cap with a question mark over it," as Admiral Byrd succinctly describes Antarctica.

"With Byrd at the South Pole" presents the expedition from the moment of its taking off in the bark, City of New York, to the departure from Little America for the New Zealand base and home. All the interesting details the public has been reading about and picturing in its mental eye are here made real—building the little colony on the great Ross barrier, digging in for the winter, life in the camp, preparing for the invasion of Antarctica's unknown interior, the sledge parties, the airplane flights, the mighty glaciers, the bleak mountains and finally the Pole itself.

THERE have been many other polar expeditions, but most of them were in a day when the explorers sailed off into the wastes and were not heard from for a year or two. Finally they returned, their story became a nine-days' wonder and their record was embalmed in a fat book, destined to gather dust as a seldom consulted work of reference. With the Byrd party it was different. Through the radio, its every move was known to the world. And now comes this magnificent motion picture record of what befell the expedition and what it accomplished.

Although this is primarily an adventure story, the motif is not stressed to an extent that produces monotony. The film has everything that a good program picture needs—drama, humor, pathos, human interest, photographic artistry.

The picture is concerned mainly with the daily doings of 42 icebound men, yet it does not lack a plot, for man's combat with the elements and the forces of nature is one of the elemental dramatic situations. There is drama from the very beginning, when sweeping storms at sea fall upon the sturdy square-rigger. There is suspense in the building of Little America in the teeth of an Antarctic blizzard. There is rising action in the departure of the base ship as winter approaches, leaving the party marooned on the barrier, 2300 miles from the nearest human habitation, with only its landmarks, the three radio masts, to afford contact with the outside world.

Although the expedition was not primarily for the purpose of flying to the South Pole, the editors of the film have shown good judgment in building the action around this episode and making of the flight the picture's climax. Other accomplishments may be more appreciated by the scientific world, but the polar flight carries more of the spectacular and the photographable. For example, it is outside the realm of the camera as yet to show a radio wave bouncing off the Heaviside layer. Nor would the process of Antarctic map-making, the weird jiggling of a compass needle, the

Art League to Resume Annual Drama Contest

THE St. Louis Art League announces the resumption of its annual drama competitions, originating in 1917 and held for four consecutive years thereafter, but interrupted by the post-war depression which affected all Little Theater activities.

The folowing prizes will be awarded: First award, for a full length play, $200; second award, $100. First award for a one-act play, $100; second award, $50. As an additional incentive to the playwrights, the prize winning plays, if of sufficient merit, will be produced in the spring as part of the Art League Festival. If any one of them has sufficient quality it will be entered by the Art League in the Belasco Cup tournament next May. Plays not winning prizes but of interest from one point of view or another will be read before audiences as part of the Art League programs for next season, as was done in the former competitions.

Any plays brought out in the competition which seem of general appeal will be brought to the attention of the Little Theater groups throughout the country. A bureau is to be established and the plays will be advertised and distributed either in manuscript or published form.

Manuscripts must be sent to the drama committee of the St. Louis Art League, 325 Locust street, not later than Jan. 1, 1931. Manuscripts must be signed by a nom de plume and accompanied by a sealed envelope bearing this name and enclosing the name of the writer. Writers may send more than one manuscript. Adaptations will be admitted if accompanied by the written consent of the author of the original. Residents of St. Louis and environs are eligible. Mrs. William Flewellyn Saunders is chairman of the drama committee.

Screen Colony Goes In for Tap Dances

TAP dancing is Hollywood's most popular form of recreation and exercise.

Schools of the dance in the film colony now resound with the buck and wing triples and slaps of many ambitious amateurs.

According to David Bennett, dance director, 70 per cent of the players are taking instruction in tap dancing.

Some of the skillful "tappers" are Jeanette MacDonald, Mitzi Green, Nancy Carroll, Jack Oakie, Lillian Roth, Mary Brian, Skeets Gallagher and Maurice Chevalier.

"Tap dancing," states Bennett, "is used more than any other form of chorus routine for motion pictures because it synchronizes with sound requirements. Many of the stars are studying tap work to enable them to take part in productions that include dancing roles. However, the health and reducing benefits of tap dancing are probably the fundamental reason for the present rage."

Hollywood Goes Broadway

"The King of Jazz" is Grand and Expensive, but Dull and Humorless—"All Quiet" Doing a Big Business All Over Country—Missouri Returns to Vaudeville Next Friday—Fox Satisfied With Price Slash Results

By DON H. THOMPSON

THE boys in Hollerwood can't keep away from Broadway. There is a glamour about Ziegfeld, Carroll and the other big-time musical producers that, sooner or later, lures all movie mill foremen to their doom. As soon as a company makes enough money from real pictures that have plots, its master minds buy a lot of tinny tunes, sign up a regiment of tap dancers and set out to show the world how a revue should be put on.

The latest offender is Universal and its product is called "The King of Jazz," with Paul Whiteman, the portly fiddle and horn man, as the star. This opus, or whatever it was the press agent called it, actually cost a fortune. It is really very grand and expensive. There are miles of colored cloth, plenty of imposing stairways, enough singers to reach from here to Boston, hundreds of pretty girls and all that sort of thing but the net result is dull and humorless.

The whole affair suffers from delusions of grandeur and Gen. Whiteman, himself, will never excite the population. His band is good, of course, but aside from that our hero is on a par with the rest of the show—just big.

Somehow, it can't be done. At least it hasn't been done to date. The talking pictures have not produced a single revue that was within a mile of the standard set by the legitimate stage. Why? We give it up. The pictures have the money and the talent but there seems to be something about a revue that needs the services of flesh-and-blood persons. Perhaps it's because you can't see the piccolo player pick his teeth.

* * * *

THE truth of the matter is that motion pictures, to be successful, must MOVE. The first great popularity of the talking films was not due primarily to the fact that they were audible. It was due to the fact that they were a novelty. And now that the interest in the General Electric Company is wearing off, audiences are demanding something better than nine reels of rehashed vaudeville acts, even though all the men wear red plush pants and the ladies have rubies in their hair.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," now entering its third week at the Shubert-Rialto, is scoring a tremendous box office hit because it came into a market at the moment when all our celluloid cathedrals were glutted with adenoidal theme songs. "All Quiet" has a story and tells it. From start to finish it MOVES. The interest never wavers. The fact that it is audible is secondary.

The wise-crackers of Hollywood hooted when Junior Laemmle announced that he would make "All Quiet" as near like the book as possible. It was called "Junior's End" and other unkind things but now that the coin is clinking into box offices all over the land, young Mr. Laemmle is a great man in the movie mill.

The joke of it is that Junior also made "The King of Jazz."

* * * *

THE Paul Whiteman picture was shown at the Ambassador the other day for the benefit (that's what they call it) of the Skouras managers and press agents. As it wound along its beautiful but dumb way, groans of dismay arose from the small audience. When it was all over a coroner's inquest was held. We don't know what transpired but the King was suddenly yanked out of the Ambassador for this week and "Golden Dawn" was substituted. Perhaps you will never have a chance to see this grand revue. And then again, perhaps we are too optimistic.

* * * *

NEXT Friday the Missouri will go vaudeville again in an effort to compete more seriously with the Fox and the St. Louis. Robert Alton, who trained the original Missouri Rockets, has been brought back from Hollywood to direct the presentations. The bill for the opening week will include Wally Vernon, a St. Louis favorite; Al Gordon and his dogs, Uhlis and Clark, dancers; Danny and Eddy, and the Missouri Quartet. New vaudeville will be provided each week, but the chorus and the quartet will be a regular

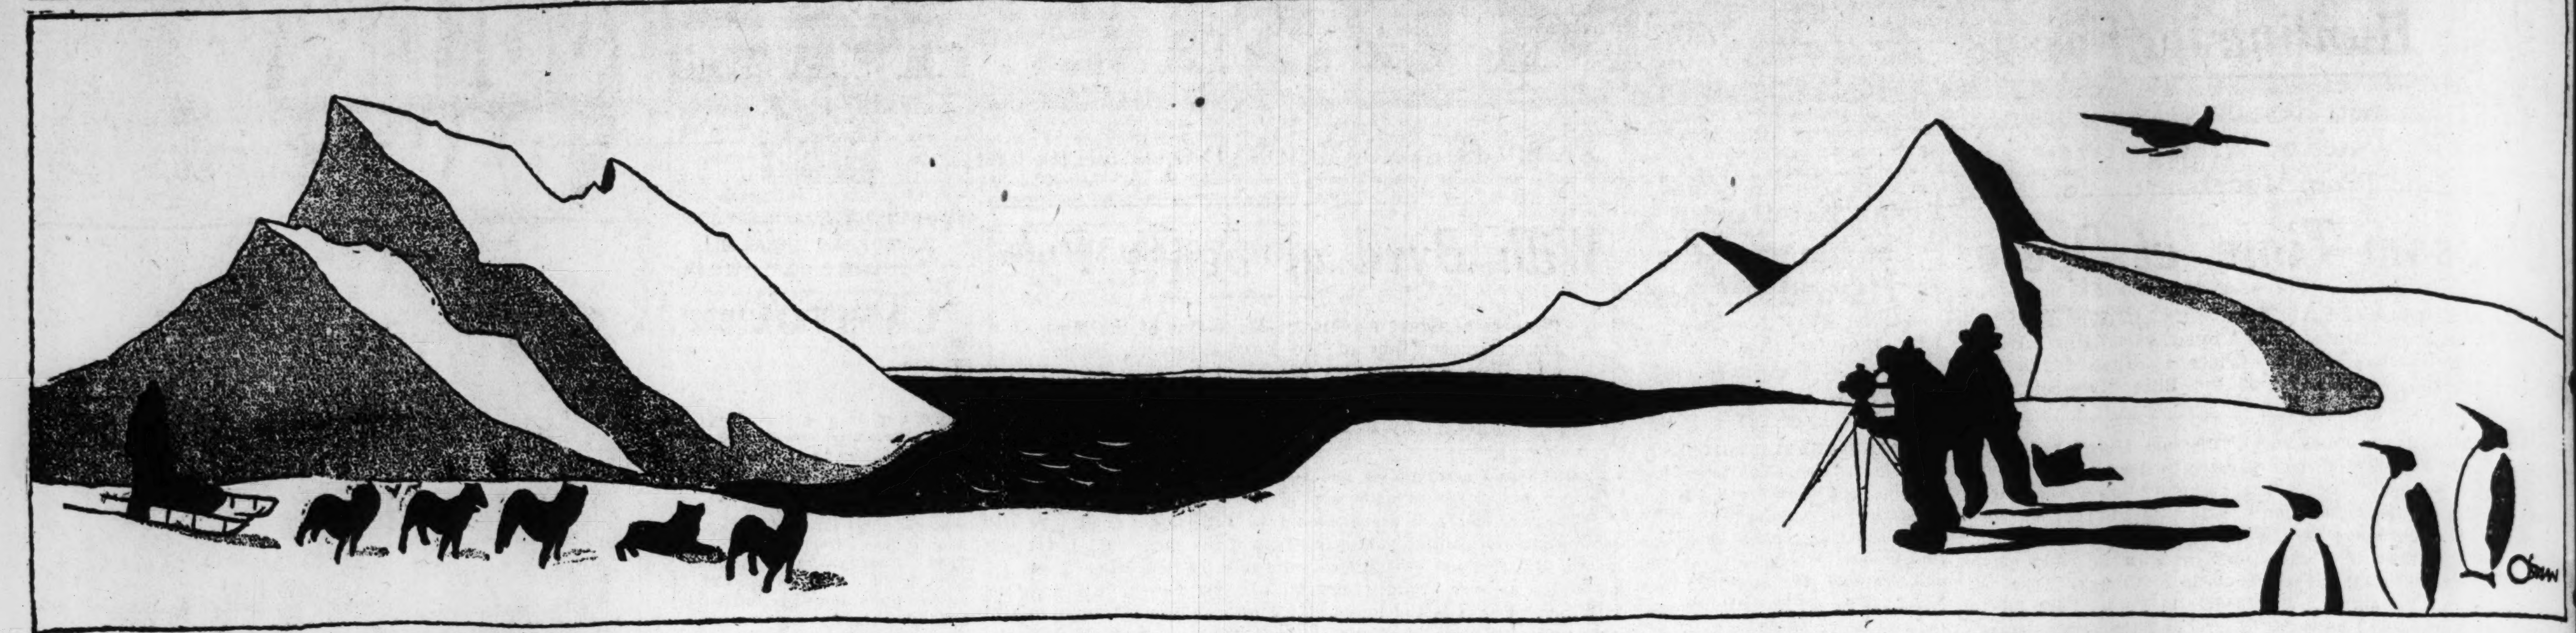
An Artist's Impression of Byrd's Picture of Life Near The South Pole



DAY BY DAY —IN— NEW YORK

THESE trivialities are dashed off on a liner hesitating at Plymouth, England. Through a port hole one sees the famous sea port through a misty fog. The air is thick with sea-gulls screaming their eerie cry and dipping to the water now and then for refuse from the ship. No other bird is half so graceful in the opinion of this observer. Their eye-sight, too, is remarkable. They are able to sight the red funnels of a liner at sea long before they may be seen by a telescope. There are legends that often a gull has followed a ship entirely across the ocean—and when one does sailors regard it as an omen of ill luck.

lovely lady and then pours forth in beautiful music the story of his "Lost Lenore."

John Charles Gilbert, who sings the role of Schubert in Municipal Opera's production, was discovered on the grand opera stage in Italy, a young artist just winning his first triumphs as the Duke in "Rigoletto" when he was offered the "Blossom Time" role. Voice and magnetism combined with a physique and a personality admirably fitted to the role to win for the then unknown singer such an offer to head the Centennial company. His characterization of the composer was outstanding and won for him the place on Municipal Opera's stage. So, too, was the Mitzi of Genevieve Naegele in the Centennial cast one of outstanding distinction among the many Mitzis who had preceded her, and her sprightliness, her hearty, her charm of voice and her ingratiating presence are welcome additions to the special St. Louis cast. Nell Jewell, as the brilliant and vivid Bellabruna, is another who distinguished herself in the Centennial cast, of which Bob Long, Edgar Hunt and J. Gordon Sellwood, who have important if minor characterizations next week, are also members. Leonard Ceeley brings a magnetic personality as well as a beauty of voice to his role of the lucky-at-love Baron von Schober, while Hal Forde whose clever caricature is the basis of delightful fun-making, will appear in the role of the pompous pater familias Kranz, who genially keeps one eye upon the virtue of his daughters and the other open wide for lack of that same virtue elsewhere.

The completed cast is:

Franz Schubert	John Charles Gilbert
Mitzi	Genevieve Naegele
Fritzi	Clarice Bruere
Kitzi	Doris Patston
Baron von Schober	Leonard Ceeley
Count Sharntoff	James Moore
Bellabruna	Nell Jewell
Kranz	Hal Forde
Mrs. Kranz	Belle Sylvia
Vogl	John Clarke
Kupelweiser	Robert Long
Von Schwind	Edward Hill
Erkman	J. Gordon Selwood
Binder	Edgar Hunt
Hanse, a violinist	Louis Druzhinsky
Greta	Rita Marks
Novotny	Frederick Persson

Municipal Opera following "Blossom Time" will offer a spectacular scenic production of Franz Lehar's beautiful operetta, "Alone at Last," in which John Charles Thomas made his greatest success. It contains the most beautiful music ever written by the composer of "The Merry Widow," and has a modern romantic story centering about adventures in climbing the Jungfrau in the Swiss Alps. The three scenes in which music and action arrive at a tremendous climax occur in the ascent in a snowstorm to the Jungfrau's very peak. The operetta will be presented with a notable cast of singers and players.

THE price war in St. Louis continues upon its merry way with the Skouras Brothers looking a bit grim, but still hanging on to the old tariff. The management of the Fox insists that it is well pleased with the response to its slash in admission charges. During the week of Oct. 3, the Fox had Will Rogers in "They Had to See Paris." At 75 cents top, 42,700 persons paid $31,910 to see the man from Oklahoma do his stuff. For the week of June 13, Rogers returned in "So This Is London," and at a 50 cent top, 71,400 persons paid $29,320 to see him. Taking into consideration changed business conditions, the Fox people believe that they have bolstered their cash register with the new scale.

Down at Loew's the lowered prices are also having a good effect. Lillian Gish in a mediocre picture had a very good week there.

To Duplicate City.

Nome, Alaska, as it was 30 years ago in the days of the gold rush, will be duplicated in detail for the forthcoming film production of Rex Beach's "The Spoilers," in which Gary Cooper will be starred.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

Los Angeles Is Last Stronghold of Silent Pictures

Movies Being Given As Plays by Several Companies

HOLLYWOOD, June 28.

EXOTIC old Main street in Los Angeles is the city's last stronghold of the silent movie, but the talkie gradually is encroaching even there, shooing from their nickleodeon retreats the celluloid ghosts of yesterday's stars.

Skeets Gallagher

Main street in spirit is as far removed from Spring, a block distant, as Tijuana is from Boston. Spring is the city's Wall street, Main is its East Side and Latin Quarter.

Main is a permanent carnival, an old-world pageant, the Broadway of the humble. There Mexicans, Filipinos, Japanese, the jobless and job-seeking, sailors, laborers, panhandlers, all picturesque characters, predominate in the pedestrian parade.

THERE you can buy (in Spanish or English) a flopjoint bed for a quarter, a pair of shoes for two-ninety-five. Mexican music and books and phonograph records—there is a new waltz called "Lupe Velez."

You can buy movie magazines and newspapers in Spanish, get tattooed at innumerable shops, spend pennies in one peep-show arcade after another, take in a gaudy burlesque or a Mexican vaudeville, hearken to the "health lecture" of a befeathered Indian selling herbs, or enjoy the leather-lunged wheedling of a cheaply witty auctioneer.

AND in keeping with the cheapness of the setting, the movie houses offer "double feature" programs for a nickle, a dime, and even the talkie houses ask only fifteen cents.

These Main street nickelodeons, with their jangling pianos and screeching phonographs, their garish lithographed posters, used to prolong the screen lives of many Hollywood stars long after their real fame had passed. They still do, to some extent. Tom Tyler, the former Western star, rides on a flickering screen in two musty houses, and Thelma Todd and "Skeets" Gallagher, both of whom have succeeded in talkies, may be seen in pictures made for the silent screen.

RADICALLY as the microphone has changed the method of movie rehearsals, more sweeping changes are in the offing.

In pre-talkie times only a few minutes of preparatory pantomime were required, and the director's megaphone took care of the rest while the cameras ground.

Then the microphone silenced the megaphone, and rehearsals took on new importance. Players had to prepare not only to deliver speeches properly, but to proceed independently of the director once the filming had begun.

At first talkie scenes were rehearsed one by one, but now the entire cast usually assembles weeks or days before production starts and goes through the entire script as though preparing for a stage play.

NOW a new company is presenting its pictures in play form before filming. Presentation in small-town theaters near Los Angeles is expected not only to perfect the actors in their lines, and to give the authors opportunity to edit their dialogue, but also to note audience reactions before filming.

Louise Fazenda

It is seldom that a script goes into production as written.

This is especially true of comic scenes, wherein players who are "gag-artists" as well as actors, like Joe E. Brown, Louise Fazenda, Ken Murray, Ned Sparks, Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton and Eddie Foy, often improvise new lines during rehearsals, with script girls at hand to insert the additions.

ANOTHER link between screen and stage, though with a different purpose, is the new "Talking Picture Play Market," housed in a tiny theater.

Their new plays are to be presented anonymously to give unknown and established playwrights equal footing, and movie executives, producers and directors may bid for screen rights.

The idea had its inception in a stock company which could not afford the steep prices asked for established plays, and consequently asked contributions of new works.

MOVIE divorces this summer will far outnumber movie marriages. Betty Compson and James Cruze, Colleen Moore and John McCormick, Billie Dove and Irvin Willat, Joseph Schildkraut and Elise Bartlett, Lila Lee and James Kirkwood, Directors Josef von Sternberg and Ernst Lubitsch, all have been principals in divorces or separations—and now Lina Basquette and Peverel Marley, married only a year, have separated.

THE capture of Hollywood by stage actors has brought about a peculiar situation which may lead to an equalizing immigration of screen folk headed for Broadway.

The producers have been importing stage talent so prodigally that many old-time actors, even though they were on the stage before entering pictures, are finding it difficult to obtain work.

Billie Dove

The sad part of it is that some of these old-timers, besides their long years of screen experience, had careers on the stage longer even than those of the newcomers from the footlights.

THE screen's most talented linguists have no voices at all, strange as that may seem.

Furthermore, the talkies continue to make things difficult for the extras. That is, for one class of extra, which in time should disappear.

He is the eternal hanger-on, who has no special qualifications for picture work, for talkies especially, and whose only hope of employment is the infrequent mob scene.

In silent pictures this type could find plenty of work, and the fact that he was uneducated, untalented, could not speak distinctly, made little difference.

Today he drifts from one casting office to another, seeking work in vain, and existing in semi-starvation. Eventually the fear of the wolf will drive him to seek more certain employment.

One I met recently had not worked a day in four months. Uncouth and rather picturesque, he had done fairly well in silent pictures, but the talkies had "got" him. He had tried without success to get a steady job.

His enunciation, even discounting his accent, is so poor that the casting directors' indifference seems justified.

THIS year's prize, if any, for the most misleading movie title should go to "The Man From Wyoming." You naturally expect another epic of the open spaces. It's a war story, starring Gary Cooper.

For that matter, Cooper seems never to stay in his native environment. "The Virginian" roamed the far wild west, "The Texan" went to South America, and now this "Man from Wyoming" goes to France.

These players in the two-reel "barkie" series can talk, from the screen, any language known to man, providing someone who knows the tongue can be found in Hollywood.

Gary Cooper

And the barkies, begun as an experiment, have been so successful, especially in foreign countries where the "foreign version" is just as good as the English, that they have taken an important place in the production schedule.

FOR all that, they are still being made on the old wooden stage, relic of the silent screen era, where they had their inception. Because the human voices are "duped in' later, no sound stages are required. But their one silent stage is thoroughly canine in character.

It has its own wardrobe department, its own sets, built to doggish proportions, and its own "dressing rooms,"—exclusive single cages where the stars may recline between scenes, and large "community dressing rooms" where, like human extras, the less exalted pups may congregate. Outside is a long runway where those inclined to exercise may cavort at will.

Jiggs, who was fired for temperment—he asked too much salary—has been taken back now, but he is not alone in stellar temperament. The dogs simply will not "act" unless they're perfectly happy—and they're more unreasonable about it, sometimes, than ever Pola Negri, in her tempers of old, could hope to be.

tabulation of a weather chart or the search for Jurassic fossils on the polar plateau interest us humble laymen in the slightest, important though they may be to the learned savants.

IN DR. GOULD'S flight to the Rockefeller Mountains to make a geological survey the camera registers real thrills, however. A storm comes up while the party is in camp, the plane is wrecked, the radio goes out of commission, and four men are marooned in a rugged and unknown country. Their week's food supply is parceled out. After 11 days of waiting there comes a relief plane from the camp to carry them to safety.

The polar flight itself has even more of the dramatic. After months of planning through the long Antarctic night, the Ford trimotor with four men aboard takes off on the 1600-mile journey. Up to this point the film has borne captions and sound effects with orchestral accompaniment, but here Floyd Gibbons becomes the narrator. This allows the action to sweep along without the interruption of titles, and adds to the tension of such moments as when Admiral Byrd, seeing the craft losing altitude above the menacing Axel Heiberg glacier at the edge of the 10,000-foot polar plateau, must make a swift decision—to dump gasoline or throw food overboard?

By introduction of subtle humorous bits, the action is varied and the tense episodes are never carried over into agony. Solemnly grotesque penguins come on from time to time, furnishing the low comedy relief of the piece. They coast along the ice on their stomachs, rising to stare impolitely at the explorers. There is a one-round encounter between an embattled penguin and Igloo, fox terrier mascot of Admiral Byrd. Again, one of the party's mad wags paints the lily by adding to a penguin's decorous black-and-white costume a dapper little black bow tie. In another shot, Igloo, in pained tolerance, submits to being sewed into a tailored winter outfit, complete even to the boots and a fur neckpiece.

EAGER as is every man to do his stint, the energy and faithfulness of the dogs surpasses them all. In this connection the tragic story of Spy — aging, sick and tottering wreck of a team leader—shows a dog carrying on to the last ounce of his strength. Far out on the trail, he overtakes the hurrying sledges after being left at the base as an invalid. But he can go no farther. So this gallant soldier is taken a little way apart, there is a pistol report, and the unwilling executioner of mercy trudges back alone.

There are scenes in the bunk houses, buried deep in the drifting snow, where the men receive radio news of home and families, and proudly show to each other photographs of their youngsters. A striking interior view is the motley, bearded crew gathered about the loud speaker, hearing mile-by-mile reports of their comrades speeding toward the big icicle at the southern end of the world. And a marvelous bit of photography shows the company lined up outside the shacks after 125 days of darkness, waiting for the first glimpse of a pale and sickly sun, running up the colors with a cheer when it peeps above the icy horizon.

As the story unfolds on the screen, one is likely to forget the immense difficulties that had to be overcome to make possible its presentation in pictures. To Willard Van der Veer and Joseph T. Rucker, Paramount camera men, must go the primary credit for the film's success. They have produced photographic effects so artistic and pictures so clear that one can well imagine this to be a studio production, with directors and lighting experts grouped on the sidelines.

THERE are striking views of sea and ice, snow and mountains. There are close-ups of whales blowing, of seals at play, of dogs in ice-hewn kennels. No verbal or written description could portray the awful magnitude of that towering ice cliff, the Ross barrier, as these pictures show it, with men, pygmy-like, running about at its base. And always there is ice—vast miles of it, mighty icebergs, packs of floating cakes, blocks of ice used as building material, an icy armor plating on the windjammer, ice in furrowed ridges and immense glaciers.

The work itself was done under the most unfavorable conditions. The precious cans of film first withstood the heat of the tropics, then the chill of Antarctica, then a return trip across the equator. Cameras froze in the intense cold, ice formed on lenses, fingers were frost-bitten in turning cranks. The pictures were developed in makeshift dark rooms, carved in the ice tunnels.

Rucker and Van der Veer brought back 30 miles of film, more than 158,000 feet of it. This vast footage had to be cut down to 8000 feet. And to the film cutters who accomplished this tremendous task must go the final bit of credit for the picture. They did their editing intelligently, with the result that the completed picture is a comprehensive account of the expedition's work while their address was Little America, Bay of Whales, Ross Sea, Antarctica. The Byrd party was the most ambitious of polar expeditions, and the pictorial record it brought back is in keeping with its scope.

Harold Lloyd Back At Work on Comedy

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 28.

COMPLETELY recovered from the appendix attack which caused him to suspend production, Harold Lloyd has returned to work on his current talking picture, "Feet First."

Because of the comedian's enforced layoff, there has been a revision of production plans, which now sets his departure for Honolulu this week.

The same people who were originally engaged to accompany the comedian will be included in the Hawaiian trip, among them being Barbara Kent, leading woman; Robert McWade, and Lillianne Leighton.

FRANZ SCHUBERT THE MAN AND THE HERO OF AN OPERA

Then father started me at the piano. And I began to know and love Schubert. Of course my voice broke when I was about 14. But I still wanted to sing. I waited. It came back. I went to Francisco Daddi of the Chicago Civic Opera. "I want you to teach me how to sing," I said. He heard me. "You come back in two years," he said. "And meantime, if you don't sing a note for anyone, don't go to any other teacher, don't even sing for your own pleasure, I'll teach you." I took him at his word.

That was his idea of discipline. He didn't want a pupil who would not do just what he said. That's just what I did. I was back at the end of the two years. I could hardly wait. He didn't remember me. But I recalled the incident and told him what I'd done. And he took me as his pupil.

A great teacher and a great artist. He taught me how to sing. He taught me an artist's humility. I hope. He taught me how to guard against indisposition and all the other things that might interefere with a sincere and an honest performance in song.

But I'm not going to try to tell you that he taught me to sing Schubert songs. He didn't. He taught me opera repertory—and how to sing. And he taught me when I did sing Schubert to sing him in English—because I don't know German. He taught me not to sing in a language I could not understand.

STILL, I loved the Schubert songs. The Schubert music. I entered Northwestern University, specialized in languages, the while I took every course in music offered there. Russians are natural linguists. I loved the romance languages and I suppose I thought of them as a means to an opera career. But instead, I found myself an instructor in romance languages at Northwestern. Much of my reading was done in biography. I had a passion for it. I began to read musical biography especially. Because, for all that I seemed doomed to spend my life among the professor folk I still loved music. Occasionally I sang a recital. But the way to a career seemed blocked.

When finally it opened through Milton I. Shubert, it developed in entirely an unexpected way. Instead of concertizing or singing grand opera I had the opportunity to play Franz Schubert in "Blossom Time." Shubert baptized me as it were. I had sung many hits from the Gilbert and Sullivan repertory and took the name of Gilbert for a stage name, because an American couldn't be expected to pronounce my own. And Milton Shubert decided to call me John Charles.

Then came the difficulty of reconciling the historic Franz Shubert with the hero of "Blossom Time."

The real Franz Schubert was an artistic aristocrat. He wasn't shy. He could talk brilliantly, and did, not only before men, but in mixed company. But only when he thought the conversation worth the while. When he was discussing art or artistic things. He didn't have the time to waste—for his work itself is proof of that—on things that didn't count to his one end—the beauty of music. He had strict artistic-standards, both in the use he made of his time and in his approach to his work. He was no trickster in art, no poseur, no sycophant. And he would argue valiantly for those standards. But when conversation became chit-chat, he silently withdrew into himself.

As for women. He had friendships and even love affairs. It is quite evident. His letters, his life, both are evidence of this. Whereas the Schubert of the opera, while a charming and delightful character, is a stammerer—Lawrence Gilman once called Schubert "the divine stammerer"—shy, diffident, always retiring. Well, there I was, faced by the problem of how to make the two men one.

Schoolmates Together.

Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Thelma Todd, who were film students together at a picture school in 1926, are in the same picture for the first time since these days, both having parts in the all-technicolor production of the musical comedy, "Follow Through."

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

By W. R. LIPMAN.

NEW YORK, June 28.

AS you watch George M. Cohan play the role of Johnny Farrell, the three-a-day hoofer in "The Song and Dance Man," you recall the recent remark of Dr. Albert Einstein, who said that only space is real and time is not. Where, you wonder, are the years and their marks? Eight years have past since last you saw George M. Cohan breathe life into the role of Johnny Farrell and yet it might have been but yesterday.

There are more gray hairs—there are, perhaps, fewer hairs above the Cohanesque brow than when Johnny Farrell first stepped out of the manuscript that Cohan penned, but even this is unconvincing.

So, just now George M. Cohan and his revival of "The Song and Dance Man" at the Fulton Theater constitutes the most important news along Broadway's rialto. Even were the season going full swing, it would still be news, for Cohan, grandest of all American actors, cannot step out upon the boards hereabouts without luring glowing adjectives and superlatives from jaded critics and drama commentators. Nor is this a form of idol worship or homage being paid to a myth. Cohan is real. Cohan is as much a part of today's theater as any youthful star you may name. I have said that Cohan is America's greatest actor. I have been corrected. I have argued. I have fought. I still say it. As far as I'm concerned all George M. Cohan has to do is make his entrance. I don't care what he does after that. He's got me. I'm sunk. But, in all fairness to you (and especially if you differ on this point) I should explain that I am not a dramatic critic. In the loose language of newspaperdom, I'm a theatrical reporter. There's a difference and I'm glad of it. I don't want to be a critic. But to get back to George M. Cohan and "The Song and Dance Man" —— BETTER plays have been written since Cohan turned this one out, but "The Song and Dance Man" seems closest to its author. After all, it's a story of the theater, of the heartbreaks and disappointments that befall the mummer, and of all people who should know more about that than Mr. Cohan? The story is old in theme, concerning as it does a poverty-stricken and discouraged actor who, despite the fact that he knows he is no good, cannot leave the stage. Mr. Cohan knows that very well, indeed. He himself couldn't leave his beloved theater if he tried. And the theater couldn't leave him. And so, with Mr. Cohan playing a role which is as nearly a self-portrait as possible (with the exception that he is neither broken down nor yet discouraged), it makes for a most pleasant, sentimental evening in the theater.

Jesuit Priest's Adventures In New Mexico's San Juan Basin Hunting for Fossils

The Rev. T. Emmett Reynolds Once Obtained Drinking Water by Wringing Wet Sand From Undershirt.

A young Jesuit priest, working for his doctor's degree at the University of California, made three trips of exporation into the San Juan basin in New Mexico. He read his office by a light fed by his automobile battery, shot at "rattlers" with a single-action pistol, said mass in full vestments, alone, among rocks that carried messages of prehistoric days, kicked at scorpions, once obtained drinking water by wringing wet sand through his undershirt, dug for fossils.

He obtained the second best collection of fossil remains of the Paleocene age, which are now on their way to St. Louis University for permanent exhibition, and helped materially to round out the story of the age of the first mammals.

He is the Rev. T. Emmett Reynolds, S. J., a native of Collinsville, attached to St. Louis University. Father Reynolds was in St. Louis for a few days prior to departing for New York, where he will assist Dr. W. D. Matthew, paleontologist of the University of California, in the aligning of material for a book on fossils. Father Reynolds will also assist in classifying fossils for the American Museum of Natural History.

Fossils of Small Life.

The fossils obtained by Father Reynolds are not, as might be expected, those of huge beasts. Rather they are bones and teeth of things no larger than a terrier dog and mark the transition of life from the reptilian to the mammalian stage. Roughly speaking, the Paleocene age was 50,000,000 years ago.

"The importance of these fossils," Father Reynolds said, "is that they fill out another page in animal evolution. They are not of a type to surprise paleontologists any more than the discovery of a new element is a surprise to chemists. Just as in chemistry, where, from the known elements in the atomic scale the nature of undiscovered elements is forecast, so the nature of fossils never seen by man can be accurately described by those who have studied life forms on either side of the hidden fossil.

"Dr. Matthew, with whom I did a lot of work, drew a picture of what one of my skulls would look like before I broke away the rock which encrusted it. It had lain there 50,000,000 years, and he, by applying the principle of evolution to his knowledge of allied eras, sketched it without seeing it. It turned out to be a beautiful intermediate, or straddle form, just as he had drawn it. It is that of a progenitor of the insect eaters, found today only in Cuba and Madagascar.

Confirms a Theory.

The findings also tend to confirm the tritubercular theory, a valuable guide to the paleontologist, which assumes that tooth structure started with a single cone, as is found in all reptiles, and developed through the addition of cusps. With the development of three cusps, chewing was possible.

"We bank heavily on tooth structure," Father Reynolds said, "and it is lucky for use because the teeth are invariably the best preserved of all fossil bits. The cost of a tooth of the Paleocene age is $20 or more. One of my fossil skulls has an unusually large nuumber of teeth. It is a weird-looking collection and unusual in its relative completeness. The American Museum of Natural History in New York has a somewhat better layout and the University of California has a few scattered fragments.

"It would surprise a layman to know just how well science has catalogued the periods of animal evolution. A mountain in the San Juan region will be so exposed that one can detect the lines of demarkation of different ages like the layers on a cake. Dig in the layers and you will always find the right fossil in the right pigeonhole, no higher in development than it should be.

Incessant Sandstorms.

The Sun Juan region is difficult to work, Father Reynolds pointed out, chiefly because of the incessant sand storms.

"To get to the basin," Father Reynolds continued, "we had to drive along the trails until they ended and then strike out across the desert, 'sage-hopping,' we call it. The land is devoid of vegetation, except for clumps of sagebrush, hot as blazes and full of scorpions, rattlesnakes and an occasional Canadian lynx. Some of the rattlers actually looked as fat as stovepipes. Every night I practiced firing at tin cans to be prepared for three vicious members.

"We had to be careful of the quicksand in the arroyos. It was much like driving over a frozen body of water, hard enough to support a car if you drove fast enough, but ready to swallow the whole machine if you came to a stop. Many machines have been lost this way. It is not so dangerous to the passengers. They can just step out and walk away on the hard surface.

"This quicksand underneath is, naturally, very wet and proved my salvation when I got lost once. I was working with a group from the American Museum and went off fossil hunting on my own hook and couldn't find the way back. The heat was terrific and drove me temporarily 'cuckoo.' After a few hours my throat was terribly parched. I still had sense enough to know there was wet sand under the hard crust. By chopping a hole in the crust, I scooped out the sand and wrung it through my undershirt. I soon had enough water to take a bath in, had I wanted one. It was full of gypsum and not much of a beverage back in civilization but a great treat to a man almost dying of thirst.

Lost for Three Nights.

"But I was still lost and continued that way for three nights. Later I was told the others lit big fires for me at night but I never saw them. On the third night I heard a strange whining noise and prepared to repel a new type of wild animal. It was a Dodge truck swishing around in the sand trying to reach me. I had had no food but wasn't hungry. You don't want to eat in that hot place. Water is the main requirement."

Describing the methods of the fossil hunter, Father Reynolds said he did not dig deeply but walked or crawled over the bed of a stream, or washed and eroded valley, looking for skeletal remains cropping out. Specimens are carefully removed, shellacked to prevent disintegration, wrapped in burlap and shipped to a trained geology student, who removes extraneous matter with a needle, leaving the cleaned specimen. The specimen is not the original material that was part of a living animal, as "mineral replacement" and chemical and physical of earth substances have brought about a complete substitution. Yet the replacement is so perfect, Father Reynolds can tell from looking at the skull which side chewed the most food, how old it is and whether it had cut all its teeth.

Scholarships to College for Deaf.

Scholarships to Gallaudet College for the Deaf at Washington were awarded to Miss Marie Goetter and Miss Evelyn Preble, each 16 years old, who were graduated this year from Gallaudet School for the Deaf, 1694 South Grand boulevard. At the close of the last school term 65 students were enrolled at Gallaudet School. Twelve are taking advanced courses this summer.

U. S. TO CHECK UP ST. LOUIS CENSUS

Agrees to Send Field Supervisor After Hearing Chamber of Commerce Complaint.

Charging that the preliminary official announcement of the population of St. Louis, given as 818,252 by the local census officials, is approximately 40,000 short of the actual number of residents of the city, the Chamber of Commerce has obtained from the Census Bureau at Washington an order for a field supervisor to come here and remain until the census is completed and its accuracy is determined to the satisfaction of the chamber.

A delegation of chamber representatives presented a brief, setting out claims of inaccuracy and omission in the enumeration, to Secretary of Commerce Lamont at Washington Friday. Among those in the group was John G. Lonsdale, president of Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. and of the American Bankers' Association. A conference with Director Steuart of the Census Bureau and members of his staff followed.

All the evidence the chamber has been able to collect indicates, the brief said, that the enumeration here was not well down.

The preliminary announcement, which did not take into account ordinary revision of the records after the first count or the names of some additional residents furnished by the chamber, was "disappointingly low," the brief said. It offered figures to substantiate the claim that 40,000 citizens were missed, as the result of a canvas by the chamber recently of a cross section of the city from the river to the western line, in a strip just north of the central area.

The cross section entered 12 wards and numerous census enumeration districts. In 61 city blocks there, 833 persons said they were missed in the census, or an average of 13.7 persons to the block, without deductions for non-residential areas. This average, applied to the 6200 blocks in the city and cut in half to allow for duplications and various other factors, gives the approximation that 40,000 residents were skipped thoughout the city.

COMMITTEES NAMED FOR BYRD'S VISIT

Plans for Reception on July 12 Most Elaborate Since Lindbergh's Home-Coming.

Appointment of committees to plan various phases of the St. Louis welcome for Rear Admiral Byrd and the St. Louis members of his South Pole expedition, Capt. Ashley McKinley and Ensign Thomas B. Mulroy, was announced yesterday by M. E. Holderness, general chairman.

Plans for the reception of the guests, to visit St. Louis July 12, are the most elaborate since the home-coming of Col. Lindbergh. A large reception committee has been formed by the Chamber of Commerce.

Arrangements have been made to invite members of the Chamber and the St. Louis chapter of National Sojourners, and others outstanding in business and civic affairs, to a luncheon where the explorers will be honor guests. Invitations will be mailed tomorrow night.

Thomas N. Dysart was named chairman and A. O. Wilson, vice chairman of the Finance Committee; R. Fullerton Place, chairman, and John Ring Jr., vice chairman of the Publicity Committee; Robert L. Brooks, chairman, and Robert E. Lee, vice chairman, of the Arrangements Committee; Albert Bond Lambert, chairman, and Col. J. A. Paegelow, vice chairman of the Aviation Committee; B. P. Owen, chairman, and Thomas G. Harkins, vice chairman of the Luncheon Reception Committee.

Flag-Raising Ceremony.

A flag raising ceremony will be held at the Lutheran Altenheim, 8721 Halls Ferry road, at 4 p. m. today. A religious service will precede the ceremony, which is in connection with the annual summer festival.

CURTISS-STEINBERG AIRPORT DEDICATED

Red Jackson Makes First Parachute Leap as One of Stunts Program Repeated Today.

Four thousand spectators saw the aerial show dedicating Curtiss-Steinberg Airport, south of East St. Louis, yesterday afternoon. The performance, in which Dale (Red) Jackson, endurance flyer, is a leading participant, will be repeated this afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock.

One of the chief thrills of the afternoon was given when Jackson, Leroy McGrady and Leo Allen, each in an individual plane, and in triangular formation, dived from an altitude of 2500 feet with screaming open motors, to an apparently imminent collision, within 100 feet of the earth, then neatly moved out of each other's way and regained their altitude.

Jackson and Allen gave exhibition of upside-down flying, and Jackson made an outside loop, one of the most difficult of air maneuvers, using a special carburetor equipment.

McGrady demonstrated the landing of the Curtiss Tanager, winner of the $100,000 Guggenheim Foundation prize for a safety plane. The landing was almost in a stalling position. Jackson and his two companions held a 10-mile race, remaining at all times within sight of the 570-acre field. Jackson demonstrated the Travelair "mystery" ship, capable of a speed of more than 200 miles an hour.

Another demonstration by Jackson and his companions was the flying of three planes tied together by 30-foot cords, without breaking any of the cords or apparently cramping the style of any of the flyers.

Miss Frances Harrell made a series of spins from a 4000-foot altitude to a point near the ground. Four parachute jumps from a Ford T transport plane ended the program. Red Jackson, making his first leap, was one of the jumpers.

Eight army planes from Kansas City, piloted by reserve flying officers, came for the show. The airport is reached by highways from the Free Bridge and by the Waterloo street car line. A 50-cent admission charge is made.

MAYOR VETOES ANTI-NOISE BILL AS TOO BROAD IN SCOPE

Would Interfere With Necessary Public Work, Miller Says of Emergency Ordinance.

The anti-noise ordinance passed last week by the Board of Aldermen as an emergency measure was vetoed yesterday by Mayor Miller. As the Board of Aldermen is in adjournment until Sept. 26, the possibility that the bill might be passed over the veto is eliminated for the present.

"After reading this bill I feel it is entirely too broad in its scope," the Mayor said in his veto message. "As it is now drawn, it seems to me that it would interfere with necessary public work and means of transport. There are, of course, many objectionable noises which should be eliminated, but the bill as drawn would work a great hardship in many directions. I think it is unjust to restrict the operation of radios after 9 p. m. without a more concise definition of what sounds can be termed annoying."

The bill defined various types of "unnecessary" noise and forbade the operation of radios "for advertising purposes" from 9 p. m. to 7 a. m. Seven members of the Association of General Contractors called on the Mayor Friday to protest against the bill on the ground that it would interfere with steam shovels, dredges, riveting and other construction operations.

YALE AND BISHOP MUSEUM ENTER INTO NEW AGREEMENT

Exchange of Authorities With Honolulu Research Institution Is Arranged.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 28.—A new agreement which will bring about a closer affiliation between Yale University and the Bishop Museum of Honolulu, was announced today by President James Rowland Angell of Yale.

To bring this about, President Angell said, the director of the museum will be a member of the Yale graduate school faculty assigned to duty in Hawaii and each year the museum will send to Yale a visiting professor to give instruction and direct research in the problems of the Pacific area.

A standing committee of the graduate school will undertake to supervise the research program of the museum. Fellowships will be awarded annually to students to engage in research in Hawaii.

The Bernice P. Bishop Museum has given much attention in the past to the native races of the Pacific and studies have led to the discovery of ruins of great antiquity in the Mariana Islands, between Hawaii and the Philippines.

BYRD'S DOG MASCOT KILLED

Terrier Was Run Over by Auto in Montclair, N. J.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., June 28.—Schnuck is dead.

The fox-terrier mascot of Admiral Byrd's flagship in his Antarctic expedition was run over and killed last night. Police buried the dog without recognizing him. But Mrs. Ralph Shropshire, wife of the hydrographer of the expedition, identified his collar today. Schnuck was picked up in New Zealand by the Byrd expedition.

MADONNA AND CHILD.

"The Light of the World" Is Said to Have Brought a Small Fortune to C. Bosseron Chambers.

C. BOSSERON CHAMBERS, prominent in recent years as a painter of religious subjects, has gained his greatest measure of popular approval with "The Light of the World" which, with others of his works, is reproduced on this page. Through the wide sale by its publishers, "The Light of the World" is said to have netted him a comfortable fortune. "The Little Flower," also reproduced here, is another which has enjoyed wide popularity among the devotees of the Saint of the Roses.

Mr. Chambers was born in St. Louis and was educated at St. Louis University, his earlier training having been gained in the grammar and preparatory schools connected with that institution. He began his study of art under Louis Schultz, of the Berlin Royal Academy. He spent six years in Berlin, studying later under Aleis Hrdliczka of the Royal Academy of Vienna. Six more years were devoted to study under Johannes Schumacher of Dresden.

Prior to 1916. Mr. Chambers devoted himself chiefly to figure compositions and portraits, many of which have been exhibited in St. Louis. In 1916 he established himself in the Carnegie Studios in Carnegie Hall, New York, and since that time has concerned himself for the most part with the painting of religious subjects. Besides those reproduced here, the list includes an "Ecce Homo," a "Mary Magdalene" at the foot of the cross, a new version of "St. Anthony of Padua," "Golgotha" and "St. Joseph and Infant Jesus." The latter and "The Madonna of the Sacred Coat," shown here, are celebrated altar pieces of St. Ignatius Church in Chicago.

THEIR LIVES HAVE BEEN ONE ROMANCE AFTER ANOTHER

The Lovely Louise Cromwell Brooks-MacArthur, Society Favorite, and Lionel Atwill, Eminent Actor, in Marriage Ceremony Which Was the Third for Each.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

AND SO the Great Lover of the stage has married the lovely society queen. That is, Lionel Atwill, noted Belasco star, has just wedded Mrs. Cromwell MacArthur, charming heartbreaker of high society, whose list of husbands and devoted admirers already included millionaires and national heroes.

Both Lionel Atwill and his bride had been married and divorced twice before making this newest bid of theirs for happiness. Atwill, sophisticated stage star and target for the admiration of thousands of women, could not withstand the glamour of the beautiful Mrs. MacArthur, who had numbered Generals, Senators and Ambassadors among her admirers, while her previous husbands included the scarcely less noted General Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff of the Rainbow Division in France, and Walter Brooks Jr., millionaire society man.

It was a case of the dazzler bedazzled. Atwill, as a stage star, was adored by the countless women who saw him play such gilded parts as the title roles of "Deburau" and "The Grand Duke." But Mrs. MacArthur represented in real life the kind of heroine who appears in plays of high society—a polished, lovely lady who might have stepped from the pages of Michael Arlen. Atwill had acted in society romances, but Mrs. MacArthur had lived them.

General and Mrs. MacArthur on their honeymoon at Palm Beach.

When Major MacArthur was appointed military censor on the Mexican border.

Lionel Atwill and his bride.

The climax of the Atwill-MacArthur romance would have made an excellent motion picture—if the camera man and talkie apparatus operators could have kept up with the newly-married pair.

The wedding ceremony was performed at Mrs. MacArthur's magnificent estate, Eccleston, in Green Spring Valley. The tall, gold-crested gates of the estate were closed and sentries stationed to see that no unwanted person gained admittance.

THE Rev. Edgar C. Powers, pastor of the Towson Episcopal Church of Baltimore, officiated, with the bride being given away by her brother, James H. R. Cromwell of New York, while Walter Livingston Oakley, also of New York, acted as best man. A group of close friends witnessed the wedding, but it is believed that the bride's mother, the famous Philadelphia social leader, Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, did not attend her daughter's marriage.

On top of the news of the marriage came a tip that steam was being raised on the bride's yacht, which is rather torridly named "Mammy." Reporters and camera men hot-footed it off to the Maryland Yacht Club to await the honeymooners. Atwill's yacht was tied nearby, undergoing dismantling and repairs, but something was doing on the Mammy yacht all right. The crew was bustling around and provisions, card tables and other paraphernalia were being brought aboard.

Officers of the Maryland Yacht Club, of which Mrs. Atwill is the only woman member, decided to give the distinguished couple a big send-off. The saluting cannon was loaded and preparations made to dip flags, give cheers and all the rest of it.

Everyone settled down to wait for the advent of the honeymooners. But the hours went by and twilight changed to the murk of night. And no bride and groom.

Major MacArthur in 1918.

Edward T. Stotesbury as King Louis at a costume ball, with Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall of Washington as Madame Du Barry. They won first prizes.

Atwill as Napoleon, two years ago.

At last came the murmur of a big foreign motor. Everyone jumped to attention. But they were taken aback when the big limousine disgorged only two occupants, Miss Louise Brooks, the daughter of Mrs. MacArthur, and a slim youth in the uniform of an Annapolis cadet. The pair went aboard the Mammy. Miss Brooks gave some low-voiced instructions to the captain. Then the couple whizzed away in the automobile, smiling enigmatically at all inquiries.

The Mammy's motors roared and off she went out into Chesapeake Bay, evidently to keep a rendezvous with the bride and bridegroom. The yacht-club members, determined to do the nice thing, anyway, fired a salute as the boat slid away from the pier. One bunch of reporters hopped into a speed boat and followed the Mammy four miles out into Chesapeake Bay before giving up the chase.

So the honeymooners embarked somehow and somewhere on the deep waters of matrimony and Chesapeake Bay.

"Third time out" is lucky, according to tradition. Since this is the third marriage for both Mr. and Mrs. Atwill, they may very reasonably hope for much happiness, despite stormy and unsuccessful previous marriages. Lionel Atwill is now 45 and his wife acknowledged 36 summers on the marriage license application. Nor is the romance a sudden one. The pair have been good friends, it is said, for about three years and became engaged about Christmas time of last year. At that time Atwill acknowledged the romance and the "possibility of marriage."

Both have had plenty of experience in the divorce courts. But experience should teach them how to avoid the marital pitfalls that entrap matrimonial tyros. Mrs. Atwill has tried both Paris and Reno divorces.

Her first divorce was secured from Walter Brooks in Paris some years ago. So neatly and successfully were the marital shackles cracked off that Mrs. Atwill may be said to have been among the American pioneers who established the fashion of Paris divorces.

By the time her marriage to General MacArthur had gone aground, the Paris divorces were no longer the pleasant and unembarrassing proposition of some years before. French authorities had become meddlesome and American news hounds watched the French divorce courts as closely as they did those of America. So Mrs. MacArthur betook herself to Reno and secured a 100 per cent American divorce. That was in June a year ago. The divorce was secured in the most discreet fashion. Mrs. MacArthur did not make her identity known until the day the decree was signed and her only complaint was the very general and diplomatic one that she and General MacArthur were of different temperaments.

SOME years ago Mrs. Atwill, as Louise Cromwell, was one of the loveliest and most prominent of Washington debutantes. Mrs. Oliver Cromwell, her mother, stood second to none in Washington society, and she later consolidated and augmented her social position by a brilliant marriage to Edward T. Stotesbury, Philadelphia banker and associate of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Thus Louise Cromwell as a young girl moved in the most brilliant circles of both Washington and Philadelphia. Her elaborate debut in Washington occasioned much comment. It

SWAPPING HORSES as an ART

"Bill" Meadows of San Antonio Supplies Polo Ponies to St. Louisans

(Taking Last Year's Model as Part Payment) to the Profit of Both Parties.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Staff

IF ANYBODY on earth can recognize that buying look, it is Bill Meadows, past master of the devious art of horse trading. And this fellow certainly had it. He had singled out a handsome bay (Meadows later described it as "a fat son of a gun worth about $6") in the string of remounts which Bill led out for him at the St. Louis Country Club stables.

"I gave $50," drawled the Texan, "and I'll take $50."

"Why, what's wrong with him? You asked $350 for that plug I looked at the other day."

"Everything's wrong with him," Meadows replied, and he specified at length. "You want him," he concluded, "just because he's fat.

"All good-looking horses are high-strung, wild, jumpy—'hot' horses. When they get excited they don't know what they're doing, and they don't care.

"Honest horses are short on top and long underneath, with a good, long neck, withers in the middle of the back, knee and hock close to the ground, wide between the ears, a good 'pop' eye, wide in the forehead, a muzzle you can put in your hand——

"And for $1000 I'll tell you the rest of it!"

Meadows meant just what he said, for one of his main interests is the National School of Polo at San Antonio, where he teaches the sons of the wealthy not only how to play polo, but how to select and train a mount.

HE HAS some qualifications as an expert. Success in his curious profession depends almost entirely on his ability to pick horseflesh that can be hammered into the polo-playing combination of fire and steel and ice. And he has been more than moderately successful. The one-time cowpuncher introduced the game into the Lone Star State. San Antonio now has eight fields and 14 teams. He has played polo and sold ponies at virtually every old club in the country. Mounts selected, trained—and sold—by him have won prizes in polo classes at every horse show in St. Louis for years. The "best polo pony in Missouri," selected by the National Polo Association, was "trained by W. D. Meadows." He has brought his string from San Antonio to the St. Louis Country Club every season for 21 years, and has sold, he says, every polo pony bought by the members in that period. Right now there are 40 in the stables.

Almost any afternoon in May or June Meadows can be found at the stables. That is, when he isn't on the polo field or in the west wing of the clubhouse, which has become a natural short cut for him on the way from the field after the Wednesday and Saturday games. It was in the stables that the writer found him.

"This is the only club I ship my string to," he said. "Anybody else who wants one of my ponies has to come down to San Antonio.

"I wouldn't put my string up on the line at no damn club I didn't know," he declared so explosively as to scatter tobacco grains from the brown zig-zag paper with which he was rolling a "real" cigarette. "But these people—the oldest polo outfit in the country except Meadowbrook—aren't looking for free mounts to play for a period or two and then turn back to you. They're gentlemen.

"I've been coming here long enough to know exactly what kind of pony each player needs. When I get back to San Antonio I go to buying right away, and train all winter. And I always keep this club in mind.

"Of course, other players come to my place from Chicago and other places and buy lots of ponies. They stay through the San Antonio tournament, from January to April, and generally they pick up a mount or two from some of the Texas dealers before they go back East.

"A man with a son growing up," he declared, "can't do better than to start him playing polo. A lot of these little snipes do nothing but run around to roadhouses getting their excitement on about two bits a night, except, maybe, when they get into a crap game and drop $1500 or so, and spending the next day telling about 'what a hell of a time I had last night.' If they get out there on that polo field and fight, they'll sweat some of that stuff out of them.

"Look at me. I'm 67 years old, and I can ride with any of 'em on that field right now. I've had this hand broken, this arm, this foot, this leg, this shoulder, this leg—and my skull fractured there.

"Polo makes a man out of you instead of a monkey. And there are so many triple-damned monkeys in this world."

AT 16 Meadows left his ranch home 30 miles south of San Antonio and headed for Tom Green County, to be a real cowpuncher in the most wide open of all the wide open spaces. He was hired at San Angelo to break 40 horses 70 miles from town. His pay was $1 a year, according to age—$3 for a 3-year-old, and so on. He asserts that he fully earned it. With that training he qualified as a cowpuncher on the Half Circle 6 Ranch, a brand carried by 9000 head of cattle between San Angelo and Del Rio.

That was the headquarters of Tom Ketchum and the Blackjack Gang, who robbed trains and stores all the way up into Wyoming until the members were wiped out by shooting or hanging. Meadows and his brother, a cowboy on the ranch of Barry Ketchum, brother of the gang leader, had the task of carrying provisions to the gang, a 14-mile midnight ride, upon a prearranged signal.

Mr. Meadows in action and at ease.

IN 1900 Meadows returned to his home near San Antonio, married and bought a farm. Two years later the boll weevil cleaned him out. He moved into San Antonio with his remaining $100 and began his career as a horse trader. In a year or so he had developed a profitable business, buying thoroughbred horses, cattle and sheep and shipping them to Mexicans who desired to improve the native stock. But he did not get into polo until 1906, when Hugh Drury of the Meadowbrook Club went to San Antonio.

Meadows, who made a daily round of the hotels in search of buyers, met Drury and showed his wares. The noted player wanted to see one or two of Meadows' ponies in action.

"You're a good horseman," he commented. "Ever play polo?" Bill had not, and Drury, who thereafter made a yearly trip to San Antonio, taught him the game. They started others to playing it, and then introduced it in the army at Fort Sam Houston.

"The army didn't have any polo ponies," Meadows related, "until we got Gen. Charles E. Treat to obtain funds to buy messenger horses. They used to send messages by a boy in a buckboard. We bought 20 messenger horses at $100 a head, and every one of them made a good polo pony.

"I bought 506 head of horses for the army on the open market," he added with a touch of pride. "Only man who ever bought horses on the open market for the Government. All the others have to sign contracts."

Through Drury, players about the country began to hear about Bill Meadows of San Antonio. More and more he concentrated on polo ponies. In 1909 he took a string to New York.

"THEY gave me a polo dinner at the old Waldorf-Astoria," he related. "I didn't know anything about such places and had a hard time getting up to the banquet room; came near giving it up and going back. Some of the boys found me and took me up. One of them said: 'You're in New York now, and you can have anything you want.'

"When we got in the room there was eight colored fellows standing behind the chairs in uniform, dignified as Major-Generals. As I sat down one of them drew the chair back.

"'Jerk that chair from under me and I'll break your jaw,' I said. He got me pacified and asked what I wanted. I remembered what the fellow had told me about getting anything I wanted.

"'Biscuit and butter and 'lasses,' I said. 'I haven't tasted a biscuit since I left Texas.' 'Sir,' he said, 'there's not a biscuit in this house.'"

Alex T. Primm was in New York for the international match. Like Samuel C. Davis, Primm was one of the original group whose interest in polo—such that they rode their ponies 20 miles to Bridgeton for the weekly games—led to the organization of St. Louis Country Club. He saw Meadows and his string and liked both. In consequence Meadows brought his remaining ponies here from New York, sold nine and has been shipping here ever since.

"I'm the best buyer in the world, but a poor salesman," Meadows confessed. "I can't sell 'em, but I keep 'em sold. Ponies I sold here 10 years ago are still playing and winning prizes.

"Most people think that polo is an expensive game. It isn't if you know what you're doing. Ignorance is all that's expensive about it.

"A dealer will get three prices from some fool for a fat, round pony not worth an earful of cold water. He runs away or wears himself out in the first season, and the sucker has to buy another mount for the next. That's what makes polo expensive.

"You can play polo with four horses costing $500 to $1000 each. Five is better. And if you want you can pay

The ELEVATOR MAN WAS a BARONET ALL the TIME

But Dick Wolseley Holds on to His Job, Because No Estate or Income Goes With the Title, and He Is Broke.

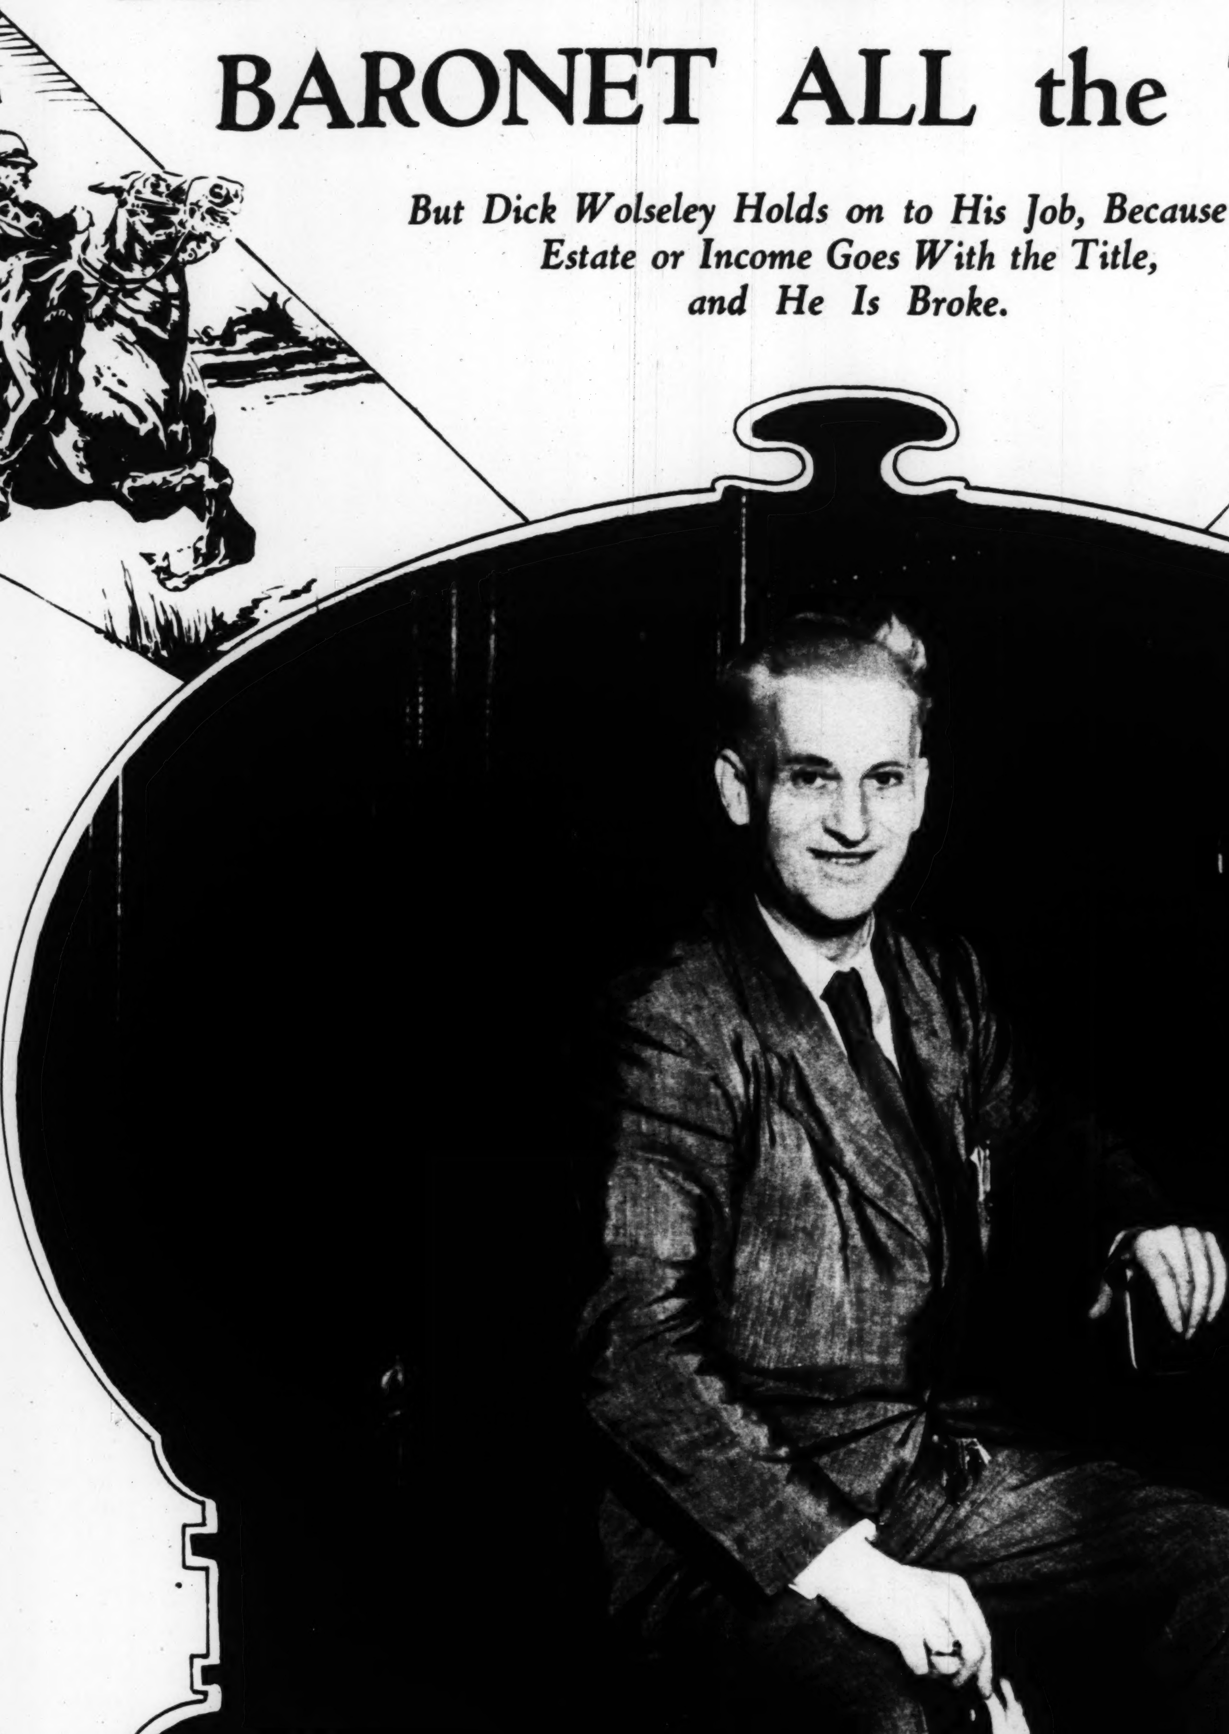
WATERLOO, Iowa.

WHEN the ninth Baronet Wolseley died seven years ago, Reginald Wolseley, his cousin and next in line for the title, kept right on running his elevator in the Blackhawk Building here. He knew of his cousin's death and that he was entitled to a Sir before his name. But he also knew that no estate or income was connected with the title, and he didn't have enough money to live in the manner befitting the tenth Baronet Wolseley—didn't have enough to pay his passage to England, in fact.

So he kept on running the elevator. He has been doing it since he came to Waterloo 12 years ago. It isn't a bad job. He has had worse in the 33 years he has been knocking about Canada and the United States. He has enough leisure to do a good deal of reading in the public library and to confound acquaintances with observations on philosophy and the use of foreign languages.

But he is about to quit his job and go back to England and live as Sir Reginald Beatty Wolseley, after all. Miss Marian Elizabeth Baker of Devonshire, England, whom he knew in his youth, saw to that. She came to Waterloo a few weeks ago and married him. She wants to live in her own country as Lady Wolseley and apparently has enough money to make it possible. She has gone home to make some arrangements about his return, and he expects to follow her soon.



Sir Reginald Beatty Wolseley.

Lady Wolseley.

IT WAS the marriage that brought to light the identity of the elevator operator who went hatless on the street, his white hair flying, and whom Waterloo people considered "a little queer." The efforts of the bride to keep the affair secret had much to do with the disclosure. When she took out a marriage license for herself and Reginald Beatty Wolseley, people didn't know who the bridegroom was. He had always been known here as Richard Wolseley. But she tried to prevent publication of the license and made such a mystery of the wedding that when it took place in the Episcopal Church, May 25, there were persons present who recognized as "Dick" Wolseley, the elevator operator, the man who stood beside her before the clergyman.

So the story came out. "The reason I wanted this kept secret," the new Lady Wolseley explained, "was that it would make it a bit awkward when we got back to England to have people know that Reggie ran a lift."

Waterloo and the rest of the world have learned that Wolseley was a son of the late Cadwallader Brooke Wolseley and Katy Maria Beatty Wolseley, and was born in Donegal County, Ireland, January 31, 1872. Reginald is said to be a cousin to Admiral Earl Beatty and also the late Field Marshal Viscount Wolseley.

Admiral Beatty commanded the British battle cruiser fleet at the battle of Jutland in the World War and later was made commander in chief of the Grand Fleet. In 1919 he became first sea lord, serving until 1927. He married a daughter of the late Marshall Field of Chicago. Field Marshal Wolseley was one of the great British military figures of the nineteenth century. He served with distinction in the Indian mutiny, and commanded the Nile expedition which went to the relief of General Gordon, besieged in Khartum, in 1884—arriving just after the city had fallen. Winning promotion and a title by his services in Egypt and India, he was appointed commander in chief of the British army in 1895 and held the position for five years. He died in 1913.

When Reginald was 12 years old his father died. The title passed to his cousin, Sir Capel Charles Wolseley, in 1890. The estate dwindled and 33 years ago Reginald, then 25, came to America to seek his fortune.

Fortune persistently eluded him. First in Canada, then in the United States, the Englishman tried various occupations without success. At last he came to Waterloo and got the elevator job.

Not very long ago he decided he would like to be a radio announcer. "I am especially fitted for that," he told a friend. "I would be a very good one." But when he applied to the manager of a local station he couldn't even get a tryout, he said.

In 1923 his cousin, the baronet, died, and Reginald's mother wanted him to come home and claim the title. But he didn't have the necessary cash for his fare, and besides, was unwilling to go home a failure. He stuck to his job and said nothing about his title—except once. On that occasion a tenant in the Blackhawk Building invited him into his office for a highball. It was a rainy Sunday and there were few calls for the elevator—fortunately, for calls were unanswered for five hours, while the elevator man, mellowed with repeated highballs, told his companion a good deal of the story of his life. In the telling, he took occasion to relate the history of England, give an outline of ancient and modern religions and hold forth at length on Greek grammar. His confidant never told of the conversation until the Englishman's secret was no longer a secret.

Who's Who has listed Reginald Wolseley as a baronet since 1924, but has not given his address.

LAST November Wolseley's mother died and Miss Baker was with her at the end. The dying woman exacted a promise from the other that she would try to bring Reginald home. In the fulfillment of that promise Miss Baker came to Waterloo and married him. She cashed a draft for £500 here and gave the bridegroom a wrist watch for a wedding present. Both appeared to be very happy about their marriage.

Wolseley evidently enjoyed a bit, too, the publicity that followed the wedding. For a person who had lived obscurely for many years it was rather exciting to be sought out for interviews and photographs, to be called on the telephone from New York, and to be the subject of a cable of inquiry from a London newspaper. And he probably gets some amusement out of knowing that many Waterloo people who have seen him for years doing his humdrum work are saying that they recognized from his speech and manner that he was no ordinary fellow.

When Lady Wolseley left soon after the wedding to sail for England she and her husband had hopes that a library position could be obtained there for the man who had found, in recent years, his greatest pleasure among books. He expects to hear from her about that most any day.

In the meantime, Sir Reginald Beatty Wolseley, Bart., continues to run an elevator.

To MEASURE LIGHT'S SPEED in VACUUM TUBE, ONE MILE LONG

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

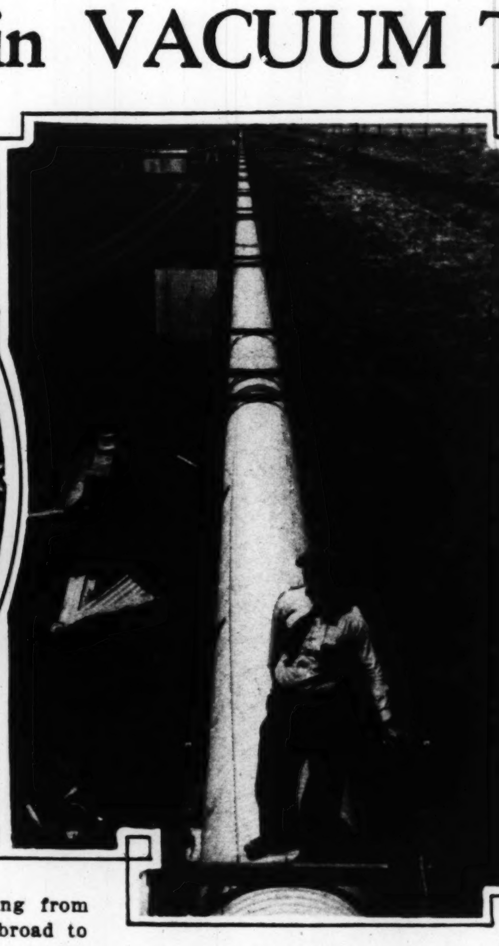
CHICAGO.

ALBERT A. MICHELSON, professor of physics at the University of Chicago, and one of the greatest figures in scientific history, has departed for California to repeat for the final time his famous experiment in the velocity of light. The experiment will be the final phase of a classic effort that began 51 years ago at the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The 77-year-old scientist has made an astonishing recovery from the illness and two operations that threatened his life last autumn. Alert and eager as ever, he anticipates with mild excitement the last act of his famous intellectual adventure.

Though he regards this repetition as the conclusion of that particular study, he plans on his return to the Midway in the autumn to turn to other experiments. By his own request, Prof. Michelson has taken the status of professor-emeritus but, relieved of the duties of active faculty status, he will spend his time in his old laboratory in Ryerson Hall exploring new fields.

Dr. Albert A. Michelson.



View of the long tube, specially built for the experiments.

When he was 26 years old, and an instructor in physics at Annapolis, from which he had just graduated, Prof. Michelson made the experiment in the velocity of light for the first time, to demonstrate to his class of midshipmen how light could be clocked. He devised a new apparatus, and even paid for some of the parts out of his own pocket. Greatly to his astonishment, his figure was more accurate than any that previously had been achieved.

It was then that he decided to become a physicist and, retiring from the naval service, he went abroad to study. Returning in a few years, he began the famous series of experiments which have made him one of the great scientists of all time.

The last time the velocity of light was checked by Prof. Michelson was in 1926. He arrived at a figure of 186,284 miles per second, which scientists were willing to accept, but which the experimenter thought might still be slightly refined.

He arrived at his result by racing a beam of light between two stations 22 miles apart, atop Mount Wilson and San Antonio Peak in California. The distance between the two stations was measured with painstaking care by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the probable error was estimated at but one part in a million. The need for such extreme accuracy is explained by the method of timing the light. Like most of his methods, the process has the merit of simplicity in theory. A beam of light half an inch square was reflected from one face of an eight-sided mirror toward the distant mountain with such precision that it struck a mirror a foot square.

This distant mirror was then so adjusted that the beam returned upon its original path to strike exactly the face of the mirror from which it started.

To make this round trip the light required a very slight fraction of time, about one-forty-four-hundredth of a second. But there was no "about" in Prof. Michelson's method, for he had an ingenious way of measuring the split second of time.

His eight-sided mirror, set on delicate bearings, was revolved by compressed air, so that in the time the light was making the round trip the face from which the light was first reflected was replaced by the next succeeding face. In other words, the mirror made one-eighth of a revolution while the light was traveling 44 miles, the speed of rotation of the mirror being varied until this relation was achieved.

There are methods of determining the speed of rotation of the mirror with great accuracy. When this rate is known the calculation of the speed of light is simple. The speed of light in that particular experiment, was the distance of 44 miles divided by the time required for one-eighth of a rotation of the mirror.

This month Prof. Michelson plans an experiment involving the same fundamental method. But instead of using stations in the open air he will race his beam of light up and down a vacuum tube, made of pipe line, one mile long and 36 inches in diameter. This mile between his mirrors can be measured with an error of less than one-sixteenth of an inch, and can be checked with ease. There is some belief that, despite the accuracy with which the 22-mile distance was measured by the survey, earth movements may have shifted the two stations a foot or more.

Further, corrections for such factors as temperature, pressure and moisture of air will be eliminated by the vacuum tube.

INTERESTING ST. LOUISANS

Dr. Max C. Starkloff

Health Commissioner of St. Louis for 27 Years, Despot by Virtue of His Office, [illegible] Restrictions in Time of Emergency Have Been More Rigid Than Those Employed in Any Other American City — He [illegible] Made This Community the Healthiest Metropolis in the Land.

A NEW FEATURE OF THE POST-DISPATCH SUNDAY MAGAZINE

By JULIUS KLYMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

DR. MAX C. STARKLOFF met harsh and evil days early in his incumbency of the office of Health Commissioner, but they helped to temper him, and thereby to put St. Louis in its enviable place among the cities of the world.

On the afternoon of May 27, 1896, the sky was brooding and melancholy. Then it became more animated. Small, spherical clouds began to scurry through the air. There was an occasional flash of lightning, with its distant, rumbling accompaniment of thunder. A strange, greenish light spread itself above the city. People began to wonder.

Men looked out of the windows of the old city hall at Eleventh and Market streets and shook their heads. They rolled down their shirtsleeves, put on their coats and hats and hurried home. The place was fast becoming deserted. Starkloff, a young man then, heard them hurrying through the building halls. He was moved by the same impulse. But he remembered he was the city Health and Hospital Commissioner. If there was a heavy storm he might be needed.

He was. For in a very few minutes a great twister tore its way through the city, demolishing buildings, tearing down trees, killing and injuring the citizenry. A city ambulance driver ran into his office. The city hospital was down. Starkloff jumped to his feet, ran out of the building. And a flagstaff, snapped in two by the wind, struck him on his right arm, breaking it below the elbow.

The pain was dreadful. But he was Hospital Commissioner, Health Commissioner. His business was at that twisted, broken hospital. He improvised a sling, put his arm through it, got into the ambulance. Out to the hospital he went, his driver cutting wires and debris out of the way to give them passage. At the hospital was chaos. In one ward, locked in by barred doors and windows, were 17 prisoners, sick or wounded. A high wall of brick rose over them, robbed of its support, threatening to crash down on them at any moment. They cried for release.

Starkloff went to their division's door. "Listen," he said, "I'm going to let you out. But there are two things I want to ask you to do. Don't hit me. I'm hurt badly enough already. And get into this ambulance and go to the jail. Don't escape."

He let them out. Not a man attempted to break away.

NOW the young Commissioner hurried back to the heart of the city. There was a vacant building at Eighteenth and Pine streets. He commandeered it, turned it into a hospital, commandeered cots and beds and transport, moved his old patients from the old hospital to the new, set up emergency rooms for the hosts injured by the blow that had left the city only to circle about and strike it again a few minutes later.

He worked through the night and into the morning. He stopped a few minutes then, and had them set his aching arm. Then he kept on, for hours and hours, without rest or sleep.

He has never forgotten those days, he says, the cries of the injured, the chaos, the terror, the confusion. That experience was among the major ones of his life, one of the hardest jobs he ever had to tackle. It came to him when he had been Commissioner but a year.

Now he is in his twenty-seventh year in the Health Commissioner's office—he did not serve from 1903 to 1911—and other major jobs have come his way as the years rolled by. Some were not as spectacular as that of the city's worst tornado. Many were worked out obscurely in office and laboratory. All were not done in the hour of emergency. But they have left their mark on the city's life.

Dr. Starkloff was born in Quincy, Illinois, on December 30, 1859. His father was a physician, Dr. Hugo M. Starkloff, born and educated in Germany, the son of a baron. During the Civil War Dr. Hugo Starkloff held a high medical post with the Union troops, and when the war ended he came to St. Louis. He served the United States as Consul in Bremen, Germany, from 1889 to 1894, where his profession stood him in good stead, for during a cholera epidemic he personally inspected all passengers bound for America from that port, and it is said none of those he passed upon developed the malady.

Max Starkloff attended the St. Louis schools. He received his preparatory education at a military school in Pennsylvania. Then he studied medicine with Dr. John T. Hodgen, dean of the St. Louis Medical College, and received his doctor's degree in 1892 from that institution. He began to practice.

Politics held some interest for him and as he was a good talker he was frequently asked to speak at political meetings. But politics was a side issue. Then in 1893 Cyrus P. Walbridge was elected Mayor. He was a close friend of the Starkloff family and he offered Max the post of Health and Hospital Commissioner. Starkloff refused. Two years later Walbridge again asked young Starkloff to take the job. Starkloff still didn't want it. Besides his private practice he was President of the Board of Pension Examining Surgeons, a Government post that paid well in fees.

But Walbridge insisted, Starkloff considered, and the young physician ended up by resigning his lucrative Government post and accepting the much less remunerative city commissionership.

"When I took it," Dr. Starkloff says, "I expected to serve the remainder of Walbridge's term and then get out of it. And here, 35 years later, I'm still Health Commissioner."

The Health Commissioner of St. Louis holds a potent post. His is the power of a despot. The source of his power lies, simply worded, in the City Charter. The gist of it is that if a nuisance exists the Health Commissioner may abate it. That is an autocratic provision and as such is potentially dangerous. If the power is vested in a steady hand it holds the possibilities of great virtue. Health in a great city, with people living on top of each other, squeezed together on street cars, massed in crowded places, becomes precarious if some communicable illness strikes the city. Then it is that a wise Health Commissioner should have power to act swiftly and vigorously.

JUST such a situation presented itself to Starkloff in the war autumn of 1918.

In September of that year a disease called "Spanish influenza" touched the Atlantic coast, causing death among a high percentage of its sufferers, it spread rapidly and soon became epidemic. It began to roll across the country; before long it was reported in St. Louis.

On October 6 Starkloff, studying the spread of the disease in other cities and in army posts and naval reservations, saw that it would reach the magnitude of an epidemic here within a short time. He called a meeting of the members of the city government, of officers of civic organizations and of the Federal Government, and explained the situation. He told them he would have to act and they agreed.

He set to work. He closed the schools. He closed the churches. He closed all theaters and motion-picture houses. He ordered that no child under 16 be allowed in stores in the downtown district. He ordered business houses to close their establishments at 4:30 p. m. in an effort to lighten the congestion among the city's workers bound for their homes. He ordered the street cars to carry not more than 20 passengers in excess of their seating capacity. He ordered that no lodges or other organizations hold meetings. For he had concluded that influenza was a communicable disease, that it was spread, among other ways, from person to person.

The day he delivered his ultimatum his troubles began. "I looked into my waiting room," he says, "and it was black with people." Protests arose on all sides. "Business was being ruined." "The city was in panic." "Other cities haven't gone to this extreme." "Such measures are unnecessary; they won't stop the spread of the disease." Committees of powerful business organizations waited upon him. Bankers and heads of large stores came to see him. Politicians told him he was going too far.

They all got the same answer. He was the Health Commissioner. It therefore was his business to protect the city's health. He believed his measures were effective. He was sorry, but he could do nothing for them.

And then Henry W. Kiel, then Mayor of St. Louis, called upon him. "Doctor," said the Mayor, "you've overdone it. Understand, I'm behind you. If I thought what you are doing would help the situation I'd say go ahead. But I've been told by responsible persons that your restrictions aren't necessary. You've got to lighten the ban."

"Mr. Mayor," said the Health Commissioner, "you can't do it. And I won't."

The Mayor looked out the window of the doctor's office. He shook his head. And he walked out. What could you do with such a man?

As far as the St. Louis Division of Health knows, no city in America has ever had the lid clamped so tightly upon it as St. Louis did in those hazardous days. Did Starkloff use his autocratic power effectively? Let us look at the records. In a volume on public health, published by a national authority on the subject, figures are given on the influenza epidemic. There is a record of the "excess mortality" in cities for the 10 weeks from September 15 to November 23. "Excess mortality" means this: The expected death rate in a city is figured according to previous statistics. A death rate over that expected normal rate is considered an excess death rate, or "excess mortality." Among the great cities of the land the "excess mortality" showed .69 for Philadelphia, .59 for Pittsburg, .50 for Boston, .30 for New York, .27 for Cleveland. For St. Louis it was .12. St. Louis' excess death rate was the lowest among the leading cities listed.

Physicians are very "ethical" people. They do not like to say yes or no unless they are certain, and that is perfectly correct. Medical men do not "know" what caused this city's rate to be the lowest during those 10 weeks; there are too many possible conditions to figure in. But the fact remains that during the 10 weeks listed Starkloff's ban was enforced for six of those weeks. And the fact remains that when he eased up on the regulations for about two weeks at the end of those six weeks, the influenza cases increased, and when he tightened the lid again there was an immediate decrease. That all may mean something.

The Health Commissioner no longer is in charge of the city's hospital system as he was when Starkloff first took the post 35 years ago. But the Division of Health has become a highly complicated affair since the '90s. It has grown tremendously, for today preventive medicine is as great an object as "cure." The division is divided into various sections: the sanitary section, the communicable-disease section, food inspection, venereal clinic, bacteriological, vital statistics, dental, the municipal nurse section, which includes the highly important work of infant and child welfare—there are 10 of these welfare stations about the city where mothers are instructed in caring for their babies — and the chemical section, including that vital work, milk control.

Public health experts believe the best way to judge the healthfulness of a city is by the death rate among infants under 1 year of age. The general death rate, according to authorities, is misleading. St. Louis, for instance, is regarded as an "old," or average, city. That means the population is divided as to ages in the usual manner, normal percentages of children, young people, older people. Detroit, on the other hand, is a "young" city; that is, it includes a disproportionate and over-large population of young men who go there to work in its factories. The general death rate in a "young" city is therefore less than in an "old" city.

BUT, going by the authorities, St. Louis had the best record for health in 1929 among the nation's great cities. In St. Louis there were 57.2 deaths per 1000 babies. New York was next with 58.5.

Dr. Starkloff considers St. Louis the best vaccinated city in America. If anyone comes in contact with a smallpox sufferer the Health Division looks for the former's vaccination scar. If he hasn't one, or if it is too old, he is told he must be vaccinated. If he refuses the Health Commissioner puts him in the isolation hospital for observation. There is a story that years ago, shortly after Starkloff became Commissioner, his father had a smallpox case in a then isolated section of the city. The elder Starkloff phoned the Health Division and told somebody to tell his son that it would not be necessary to placard the sufferer's home. The information was relayed to the Health Commissioner. "I'm surprised," he said, "that my father would say such a thing." And up went the placard.

The child welfare centers, combined with the rigid milk inspection, are believed responsible for the small amount of disastrous summer illness among the city's babies.

For its many functions the Division of Health receives about 55 cents per person in the city each year. That amount is the lowest allowed any great city in the country. Some authorities believe that a city's health division should be given $1.25 per person.

Like many men, Starkloff has a hobby. It is hunting, and he is expert at it. He has won many matches and held championships. His hobby was responsible for a serious accident to himself in 1923.

He was hunting ducks near St. Charles. He was alone, having left his car and its driver, while he made his way to a blind. A few birds flew by, and he rose up and fired, bringing one down. And then another duck, which he believes was injured by some other hunter, swept towards him, striking him in the face with great force, smashing against his right eye. He collapsed, unconscious. After a time he regained his senses, got to his feet and made his way to his car. The accident resulted in the loss of sight in the injured eye.

Only the day before his injury an oculist, speaking to a group of medical men, among whom was Starkloff, had remarked that the Commissioner had the best eyes for his age of any man he knew.

He was disconsolate. His "shooting eye" was gone. He never wanted to look upon his guns again. And then he heard of a sight that had been invented by a famous shot, who, too, had lost his "shooting eye." Starkloff acquired one of these sights and began to shoot again. But it didn't seem to aid him, and he was just about to give up hunting when he got the knack of it. He believes he is as good a shot today as ever he was.

IT IS inevitable that the Health Division should receive requests allowing persons to violate the rules of the division. That situation is easily taken care of, Starkloff says. Simply follow the rules.

"But on occasion," he continues, "there is reason to alter rulings. For safety in such cases the division must depend on the Commissioner's judgment. Not long ago a child was in a hospital recovering from an operation. While in the hospital this boy developed a contagious disease. According to the rules, the child should have been removed at once. The physician called me and told me the circumstances of the case. I was satisfied that if the boy were removed it might mean his death. I felt certain it would be possible to leave him in the hospital without danger to other patients. I gave instructions for certain precautionary measures to be carried out. Everything cannot be arbitrary.

"A few years ago there was an opening in the post of Assistant Health Commissioner. There was no regulation which said the assistant should be a physician. But it was customary to appoint a physician to the post. Instead, I appointed a layman, Max Kaufman, my present assistant. Kaufman has been with me since I started in '95, when he came to me as my secretary. I left office for eight years. When I returned I asked Kaufman to rejoin me. He did, giving up the work he was doing. When I made him my assistant I did so because I considered him best qualified for the post. He knew the workings of the division thoroughly. He was prepared for the executive work."

Dr. Starkloff has served under every Mayor since Walbridge. When Rolla Wells, a Democrat, came into office in 1901, Starkloff's term had two years to run. Wells served as Mayor for two terms of four years each, and when his appointee's term expired Starkloff was reappointed under another Republican Mayor.

The Health Commissioner continues his private practice. But it is mostly consultant work, he says, done at his private office during evening hours. He cannot take cases that require a great deal of attention; he hasn't time for them.

I asked Dr. Starkloff why he had continued in the commissionership so long. He said he liked the work. Still, wasn't it done at a sacrifice?

He thought about it a minute.

"Let us," he said, "for want of a better word, call it ego. But I do get great pleasure in doing something for the public health. And in that, perhaps, the ego enters, too."

Jantie Wants a Plumber

By

RUTH BURR SANBORN

IT IS always bad enough to fall in love. But if one has had the misfortune to fall in love with the boss' niece, Jantie Shields, and if Jantie Shields is reported engaged to the famous Carldon Drew, and if the boss' butler has just pushed you down the Shields' doorstep—why, then things are about as bad as they can get.

George Plummer stood clutching the gatepost and watched Jantie Shields go by. He was dimly aware of Carldon Drew beside her, of the long, green Drew car at the curb, but he really saw only Jantie Shields herself—just a flash of slim gold coat and high gold heels that were less shining and golden than her high gold head. There was a flash of fragrance, too, strangely upsetting.

Then she was gone. But as the green car slid away, something white flickered over the side and came to rest at George's feet; it was too fragile a thing to be a handkerchief—more like fine gossamers that you find on the grass at dawn of a dewy morning—but it was a handkerchief all the same, with an upsetting fragrance.

George Plummer picked it up carefully for fear it might break, and put it in the pocket where the glove was. Of course, she had not dropped it on purpose. Jantie Shields did not know. That was the worst of it.

There were other things, too, though, that were pretty bad, and one of those was connected with the Erasmus B. Shields Advertising Agency. George Plummer had worked there for two years, and he had not been fired yet—which was by way of being an accomplishment. Erasmus B. Shields was famous for firing people; the only really awfully nice thing you could say about him was that he was Jantie Shields' great-uncle.

George had planned the Better Box campaign and the campaign for Save-a-Tooth Dentifrice and had handled the publicity for the Hingham Rustless Bustless Hinge. That these exploits had not already brought him honor and fame was perhaps because he never suggested that they should. George Plummer had a rare, real failing: he was too modest. It is always hard to make others believe better of you than you believe of yourself. And now he was in danger of severing his connection with the Shields Agency altogether over the Parkaway Brass Piping account.

ORDINARILY, of course, even Erasmus B. Shields himself would not have fired a promising young employe for failure to please a single customer. But the Parkaway Brass Piping Corporation was different. They had been advertising with the Shields agency for 20 years. It was a good account.

It was a good account, that is, until Mr. Parkaway Jr. succeeded to the presidency, and he made more trouble in 15 minutes than old Parkaway had made in 15 years. He said that Parkaway piping had been going off in favor of Mastodon—which was nothing but galvanized tin. He said he was going to have a campaign and it was going to be a campaign that was a campaign, and if the Shields agency couldn't produce it, then he would find someone who could.

Mr. Shields put Banks on the account first. Banks planned a conservative campaign. Mr. Parkaway Jr. tore the copy up and stamped on it, and Mr. Shields fired Banks just as an example. After that Dobbs planned a peppy campaign, illustrated by funny little men made out of jointed brass pipe. Mr. Parkaway burned the copy and Mr. Shields fired Dobbs, just to show that everything possible was being done.

After that Mr. Shields put George Plummer on the Parkaway account—which was at once a compliment and a threat. He called George into his solid mahogany office and outlined the situation tersely:

"What Parkaway wants is something snappy, but not too snappy. See?"

"Yes, sir," said George.

"Conservative, but not too conservative. Progressive, but not radical. Clever but not arty." He looked up at George across his desk—a desk oddly like himself: large and square and opulent. "The goods or the gate," he summed it up. "Get that?"

"Yes, sir," said George again, moodily.

It was just the way things happen in this world that as he was going down the stairs he should have met a young person coming up. That young person, coming up those stairs, was the most completely beautiful, upsetting thing that George had ever seen.

"Where is Mr. Shields' office?" the young person inquired.

George Plummer came down one more step, which was about as far as he could get without crowding, and since at the same instant the young person came up one step on her way to pass him, it happened that they were rather close together. Her arm just lightly touched him; it is queer how upsetting the touch of a bit of gray silk can be, with a bit of warm arm beneath it.

"I—I'll show you," George blurted.

"Thanks," she said. She spoke pleasantly, but George told himself that she regarded him with as much personal interest as she would have shown for a telephone book in which she had looked up a number.

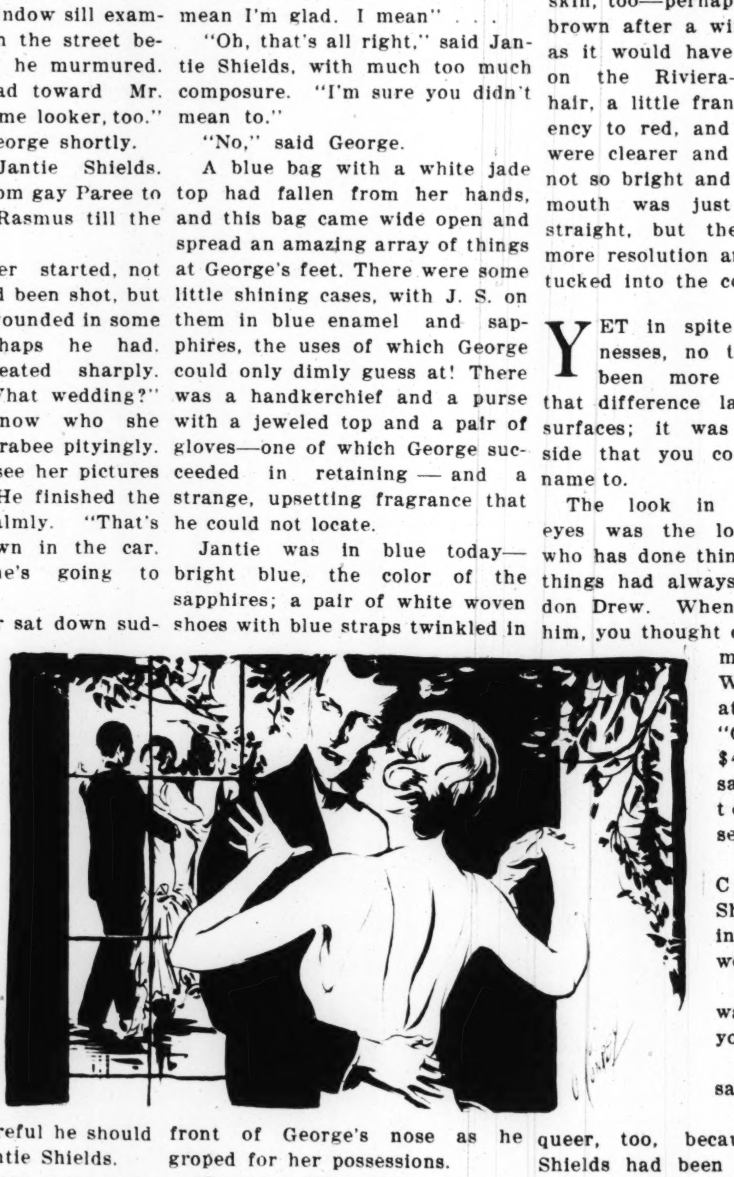
BACK in his own office, George found Larabee, who occupied the desk next to his, looped over the window sill examining something in the street below. "Some car," he murmured. He jerked his head toward Mr. Shields' office. "Some looker, too."

"Who?" said George shortly.

"That girl. Jantie Shields. She's just home from gay Paree to stay with Uncle 'Rasmus till the wedding."

George Plummer started, not merely as if he had been shot, but as if he had been wounded in some vital part. Perhaps he had. "Who?" he repeated sharply. "Uncle which? What wedding?"

"Didn't you know who she was?" inquired Larabee pityingly. "Didn't you even see her pictures in the papers?" He finished the death sentence calmly. "That's Carldon Drew down in the car. He's the man she's going to marry."



George Plummer sat down suddenly. The office was swinging round him in large, uneven circles.

George Plummer did not believe much in love. Particularly he did not believe in love at first sight.

Nevertheless, George knew then, although he did not admit it until some time afterwards, that unless he were very, very, very careful he should be in love with Jantie Shields.

After that George was very, very, very careful.

All day every day he sat behind his desk and worked on Parkaway Brass Piping. But no scheme for the Parkaway campaign, conservative, progressive, clever, sprang to his mind. Nothing sprang to his mind at all except the vision of a certain small person in gray.

Every night George sat at a large table in his room, under a morbid-looking green lamp, and spread the Parkaway material before him. He worked late. Then he got up at 4 o'clock and worked some more. In between times George thought of Jantie Shields. And sometimes he looked at himself severely in the mirror and said to himself that he was a fool. He didn't mean quite that, of course. What he really meant was that he did not have a dozen millions like Carldon Drew.

And then he ran into her that day in the corridor.

Afterwards George could not imagine how it happened. He had seen the Drew car outside and knew Jantie must have come in to visit her uncle; she was a very dutiful niece and called on her uncle every day. Now it happened that at just that moment George Plummer was seized by an uncontrollable thirst, and it was necessary for him to hurry out to the drinking fountain, which was near the entrance. He was very thirsty, indeed, and had to stay and drink quite a while. Jantie Shields was not in the entrance hall; she was not on the stairs. When George's thirst was allayed he started back again.

NOW the queer part of it was this: The twisting corridor down which George was walking when the thing happened did not lead to Mr. Shields' office at all. Jantie Shields had on shoes with high heels that clicked on the tiled floor. But George did not hear her. Only suddenly he plunged full tilt around a corner . . . and there she was.

He threw out his hands to save her from being knocked right over. And the net result was that George took Jantie Shields suddenly, unexpectedly, but very thoroughly, into his arms.

Jantie Shields was even smaller than he had thought her—smaller and warmer and more quivering. She must have been very angry to have trembled like that. He let her go at once.

"I'm sorry," he blundered. "I mean I'm glad. I mean" . . .

"Oh, that's all right," said Jantie Shields, with much too much composure. "I'm sure you didn't mean to."

"No," said George.

A blue bag with a white jade top had fallen from her hands, and this bag came wide open and spread an amazing array of things at George's feet. There were some little shining cases, with J. S. on them in blue enamel and sapphires, the uses of which George could only dimly guess at! There was a handkerchief and a purse with a jeweled top and a pair of gloves—one of which George succeeded in retaining — and a strange, upsetting fragrance that he could not locate.

Jantie was in blue today—bright blue, the color of the sapphires; a pair of white woven shoes with blue straps twinkled in front of George's nose as he groped for her possessions.

"Is that all?" He hoped her other glove would not fall out of his cuff.

"It looks that way," said Jantie.

"I hope . . . I wish" . . . George began—and did not finish. What he hoped and wished very ardently was that he might take Jantie Shields again, all warm and trembling, in his arms.

"Don't give it another thought," she was saying, very offhand.

"I suppose you won't?" said George—and tried not to let his voice sound wistful.

"Dear no," said Jantie. And she made a little gesture as if she tossed the very idea into limbo.

It was then that George glanced up and saw Carldon Drew. They stood staring at each other, with Jantie Shields between them.

In many ways the two were not unlike. They were both tall. Carldon Drew had a brown skin and brownish hair and gray eyes and a wide mouth. George had a brown skin, too—perhaps not quite so brown after a winter in the city as it would have been after one on the Riviera—and brownish hair, a little franker in its tendency to red, and gray eyes that were clearer and deeper, though not so bright and agile. George's mouth was just as wide and straight, but there was rather more resolution and less derision tucked into the corners.

YET in spite of their likenesses, no two could have been more different, but that difference lay deeper than surfaces; it was something inside that you could not put a name to.

The look in George's gray eyes was the look of a man who has done things for himself; things had always come to Carldon Drew. When you looked at him, you thought of motion, swift motion, money. When you looked at George . . . "Office desk and $40 a week," said George bitterly to himself. . . .

"Come on, Carl," Jantie Shields was saying. "We may as well go."

"I thought you wanted to see your uncle."

"He's busy," said Jantie.

This was queer, too, because if Jantie Shields had been to her uncle's office, why then she must have flown. She made a little gesture of farewell or dismissal, call it what you like, and moved away. George saw that she was as keenly aware of him personally as if he were a post that she had run into.

It was when he returned to his desk that George learned from Larabee that there was to be a dance that night at the Lansdowne Country Club. Jantie Shields would be there. So would Larabee. Larabee caused it to be understood that he should dance with her quite a lot.

George only half listened. He saw that it was going to be harder than he had thought to keep from falling in love with Jantie Shields. It is always harder, once you have felt a person warm and trembling in your arms.

It was Thursday. The next day would be Friday, the day after that would be Saturday and George's last chance at Parkaway.

It was 8 o'clock. George settled himself at the table in his room, rolled up his sleeves and emptied the Parkaway folders out of his bag.

Parkaway Brass Piping, George said to himself, would not rust. It would not clog. It would not break. Other things wore out; gloves, now. He took a glove from his pocket and laid it against his face to catch that faint, disquieting fragrance. . . . He drew himself up sharply.

Parkaway Brass Piping, George said to himself with more than customary severity, was best for public buildings. Take clubhouses. He wondered if it were used at the Lansdowne Country Club, where Jantie Shields was going that night to dance.

It was just after this that George decided he could work better if he should change his clothes. He meant to put on a dressing gown and slippers, but instead he found himself laying out a tuxedo and a dress shirt and his best shoes. George decided then to take a walk. There is nothing like walking to freshen a man up for work.

GEORGE walked a long way. He walked one block down Farragut and one block east, and then one block up Trafalgar and one block west; he repeated this 10 times, making a total of 40 blocks in all, and at the end he felt distinctly fresher. It happened that about midway of the block on Farragut avenue was a house, and in the house lived Erasmus B. Shields. Mr. Shields lived quite alone, save, of course, for his butler, valet, cook, maids and niece. His niece occupied the front corner room on the second floor; George knew because every now and then a small-sized shadow with a high head flitted across the curtain. He was just passing the house on his eleventh round, when he noticed a long, green car at the curb and a light in the front corner room went out. George Plummer did not stop to think. Only suddenly he was conscious of feeling fresher than he had ever felt in his life, and the next moment his feet were going up some steps and his finger was pressing a bell.

Immediately after George placed his finger on that bell the door opened, and Cleves, the butler, appeared.

"I—I'd like to see Miss Shields," George gasped.

"Miss Shields is engaged," said Cleves severely.

"Oh, I know that." George spoke quickly. "To Mr. Drew, I understand. I just wanted to see her."

"If you are a reporter," said Cleves, "Miss Shields has directed me to say that she is not seeing reporters."

"But I'm not," George began.

It was just then that there was a little rustling in the hall behind them; the sound of steps and voices. "Stand aside, please," added Cleves. "Miss Shields and Mr. Drew wish to pass out."

GEORGE PLUMMER wished devoutly that he could pass out also. He moved a step backward just as Cleves swung the door wide open.

What happened next was partly the fault of the door, which was heavy, and partly the fault of Cleves, who swung it too hard, and partly the fault of the Shields doorstep, which was not quite as wide as George had thought it.

The next instant George was clinging to the gatepost at the bottom of those steps, watching Jantie Shields—just a flash of gold coat and gold heels and high, gold head—sweep past him to the curb.

There must have been a great many people at the Lansdowne Country Club that night. But to George Plummer there was only one person present—a small person all in white, who twinkled past on high gold heels to the strains of music that played for her alone.

"So you're here," said Larabee, suddenly beside him.

"I want you to introduce me to Miss Shields," said George just as suddenly back again.

So presently George Plummer found himself standing face to face with Jantie Shields and holding her by the hand. "Shall—shall we dance?" he blurted. "I wanted to talk to you about . . . pipes."

Dancing with Jantie Shields was, as George had suspected it would be, very much nicer than bumping into her in a corridor. She tipped her head back, looking up at him.

"What did you say you wanted to talk to me about?" she asked him.

"About . . . pipes," said George.

She laughed at him then. "You're good," she murmured. "I thought I'd had all the kinds of lines there are tried on me, but I've never had a pipe line."

George executed two double half turns that brought him out of range of Carldon Drew, and danced Jantie Shields right out through one of the French doors onto the terrace. Even the terrace seemed very public, what with the moon and all. And so George drew Jantie around a corner and down a path behind a boxwood hedge.

"Parkaway," said George huskily.

Jantie Shields shook her head. "Don't know it. I know T. D. and meerschaum and brier and corncob" . . .

"This is a water pipe," said George.

"Well, what about it?"

"It will not rust," said George desperately. "It will not break, burst, clog or wear out. It keeps the water clean. Clean water means pure water. Pure water means health. Health means beauty" . . .

After that they sat together on a white stone bench, and he told her all about it: pipes and tanks and valves and dies and working pressures; even a little bit about himself; Stillson wrenches, calking iron, everything.

"Oh," said Jantie. "Of course, I think plumbing is an awfully entertaining subject. But how did you happen to come here to talk about it?"

"I WANTED to see you." George saw from her quick flush that he had been too bold and added instantly: "I thought you might know whether they use Parkaway Pipe here at the club."

"I really couldn't say," said Jantie. She rose, and he could see that she meant to go right away and find out. He did not want her to go. And he certainly would have taken measures to prevent it, if Carldon Drew had not come hurrying down the walk.

He took Jantie's wrist possessively and pulled her to her feet. "Don't you know this is our dance? What are you doing down here, anyway?"

"Just having a little business talk," said Jantie. She waved her hand lightly to George in parting and did not address him further. George saw that she had already dismissed him from her mind, as one dismisses a radio when he turns the current off.

This was the harder to bear, because George was now forced to admit that in spite of being very, very, very, very careful, he had fallen in love with Jantie Shields.

That night, on the white bench, under the moon, it had not seemed so crazy. But afterwards, when George had gone home, it all seemed very crazy indeed. It was not only that Jantie Shields was rich—though that was bad enough. It was not even that she was engaged to Carldon Drew—though that, of course, was final. The really bad part of it was that Jantie Shields was not aware of him at all—not as a person.

An unreasoning anger shook George—anger and pride and—love. He'd show her.

GEORGE was still intending to show her when he went to work next morning. Nevertheless, he was a trifle taken aback to find a memorandum on his desk, a telephone message from Shields that he was to come to the house at once. This seemed unnecessary. If Mr. Shields was going to fire him, he might have done it in the office.

Cleves did not open the door this time. Instead it was opened by a rather flustered maid.

"Come right in. I'm glad to see you," she cried, to George's astonishment. "So you're the plumber."

"I'm Plummer, all right," George admitted. "But not" . . .

She did not stop to hear him. "Here comes the plumber, Mr. Cleves."

Cleves himself appeared then. "The plumber. Good. Take him right up."

"I'm George Plummer," George began. "I" . . .

"George the plumber, eh?" said Cleves. "Mary, take George the plumber right upstairs." His eye rested on George's bag. "That your stuff?"

"Well, yes," said George. "I thought I'd bring it. Where's Mr. Shields?"

"You'll see him soon enough," said Cleves.

This seemed only too probable. Cleves disappeared and George followed the maid up the stairs and down the hall to a closed door. "Right this way" . . .

"You mean—wait here?"

"Wait!" she repeated. "Why, do whatever is necessary, I'm sure."

George opened the door before him and went in.

Right after he opened the door things began to happen. They happened fast.

In the first place, George received a very large, cold squirt of water full in the face. Dodging this, he became instantly involved with a shower bath, which was showering with more than customary fervor. He made a dash toward the door. But the door had slammed shut behind him and, perhaps from the action of water on the mechanism, refused to open. He tried to turn off the shower, but the knob spun idly in his hand. It was only when he had assumed an undignified position on top of a bath stool, with the curtain wound around him to keep off the shower, and his hand clapped over a hole in the water tank to keep off the squirt, that he was able to look about him. The tub was full; the foot bath was full; the bowl was full; over the edges waterfalls cascaded to the floor.

It was just then that he heard a noise behind him and, craning his neck to see what was going to break loose next, he was confronted by a vision.

ON THE opposite side of the room three steps led up to what appeared to be a mirror; this mirror now swung, revealing itself as a door, and just inside the door, poised on the top step, stood Jantie Shields.

Jantie Shields wore a pair of pajamas that were so pale a green you would have said it was only the reflection from the green tiles of the bath; a short green coat embroidered over with gold birds and little golden flowers and fruits and bumblebees. Her feet were tucked into satin mules with gold birds on the toes, and a frail gold scarf was knotted round her hair. She lifted her hands in a most enchanting gesture of dismay.

"What's all this about, anyway?" George roared.

"I think," said Jantie, "that Cleves must have thought you were a plumber. And a pipe seems to have burst."

"Pipe," repeated George. "Pipe." Amid the stark confusion of his mind that word was something tangible to cling to. "If you had Parkaway," he muttered, "it wouldn't have happened."

And with that the door at the top of the steps, that was at the same time a mirror, swung a little farther, so that it faced him. In the mirror was a very opulent bathroom, done up in green tiles and porcelain and built-in gadgets for bath salts and perfumes. Against this background appeared a full-length reflection of a tall young man on a bath stool; a young man with reddish hair plastered over his eyes and water streaming down behind his ears; a young man who clutched a bath curtain inadequately about him to ward off the shower and the squirt. The young man's eyes looked desperate; the lines of his face curved downward in a pattern of humiliation and anger and disgust. . . . Across from him a vision in green and gold lifted her hands in a most enchanting gesture of dismay.

George drew his breath sharply. "By Jove!" he cried. "I'll show you. Telephone to the office for a photographer and get me a Stillson wrench."

WHEN George Plummer walked up the Shields doorstep at 4 that afternoon he walked with an air possible only to a man wearing a costly new tie of a delicate and seductive shade of green, with socks to match, and a pale green handkerchief sticking out of the pocket of a new gray suit.

"Miss Shields," he said to Cleves.

Cleves opened his mouth—and shut it again. "This way, sir," he murmured.

Jantie Shields was in the library, just pouring tea. George entered boldly.

"Won't you sit down?" said Jantie.

"Thanks," said George. He took a paper from his pocket and thrust it into her hand. . . .

When he had finished with the photographer that morning and had sent him away, George took the Stillson wrench that Jantie brought him and started for the cellar.

"Where is the shut-off?" he asked.

"I can't imagine," said Jantie helpfully.

It appeared upon inquiry that Cleves could not imagine either; neither could the maid, Mary, nor the second man, nor the third man, nor the chauffeur, nor any of the gardeners. But they all very helpfully followed George downstairs and watched him hunt for the shut-off.

CARLDON DREW followed him downstairs also. He had appeared in the hall, offensively perfect in white knickers and a futuristic black-and-white sweater that matched his stockings. He disregarded George.

"Come on, Jantie, and play golf."

Jantie Shields widened her blue eyes at him. "But, Carl, I can't play golf in my pajamas."

"I didn't ask you to," said Drew sulkily—and added something unintelligible about its being more than she usually wore at that. "Hurry up and get dressed."

"But I have to hold the flashlight for Mr. Plummer," Jantie objected. That flashlight helped George more than anything. Under its inspiration he ran his head enthusiastically up a chute solid full of spiders and down an opening in the partition, and under the stairs and over the steam pipes.

"Why don't you help him, Carl?" Jantie asked.

"Help him!" Carldon Drew repeated, flicking a speck of dust that George had raised from his sleeve. "I don't know anything about shut-offs."

George did not know anything about them either; but intuition told him that the function of a shut-off was to be shut off. And in the end, by following all pipes to their logical conclusions, he found it. It was situated just beyond the coal hole and the dust bin, wedged in between an unexcavated bank of earth and a beam full of splinters. It could be approached only in the position known in coasting as belly-bump. George finally reached it. He did not look pretty when he climbed down again. He and Drew stood staring at each other, with Jantie Shields between them. George was covered with dust and earth and soot and smut and iron rust and ashes; there was a spider's web on his chin. But it was Carldon Drew who looked annoyed.

"I'll show you," muttered George. And he went out and slammed the door behind him.

GEORGE went home first for repairs, and then he went to the Shields agency. He heckled the photographer until he got a print, he heckled the art department until he had the print touched up with green and gold; he pasted it to the dummy he had prepared, with the copy ready on it. It was not a very long piece of copy:

"Avoid Danger! Use Parkaway!
Pluperfect for Plumbing!"

After that George Plummer took the dummy and stamped straight up the stairs to the solid mahogany office where Mr. Shields and Mr. Parkaway were having their daily quarrel. He thrust it on the desk between them. . . .

With something of the same expression of mingled triumph and terror, he now thrust it into the hands of Jantie Shields.

"They liked it," he gasped. "I'm not fired. I'm going to get $75 a week."

"That's very nice," said Jantie. "Mr. Parkaway wants a lot more. I thought if we took your bathroom from different angles and used different colors in the prints" . . .

Jantie Shields interrupted him. "And what exactly had you planned for the subject matter?"

"You," said George. "Of course, I haven't got them all planned yet. But I thought in one—you might wear just what you've got on—you could be staggering toward the tank with your arms thrown up across your face" . . .

George Plummer never finished describing the excellencies of this picture. For Jantie Shields did fling up her arms across her face and a tremor, a furious little shudder, ran through her, like a cold wind sweeping a field of wax. "I won't do it," she burst out. "I just won't!" And he saw that she was crying.

"WHY, Jantie" . . . George put out his hand. He meant to lay it on her shoulder, just to reassure her. But somehow the instant that he touched her, the instant that he felt her warm and trembling under his fingers, then everything was different.

A strength that was beyond his strength took hold of George. He was on his feet, dragging Jantie up to face him. He felt the hard little shoulder bones under his fingers. He felt the place where her hair grew in the back of her neck. He felt the catch and quiver of her breath. And the next instant everything turned dark and strange about him; he was swaying her backward, crushing her against him till the pounding of his own heart shook them both.

"I love you. I love you," he panted. And his lips were hot and fierce against her throat.

He was frightened at what he had done when the gust of it had left him, and Jantie was sobbing so brokenly into the front of his coat.

"Oh, George," she sobbed. "And all the time you didn't act as if you knew I was alive. I kept coming to the office, and you didn't even see me. Not even when I threw my handkerchief at you. Not even when I threw myself at you in the corridor. You just acted as if you didn't care about anything but p-ipes and advertising" . . .

He stopped her then.

"Jantie . . . Jantie . . . you don't mean you like me?"

"I love you," said Jantie simply. "If I hadn't, would I have telephoned for you to come this morning, and unscrewed the whole bathroom and pounded a hole in the tank?"

IT WAS quite a long time after that that Erasmus B. Shields came in to get his tea. He did not recognize George at first. "Get out of here, Drew," he shouted. "Didn't I tell you not to annoy Jantie any more?"

Jantie Shields did not move an inch from George's arms; only lifted her head so that her blue eyes met her uncle's over George's shoulder.

"That's what I told him, too," said Jantie softly. "This is my plumber. And I—oh, Uncle Shields, I'm going to be the Plummer's assistant."

Swapping Horses as an Art

$22,000. An Argentine pony brought that price last year. After you've got your horses and saddles you can play polo for $150 a month, the cost of caring for the horses at a club. It will cost more at a private place.

"A man doesn't need downright physical strength to play polo, any more than he needs a fortune. What he does need is accuracy and lots of guts and judgment."

Ideal polo ponies, in his opinion, are the offspring of a thoroughbred stallion and an ordinary Texas mare; that is, a broncho. But he declared that breeding polo ponies was impossible, chiefly because not two of 20 colts would fit the bill.

"A polo pony is just like a man," he said. "Without a good mouth and a good head he'll never get anywhere.

"An old pony is better for polo than a young one. I buy them 7 to 15 years old. A younger pony picks up tricks, and his joints are too soft.

"You start training a pony in a walk, swinging a mallet over him. When he is thoroughly used to that you begin hitting the ball, still keeping the pony in a walk. You train him in a round pen, to teach him to turn on his haunches. Next you teach him to meet other horses and ride them off, and finally you take him out and play him."

Meadows takes an old pony in trade on almost every new one he sells. Just now, at the end of his twenty-first season in St. Louis, he is going back to San Antonio with more than he brought up here. These he will hire out, at his $150,000 establishment, to novices who require experienced mounts. Or he will sell them for riding horses. "An old polo pony," he says, "can do everything but read and write."

Every horse he sends North, when he sets out for St. Louis in his weather-beaten touring car next spring, will be selected for the particular needs and taste of a St. Louis player. Players try them out by riding them for a chukker or two of one game or several. Meadows himself takes part in practice as player or referee. He watches match games from the sideboards near the St. Louis string, greeting each player between periods with a sage, and frequently violent, word of advice.

In those 21 years he has come to know every man's facilities and failings in trading no less than in polo. It has become traditional that no one asks the price of a horse until he has tried it out and is ready to buy. It is almost a tradition that mention of the price brings an invariable response from one player, for whose polo and horse-trading sense Meadows has developed enormous respect in many years of mutually profitable dealings. And it is certain that nobody knows where Meadows gets the names for his ponies—except in the case of one he sold this veteran.

"Get on him and try him again," Meadows suggested, when the player seemed on the verge of deciding not to buy. The veteran put the pony through a meditative figure eight, backed him, gave him a bit of a run. He wavered, but he was not yet up to the point of asking the price.

"What's his name?" he asked. And it is a tradition that Bill came back like a shot:

"Too High!"

One Romance After Another

was staged in the famous old Rauscher's.

In May, 1911, she was married to Walter B. Brooks Jr. of Baltimore.

The pair were divorced in 1919, after Brooks had come home from France. Mrs. Brooks then moved to Washington, buying a magnificent home on Massachusetts avenue, where she resided with her two children, Louise and Walter, until her marriage in 1922 to Major-General MacArthur. This wedding took place at Elmirasol, the Palm Beach home of her mother, Mrs. Stotesbury.

At the time of the wedding General MacArthur was commander of the Third Corps Area. Later he was sent to the Philippines as Commanding General.

The Philippines do strange things to people of the Caucasian race. The eternal heat, the strain of handling the problems of a subject race, the cares of directing the activities of an army on garrison duty—goodness knows that General MacArthur had plenty on his hands. The MacArthur romance wilted, gently but conclusively. The Reno divorce was obtained, with no question of alimony, since the plaintiff was wealthy.

But Lionel Atwill's distinguished career on the stage is quite equal to that of his wife in society. He was internationally known, and famous in England, before coming to this country.

As a very young man, he was leading man for Lily Langtry, the "Jersey Lily," then known all over the world as a friend of the Prince of Wales, later Edward VII. Atwill toured America with Mrs. Langtry.

But it was in recent years that he took the theatrical world by storm with his finished performance in "Deburau." David Belasco proclaimed him one of the great actors of the present period. He has starred in a succession of plays, always playing the role of the ennuied but fascinating man of the world.

His first marriage was to Phyllis Relph. This came to an unhappy ending in divorce in 1919. Later he married the beautiful actress, Elsie Mackay, who appeared with him in a number of plays. Miss Mackay proved that a matinee idol isn't necessarily such a knockout with his own wife. She ran away to Europe with Atwill's best friend, Max Montesole. Divested thus harshly of both pal and wife, Atwill philosophically got himself a divorce, apparently taking the whole business as "just one of those things."

Like magic sunburn pain stops!

..because

Unguentine goes as deep as the burn

SPREAD Unguentine on your smarting sunburn—gently, freely. Like magic it soothes and cools the burning skin. Unguentine stops the pain and heals quicker than anything else you could use. Because Unguentine goes as deep as the burn.

Unlike lotions and toilet creams, which only reach the outer surface of the skin . . . Unguentine penetrates! Immediately it sinks down to the inflamed tissue in the dermis, or inner layer of the skin.

The pain stops. Safe, natural healing begins. And, being antiseptic, Unguentine guards against the possibility of infection which any burn may develop.

Sunburn is no different from any other burn. It's just as dangerous. For sure, safe healing use Unguentine—the famous burn remedy used in 8 out of 10 hospitals.

Unguentine quickly turns fiery red to mellow, golden tan. Only 50 cents for the long-lasting tube. At your druggist's. Use Unguentine for burns and scalds, too, and for cuts, scratches, insect-bites, etc. Take it on your vacation trips.

CEASE FIRING

A Fourth of July With a Powderless Bang.

IT MIGHT be advisable, at this time, to hand out a few hints concerning a Fourth of July celebration that would be glorious and yet conform to all requirements of the safe and sane movement. It looks as if fireworks will be extinct altogether within a few years and people will have to get accustomed to a celebration that requires no punk. Of course, a great many fireworks are extinct now, especially in the 5-cent packages where 11 out of 20 sometimes fail to explode, but it may be just as well.

Youngsters will find that the smashing of inflated paper bags makes a pretty good detonation and that the effect at times is quite startling. You might use a bag that has held a dime's worth of rock candy and one that has had a nickel's worth of peanuts, and mother might lend you the bag that the carton of spaghetti came in. After you have smashed these, father will probably come on the back porch and explode some large 12-inch bags that were used to hold potatoes. But when you ask permission to "shoot off that next cannon-bag," he will say it is too dangerous—meaning that he is enjoying it too much himself.

You might salvage the rock candy and hurl it against the garage door just to see what will happen. The chances are that it won't explode, but there will be a "bip" of a sort and the particles will fly in all directions, like the torpedoes used to do. Then you could crack all the peanuts on hand, shoot a pop gun for awhile (first having made certain that the cork is secure), and perhaps snap apart a few stalks of celery.

A good cigar lighter, when flicked, will be found to give off some pretty sparks. A bass drum could be used to advantage, if there happens to be one in the house, or, if there is no bass drum, you could obtain father's niblick and wallop the bottom of a washtub. After the niblick is broken, saunter into the house and tune yourself in a roomful of static on the radio.

THE static is admirable at this time of year, and yields up all the effects of the old-fashioned, rip-roaring celebration. You get roaring, fizzing, crackling, hissing, banging, booming, spluttering and, for that matter, a host of other noises that the old-timers never dreamed existed.

Celebrators are urged not to rush through this program in a wild, careless manner. A few "don'ts," safety precautions and first-aid rules follow:

1. Keep away from parents. They are liable to object to some of the things that have been suggested and might hurt you if they get too close. This is especially true where the parent becomes so infuriated that he explodes.

2. Sore thumb from working cigar lighter. Don't change to matches. Put lighter aside and make sparks thereafter by rubbing sticks of wood together. (See Detzwanger's "Indian Lore," volume 2, page 167.)

3. Hit over the head by inflated paper bag. Recover equilibrium. Get yourself a fresh bag, fill it with water and go your assailant one better.

4. Hit by loose cork from popgun. Find the cork. These things have a thousand uses about the house and yours will come in handy some day.

5. Bored to distraction. Give up all attempts to celebrate and review arithmetic so as to be in good shape for the opening of school next autumn.

Every community ought to have a big municipal celebration where the noises and effects can be manufactured by experts under the eyes of competent authorities. An ideal program follows:

(a) Overture. Selections from "Firecracker Suite" (Tschaikowsky).

(b) Riveting exhibition. A gang of riveters from a new downtown office building perform on a steel framework that has been erected in the center of the amphitheater. The band obliges with a long chord and the riveters leap out clad in tights. The spotlight plays on them and they bow right, left and center and rub their hands on resined handkerchiefs. After a few tumbling exhibitions they do a few numbers in living statuary—"Justice," "Spring," "Hate," etc.—then hoist each other onto the framework and get busy with the rivets. It is very thrilling when the white-hot brands go hurtling through the air and the audience breaks out with spontaneous applause. (If red, green, violet and blue rivets can be used, the effect will be heightened considerably.)

A WHIRRING and grinding noise is heard as the rivets are driven. This keeps up for 15 or 20 minutes. Then the riveters leap lightly to the ground, bow and scamper away. If an encore is demanded, they can come out and put on another girder.

(c) Exhibition of automobile backfiring.

(d) Observation of comets, meteors and falling stars in skies. (Note: This number may have to be omitted.)

(e) Community cheering. The cheer leaders are donated by the local universities or high schools. Yells are given for the team, for all of us, for the Mayor and other dignitaries present. Then there is a special demonstration of "the skyrocket." (Yell only.) Old-timers will remember having seen skyrockets in their youth.

(f) "Anvil Chorus" from "Il Trovatore" (Verdi). It may be necessary to conduct an extensive search for the blacksmiths required to put over this number, but a three-time want ad should bring results. After the fundamentals of music have been explained and a few rehearsals held, the boys will be ready to proceed. This number combines both essential elements of a Fourth of July celebration, i. e., noise and sparks. A good encore would be the "Overture to William Tell" (Rossini), which is also spectacular and exciting, especially where they have the charge on horseback.

(g) Bonfire. The material for the bonfire will consist of grocery boxes, worn-out furniture, pianos, canceled checks, old office correspondence, courtroom records and the like. Now and then a padded expense account will explode, while the ledgers will glow a bright orange before expiring and the worthless stock certificates will turn a dull green.

(h) Grand finale: Corn-popping contest. This won't be very loud, of course, but still, it is noise. Police lines will be drawn to prevent spectators from getting hit by flying kernels.

These suggestions show what can be done toward putting the holiday over with a powderless bang. If everybody gives a little thought to the subject we will be able to have an Independence Day celebration in spite of the laws against it.

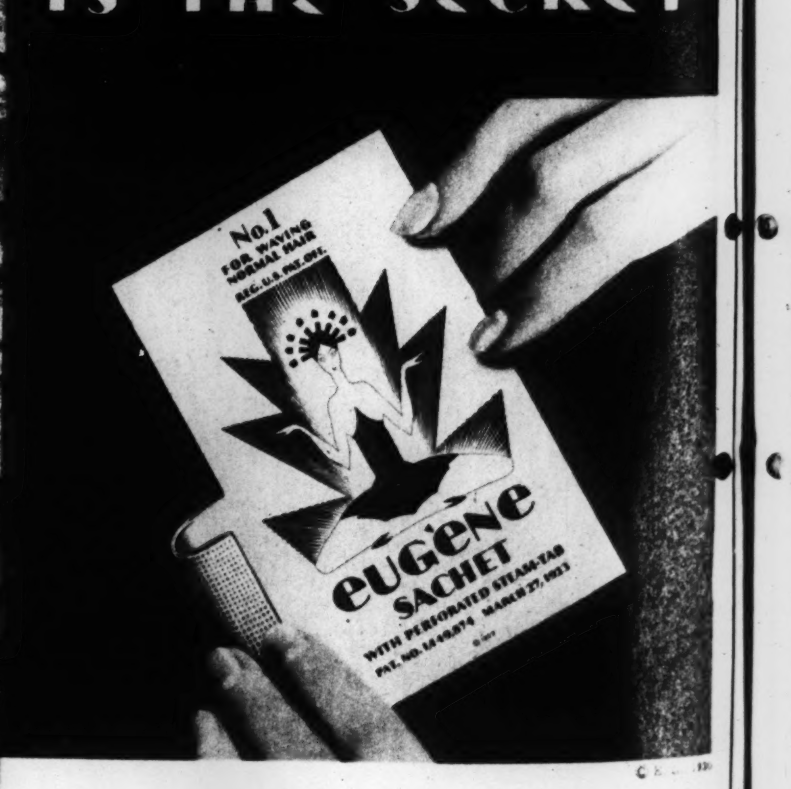
What do you see? . . . .

Everywhere—the Eugène Method! . . . These sincere artists of the hair refuse to risk their reputations with any other method.

Come back to America: large city or small town. Find a woman whose world extends beyond her door . . . who knows the good things of life . . . and you find a Eugène devotee who gladly pays the trifling extra cost for Eugène certainty and safety . . . .

IS THE SECRET



From the ingenious patented perforated tab of the Eugène Sachet come tiny jets of clean, white steam — controlled and directed for uniformly successful results . . . From two to three dozen of these Eugène sachets are necessary for each genuine Eugène permanent wave. When you get yours be sure that the full number of sachets is used and that each bears the distinctive Eugène Trade Mark.

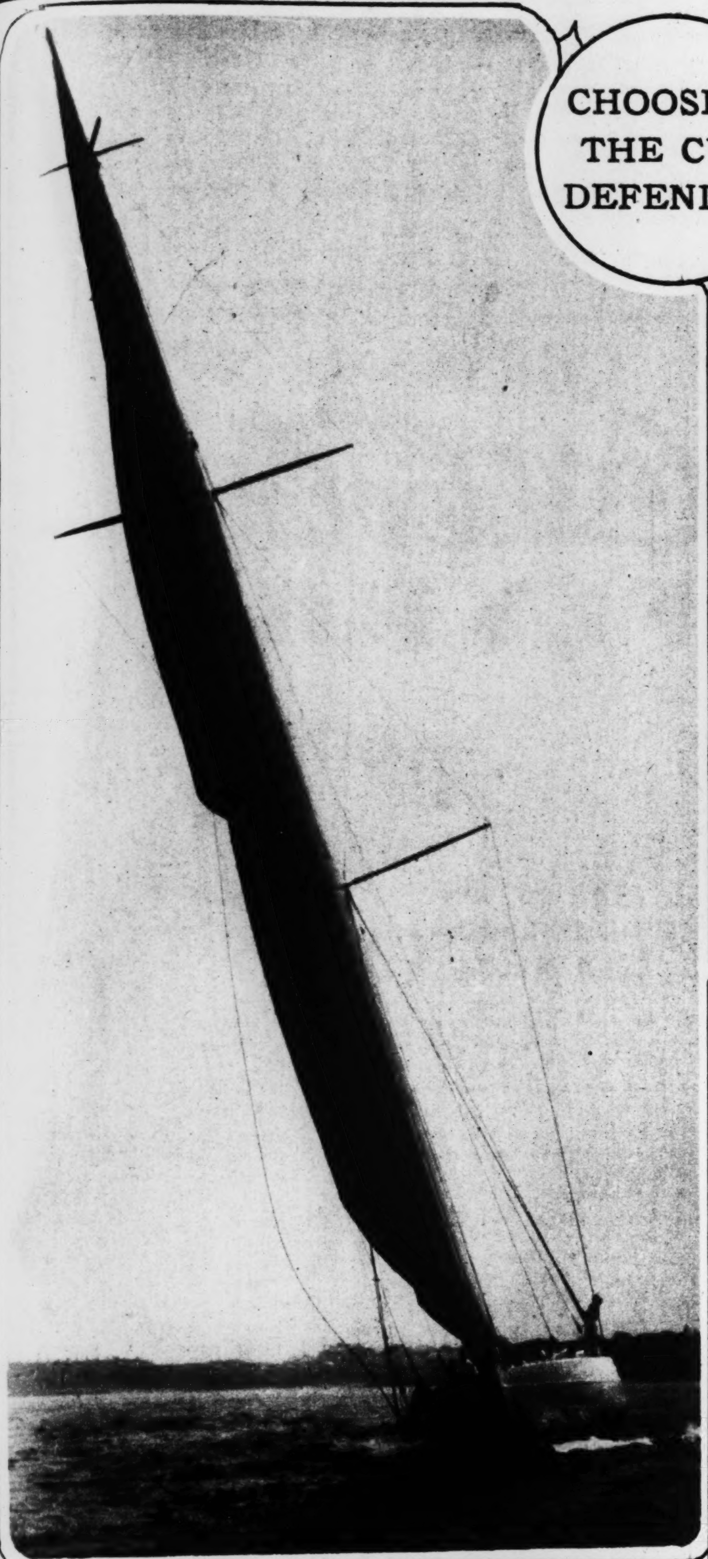
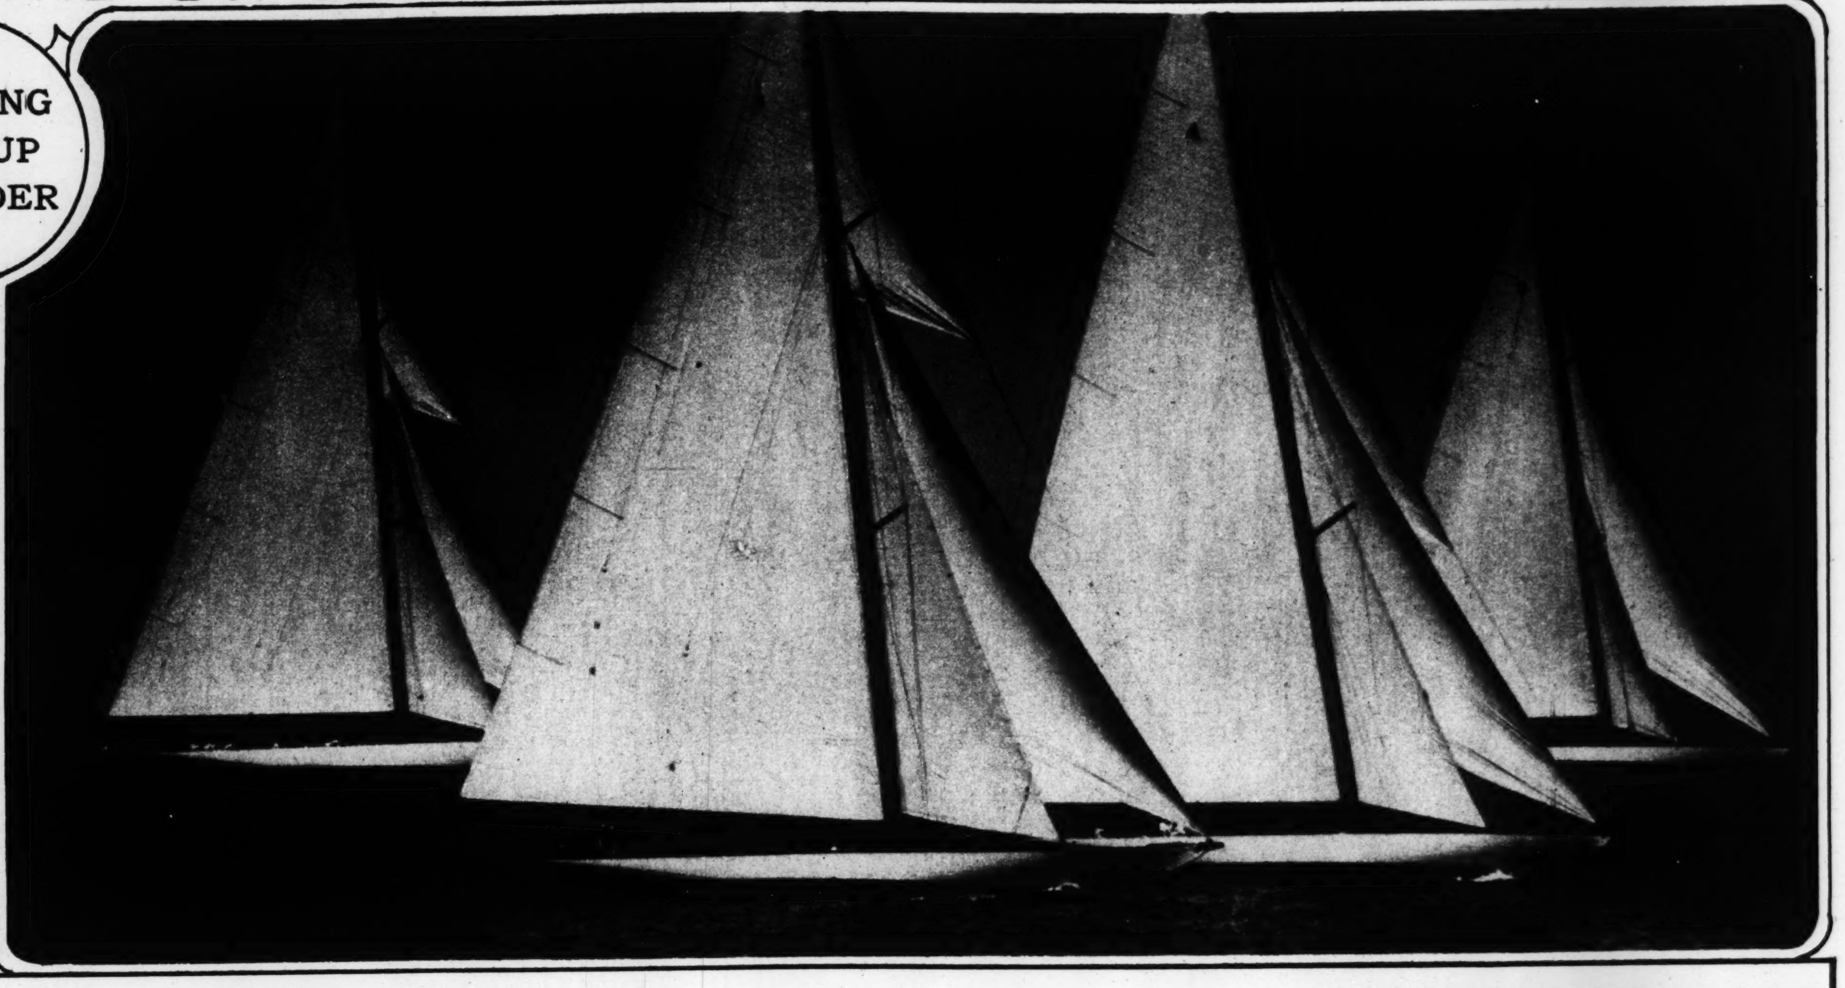
CHOOSING THE CUP DEFENDER





THE ENTERPRISE, BOW ON—Immense height of mast on the modern racing yacht is impressively seen in this photograph above. To the right, the Weetamoe (at left in photograph), the Vanitie, 1920 cup defender, the Enterprise, and the Whirlwind, sailing a race in Long Island Sound in series of trials to determine which boat shall meet Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V this fall for the America's cup.

"Watch Your Step" this summer

EVEREADY
EVEREADY
FLASHLIGHT BATTERY

The Pen-light is 95c, complete with battery. Choice of ivory, green, or nickel. Light equipped with a pocket-clip.

Eveready Flashlight Batteries fit and improve all makes of flashlights. Months of service for a dime.

The finest Eveready for hunting, camping, and fishing. Clip on the back for fastening the light to your belt or coat-pocket, leaving both hands free. Ask for No. 2697. $2. complete with batteries.

No. 2671 — One of the most popular Eveready Flashlights. Ideal for the motorist. Choice of red, blue, or black. Focusing device makes a 400-foot beam, or a floodlight for close by. Only $1.50, complete with batteries.

No. 2672 is a three-cell, 500-foot beam Eveready. Of course it has the focusing feature. And all the other Eveready improvements too. An extra high-powered light. $2, complete with batteries.

IN OTHER WORDS, follow the light directions! Take an Eveready Flashlight and know where you're going at night. Especially on your vacation! Every time you move around after dark, carry an Eveready and pave your way with light. Stairways in strange places are seldom where you expect them. And if you go groping and feeling your way, you can usually bank on a bounce or two and a tail-spin down the stairs.

But not if you have an Eveready! Its brilliant beam bores through blackness — puts a groove of light in the night. You see where you're going, and you go along safely! That's better than picking and poking, one foot before the other.

"Vacation Days Are Flashlight Nights." As soon as you plan to go away, make reservations for safety. Buy an Eveready Flashlight — and take along an extra supply of Eveready Flashlight Batteries.

This Dandy Coca-Cola FLYER

For only 25 Coca-Cola bottle caps and $1.75

Boys! Here is your chance to get a real tri-wheel, all-metal scooter, just like the one shown here, at less than half its regular cost.

To get it, just bring 25 Coca-Cola bottle caps and $1.75 in cash to our plant at 1115 Clark Ave. That's all you have to do.

A scooter like this would cost $5.00 in any store. It is all-metal—there's no wood on it. The edges are rolled, so it is perfectly safe. And there's a dandy box that you can use to carry packages or books.

Every boy in St. Louis will want one of these scooters, so hurry and get yours. Ask mother to help you get the caps by buying Coca-Cola regularly for your home. She will be glad to do it because Coca-Cola is a pure drink of natural flavors that everybody in her family likes.

SAILORS OF THE OLD STYLE—Students on the marine training ship Newport, up on the yardarms making fast the sail which has just been taken in. It's a long way down to the deck, from where they are, and in a pitching sea, out in an Atlantic storm, no more dangerous occupation can be named.

CREATOR OF PETER PAN—Sir James Barrie photographed on a visit to his native Thrums, Scotland. He is holding Master Angus Ogilvy, son of the Earl of Airlie.

MISS ELIZABETH EVANS HUGHES, daughter of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, whose engagement to William T. Gossett of Salt Lake City has been announced. No date has been set for the wedding.

LIFE LINE CHART

You Made Him What He Is Today—

What Will He Be Next Year?

That boy of yours—you hold him in the hollow of your hand. How he grows from year to year—how he gains in energy and manhood—all depend on how you feed him. Even the way he thinks and looks upon life is controlled largely by his food.

Make him robust and hearty. Give him the energy and ambition to win a place in life. Give him food that builds strong bones, sturdy muscles, firm flesh—food that digests readily and does not make him logy.

Have you ever tried Thompson's Chocolate Malted Milk? Authorities agree it contains all the food elements growing children need. In fact, that very Principle-of-Growth—butterfat—is present in its most easily digested form. Small wonder Thompson fed children have made famous progress.

Your boy's progress should be compared to average. You should keep him above it. You need Thompson's Life Line Chart hanging on the wall. Measure him from time to time and keep a record of his weight and growth.

The Chart will tell you whether he is growing at the vital Life Line rate. Send now for this Chart. It's free. Use the coupon below.

Serve Quickly at Home

Thompson's now prepare a special "Double Malted" Malted Milk already mixed with powdered chocolate in most appetizing proportions. In a jiffy you can mix a delicious chocolate malted milk right at home. Two teaspoonsful in a glass of milk—just a moment of shaking—that's all.

Your druggist or grocer will be glad to deliver right now—today—a 1 lb. can of Thompson's Chocolate "Double Malted". Telephone him now. Give your children a home treat for luncheon or dinner. Watch their happy smiles when they taste the food that's best for them. Get Thompson's now.

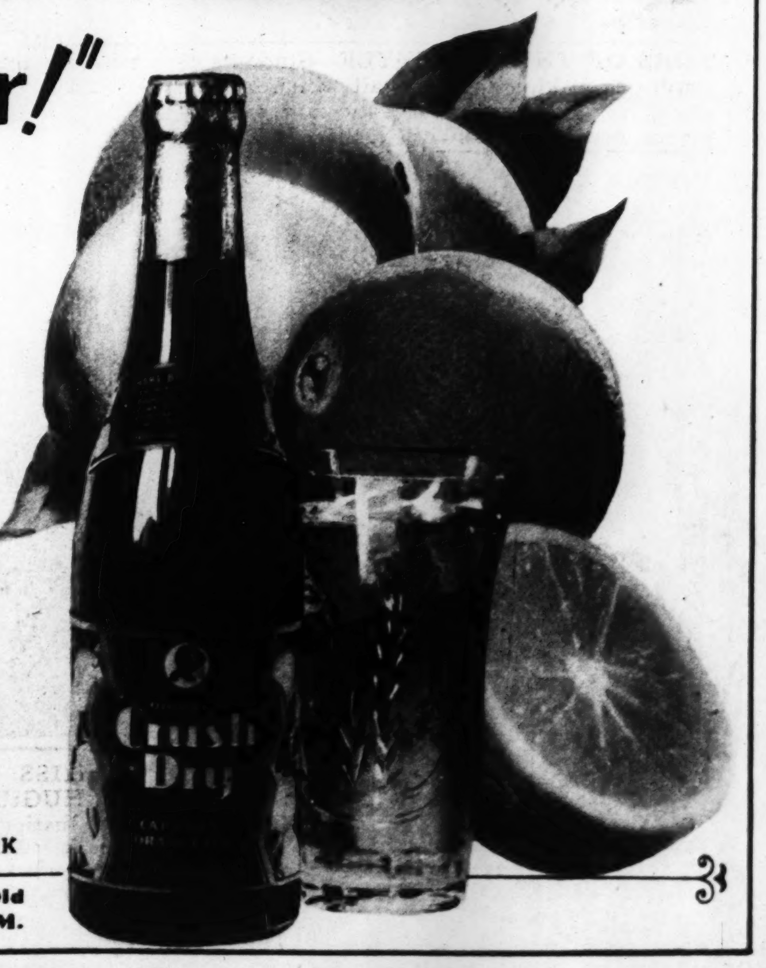
The Sparkling Orange Drink

Crush-Dry

"Don't Squeeze-Pour!"



SQUEEZING in the pantry isn't done any more, William! Leads to such a muss! When you want fresh orange juice today, you get the world's finest in the brilliant jet bottle of Crush-Dry. You pour, don't squeeze!

By a new and exclusive method the flatness of cooked juice is flung to the discard—now fresh, delicious juice of tree-ripened oranges, with champagne carbonation!

Retains the fresh fruit vitamins intact—the healthful quantities of orange juice—most refreshing at breakfast—children are delighted with it.

Dash of lemon and lime with carbonated water already added and a zippy flavor of the peel—an ambrosial blend ready for what have you—and what a drink by itself!

Crush-Dry is a social conquest. Why stick around with a squeezer?

OH, OH OH!
GEORGE, WHY ARE YOU SCREAMING? WHAT HAPPENED?
GEORGE, WHAT'S WRONG? I HEARD YOU AWAY OUT ON THE BACK-PORCH. WHAT HAPPENED? ANSWER ME.
OH, OH! I WAS REACHING UP ON THAT SHELF IN THIS CLOTHES-CLOSET. I RAN A BIG SPLINTER IN MY FINGER. OH, OH!
HEAVENLY DAYS! DON'T MAKE SO MUCH NOISE. A SPLINTER? WHERE IS IT? STAND CLOSER TO THE WINDOW.
OH, THIS IS TERRIBLE. I CAN FEEL THE PAIN STARTING TO WORK UP MY ARM. TO THE HEART! OH!
I'LL GET A NEEDLE
NOT A BIG ONE. MY WORD, WHY DID THIS HAVE TO HAPPEN TO ME? OH OH!
OH, BE CAREFUL. DON'T PRESS ON IT TOO MUCH. DON'T—GEORGE, PLEASE KEEP STILL....AND STOP JERKING YOUR HAND AWAY....WHERE IS IT?
OH, OH LOOK OUT! OH!
WHY, I DIDN'T EVEN TOUCH YOU WITH THE NEEDLE. THERE'S NO SPLINTER IN THAT FINGER. NOT EVEN A MARK.
THE IDEA OF RAISING SUCH A FUSS OVER NOTHING.
OH, OH!....LISTEN, I'LL SHOW YOU EXACTLY— MY WORD, YOU HAD THE WRONG FINGER. HERE'S THE PLACE. RIGHT HERE!
GO AHEAD....GET IT OUT. AT ANY COST. I'LL JUST GRIT MY TEETH AND....OH, OH, EASY! EASY! OH!
HOLD STEADY! IS THIS THE PLACE? MY STARS, THERE'S NO SPLINTER HERE, EITHER.
WHAT, NO SPLINTER? LISTEN, LOOK HERE. RIGHT HERE. LOOK.
THAT'S SOOT I RUBBED PART OF IT OFF. THERE'S NO SPLINTER THERE. I LOOKED GOOD.
HA HA HA! IMAGINE! SUCH A BIG HULLABALOO OVER NOTHING. A SPLINTER! AND THE WAY YOU HOLLERED. OH HA. HA HA!
HA, HA? SOME PEOPLE CAN GET A BIG LAUGH OUT OF ANYTHING CAN'T THEY!
HA, HA! YOU LOOKED SO SCARED....AND SO....WELL JUST SILLY. OH HA, HA, HA!
LISTEN, JO EXPLAIN THIS GAG—IF ANY— TO ME SO WE CAN BOTH LAUGH— LISTEN, KINDLY STOP LAUGHING FOR ONE SECOND AND ANSWER MY— LISTEN—
FELIX DON'T BE AFRAID TO TELL THAT LANDLORD THOSE BUNGLES HAVE KEPT US AWAKE FOR A MONTH.
YES SIR.... THE BUNGLES DOWNSTAIRS....YES SIR, AT IT AGAIN....LISTEN, I'M PUTTING THE PHONE TO THE FLOOR SO YOU CAN HEAR THEM....LISTEN... THEY'RE QUIET NOW BUT... THERE THEY GO... HEAR THEM.... HEAR THAT?

IT'S SO NOISY TODAY! GIGGLES IS FRIGHTENED!
WELL, FOURTH OF JULY COMES ONCE A YEAR AND THERE'S NO SIGN ON THE CALENDAR THAT READS: DO NOT DISTURB!
WE'LL RIDE AS FAR AS WE CAN ON A NICKEL AND THEN WALK IN THE COUNTRY WHERE IT'S QUIET!
QUIET? DON'T THEY KNOW IT'S FOURTH OF JULY IN THE COUNTRY?
LET'S TURN DOWN THIS LANE AND FIND A SHADY TREE! I HAVE TWO HOT DOGS FOR US AND A BOTTLE OF MILK FOR GIGGLES!
GEE, YOU CAN SURE MAKE THIRTY CENTS GO A LONG WAY! HOW MUCH FIREWORKS WOULD THAT BUY?
I WAS WISHING FOR EXCITEMENT AND THAT HORSE MUST HAVE HEARD ME! LOOK AT HIM RUN!
BE CAREFUL! A RUNAWAY HORSE KNOWS NO TRAFFIC RULES!
WHOA, DOBBIN! YOU'RE EXCEEDING THE SPEED LIMIT! YOU'LL GET YOURSELF ALL OUT OF BREATH!
BRAVO! THAT'S THE FIRST HORSE AND BUGGY I'VE SEEN IN YEARS! MUST HAVE ESCAPED FROM A MUSEUM!
LOOK AT HIM DRINK! HEY, LEAVE SOME FOR THE FISH!
THIS GREEN GRASS WILL BE GOOD FOR HIS DIGESTION!
WE'LL DRIVE TO THE NEAREST CONSTABLE AND TURN THE HORSE OVER TO HIM! HE'LL KNOW THE OWNER!
IF IT WASN'T FOR GIGGLES, I'D PUT HIM IN HIGH GEAR AND SEE HOW MANY MILES HE MAKES TO A GALLON OF WATER!
LOOK AT THOSE FARMS, BLACKIE! IMAGINE THE GOOD THINGS THEY HAVE TO EAT! ROAST CHICKENS—FRESH-PICKED VEGETABLES—RICH CREAM!
AND APPLE DUMPLINGS! AND HOT CORNBREAD WITH HONEY! WISH WE HAD SOME INSTEAD OF HOT DOGS!
HE TURNED IN HERE BY HIMSELF! WHAT'LL I DO?
LET HIM HAVE HIS HEAD! HE MUST KNOW WHERE HE'S GOING! THAT'S WHAT THEY CALL HORSE SENSE!
I LOST THE BUTTER AND EGG MONEY, MIRANDY! HAD IT IN THE BUGGY! HORSE GOT SCARED OF FIRECRACKERS AND RAN AWAY!
LOOK, HIRAM! OUT THAT WINDOW! SOME YOUNGSTERS ARE BRINGING THE HORSE AND BUGGY HOME!
FOUND THIS POCKETBOOK ON THE SEAT, MISTER! GUESS THE HORSE BELONGS TO YOU!
BLACKIE RISKED HIS NECK TO STOP THE RUNAWAY! WE'RE GLAD THE HORSE KNEW HIS WAY HOME!
GETTING BACK TO THE SOIL LEAVES A GRAND TASTE IN YOUR MOUTH!
DON'T INTERRUPT WHEN I'M EATING! IT TAKES MY MIND OFF THE FOOD!
THERE'S PLENTY MORE! YOU'RE GOOD CHILDREN! HIRAM WILL DRIVE YOU BACK TO THE STATION AFTER SUPPER!

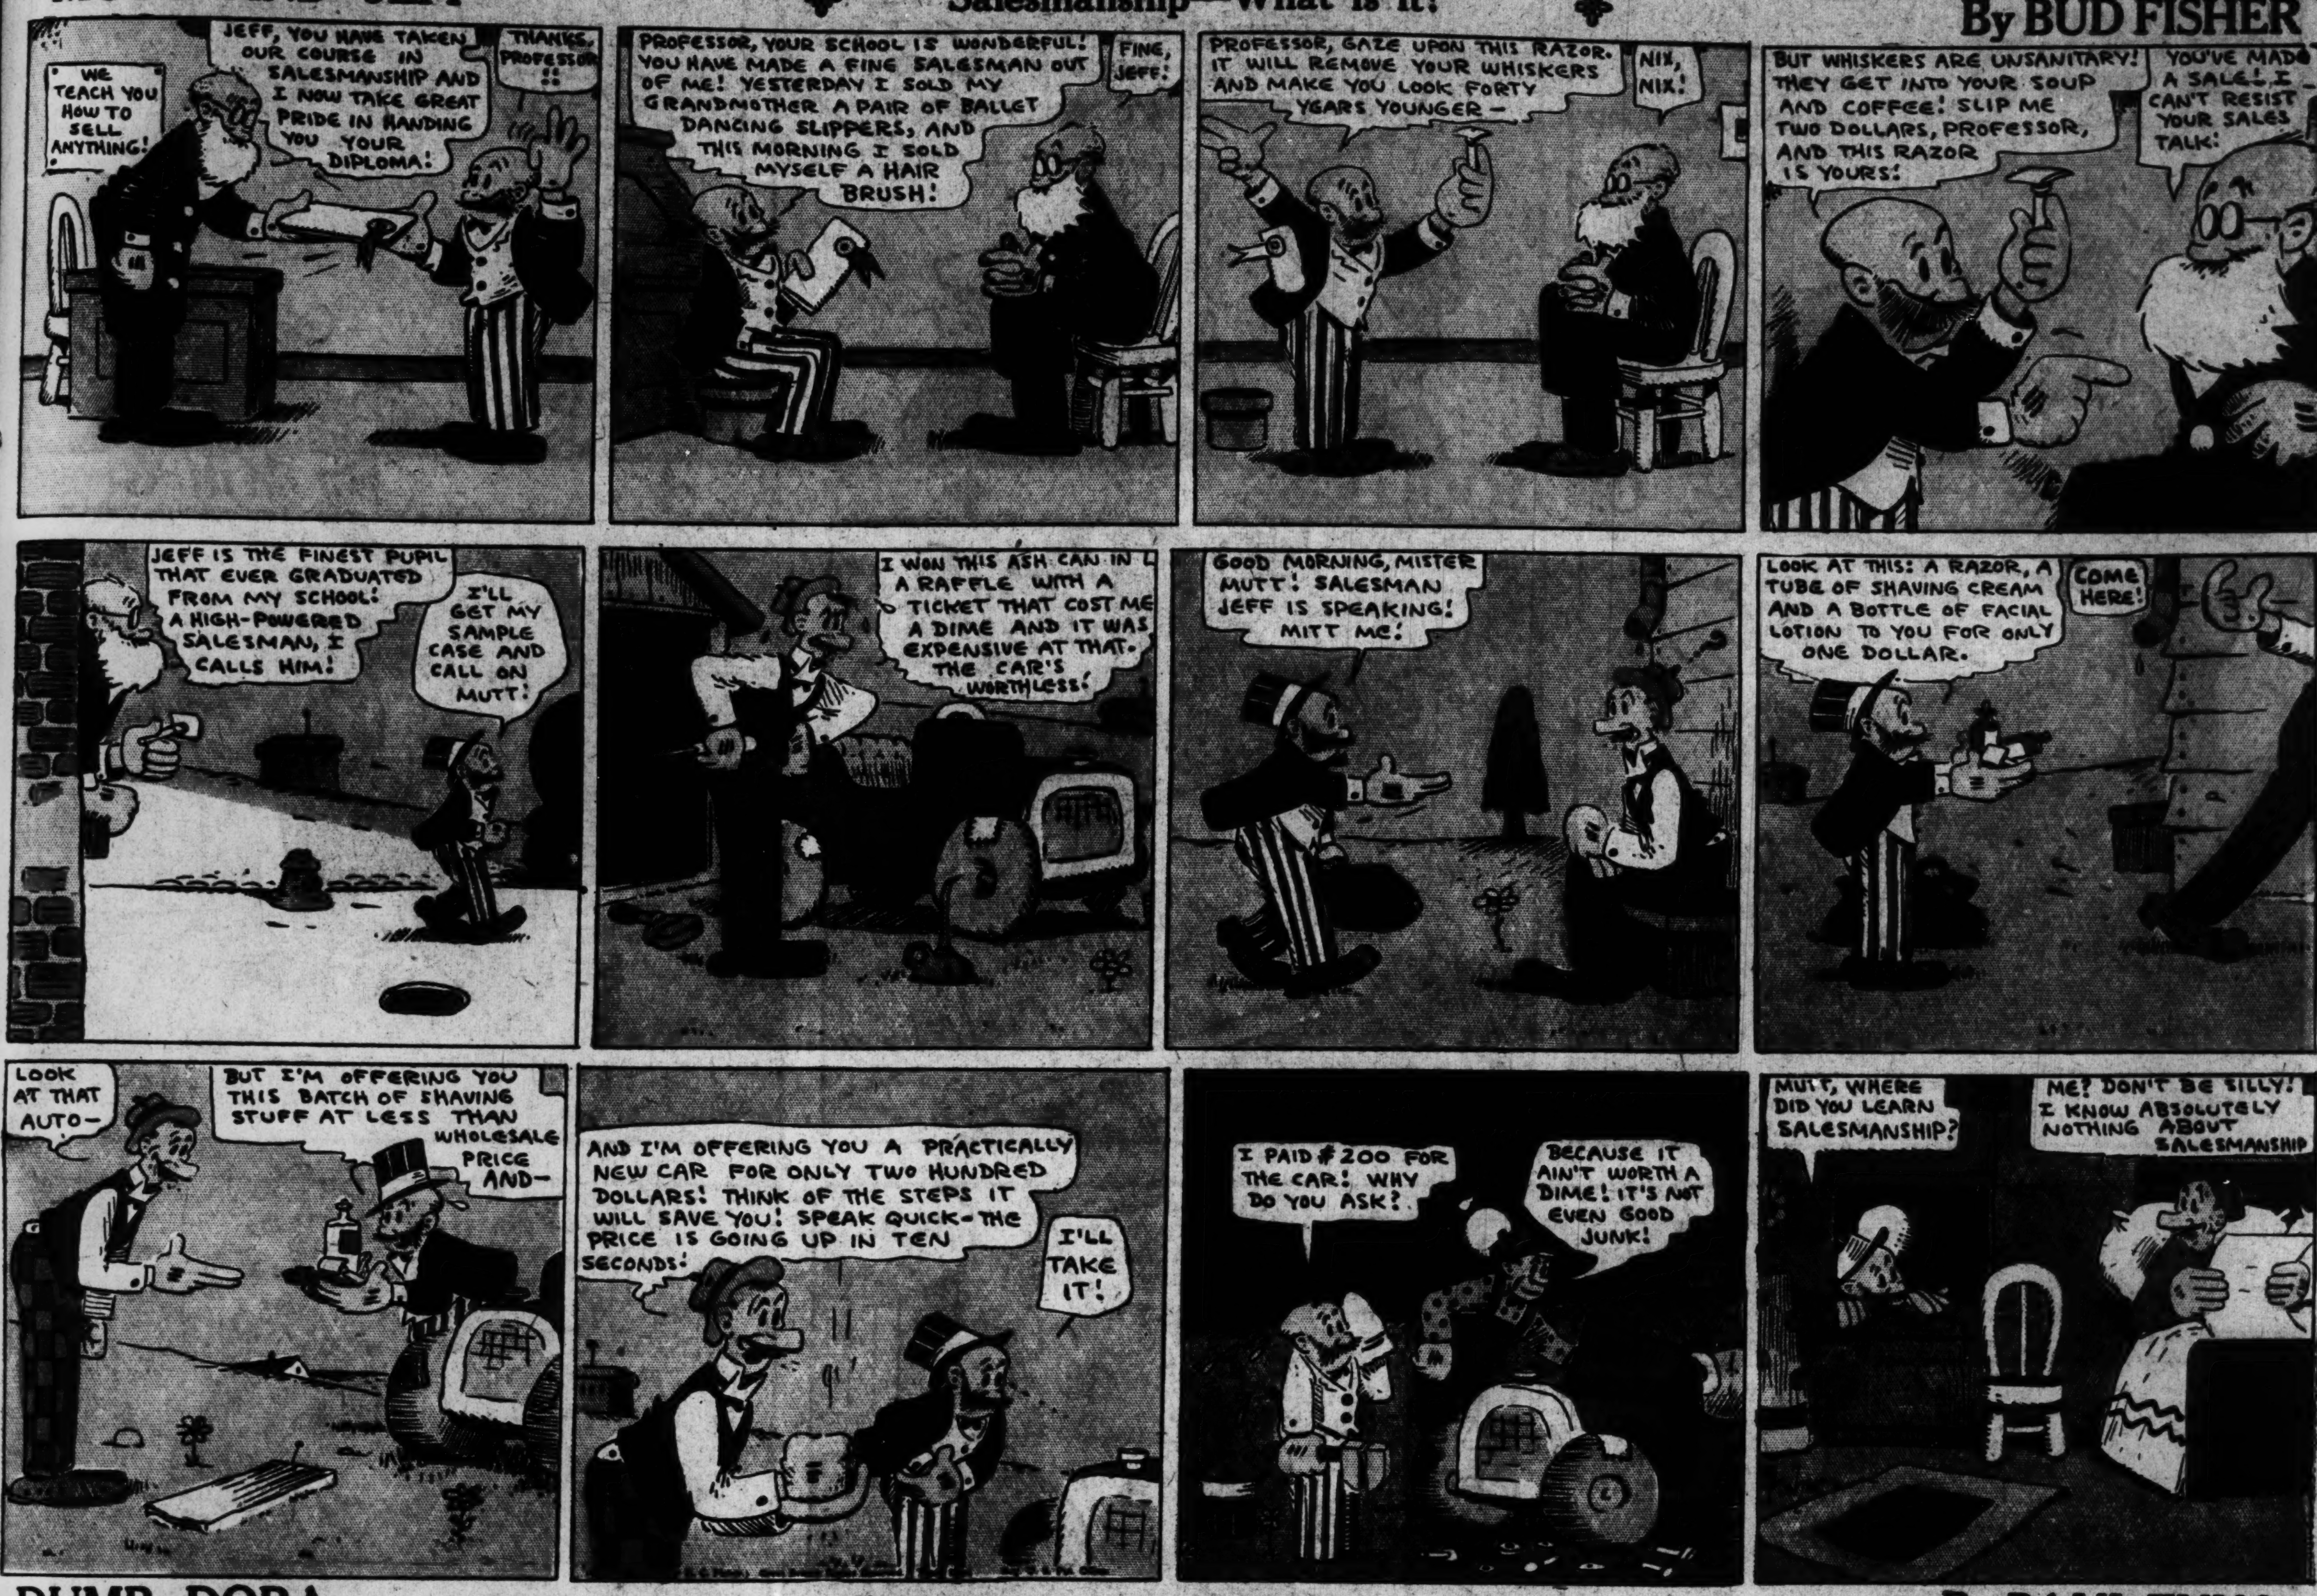
Salesmanship—What Is It?

By BUD FISHER



WE TEACH YOU HOW TO SELL ANYTHING!
JEFF, YOU HAVE TAKEN OUR COURSE IN SALESMANSHIP AND I NOW TAKE GREAT PRIDE IN HANDING YOU YOUR DIPLOMA!
THANKS, PROFESSOR!!
PROFESSOR, YOUR SCHOOL IS WONDERFUL! YOU HAVE MADE A FINE SALESMAN OUT OF ME! YESTERDAY I SOLD MY GRANDMOTHER A PAIR OF BALLET DANCING SLIPPERS, AND THIS MORNING I SOLD MYSELF A HAIR BRUSH!
FINE, JEFF!
PROFESSOR, GAZE UPON THIS RAZOR. IT WILL REMOVE YOUR WHISKERS AND MAKE YOU LOOK FORTY YEARS YOUNGER—
NIX, NIX!
BUT WHISKERS ARE UNSANITARY! THEY GET INTO YOUR SOUP AND COFFEE! SLIP ME TWO DOLLARS, PROFESSOR, AND THIS RAZOR IS YOURS!
YOU'VE MADE A SALE! I CAN'T RESIST YOUR SALES TALK!
JEFF IS THE FINEST PUPIL THAT EVER GRADUATED FROM MY SCHOOL! A HIGH-POWERED SALESMAN, I CALLS HIM!
I'LL GET MY SAMPLE CASE AND CALL ON MUTT!
I WON THIS ASH CAN IN A RAFFLE WITH A TICKET THAT COST ME A DIME AND IT WAS EXPENSIVE AT THAT. THE CAR'S WORTHLESS!
GOOD MORNING, MISTER MUTT! SALESMAN JEFF IS SPEAKING! MITT ME!
LOOK AT THIS: A RAZOR, A TUBE OF SHAVING CREAM AND A BOTTLE OF FACIAL LOTION TO YOU FOR ONLY ONE DOLLAR.
COME HERE!
LOOK AT THAT AUTO—
BUT I'M OFFERING YOU THIS BATCH OF SHAVING STUFF AT LESS THAN WHOLESALE PRICE AND—
AND I'M OFFERING YOU A PRACTICALLY NEW CAR FOR ONLY TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS! THINK OF THE STEPS IT WILL SAVE YOU! SPEAK QUICK—THE PRICE IS GOING UP IN TEN SECONDS!
I'LL TAKE IT!
I PAID $200 FOR THE CAR! WHY DO YOU ASK?
BECAUSE IT AIN'T WORTH A DIME! IT'S NOT EVEN GOOD JUNK!
MUTT, WHERE DID YOU LEARN SALESMANSHIP?
ME? DON'T BE SILLY! I KNOW ABSOLUTELY NOTHING ABOUT SALESMANSHIP
